TOO TERRIBLE FOR TRUTH.—Alexander Vroman, of Durham, N. Y., was committed to the Catskill jail last week, for attempting to poison his wife. He had dug her grave in his cellar, and was engaged in making her coffin, in which he compelled her to assist him. Wanting a board which was in the chamber, he sent her for it, when she escaped to a neighbor's house and entered her complaiut.

☞ There are many and great crimes committed, but it is doubtful whether there are any that equal in enormity that of not taking and paying for a newspaper This is an offence for which there is not the slightest excuse, as the means to avoid it is within reach of all. He who neglects this important duty invites ignorance and degradation, the prolific source of all crime, to his house, and says to his family you shall be hewers of wood and drawers of water to your fellow man, and be the servant of servants all the days of your life.

Patrick Henry vs. Intolerance.

THE POWER OF ORATORY.

Soon after Henry's noted case of 'Tobacco and the Preserves,' as it was called, he heard of a case of oppression for conscience' sake. The English Church having been established by law in Virginia, became, as all such establishments are wont to do, exceedingly intolerant towards other sects. In the prosecution of this system of conversion, three Baptist clergmen had been indicted at Fredricksburg for preaching the Gospel of the Son of God contrary to the statute. Henry hearing of this, rode some fifty miles to volunteer his services in defence of the oppressed. He entered the Court, being unknown to all present, save the bench and the bar, while the indictment was being read by the clerk. He sat within the bar until the reading was finished, and the king's attorney had concluded some remarks in support of the prosecution, when he arose, reached out his hand for the paper and without more ceremony proceeded with the following speech:—

'May it please your worships, I think I heard read by the prosecutor, as I entered this house the paper I now hold in my hand. If I have rightly understood, the king's attorney of the colony has framed an indictment for the purpose of arraigning and punishing by imprisonment, three inoffensive persons before the bar of this court, for a crime of great magnitude—as disturbers of the peace. May it please the court, what did I hear read? Did I hear it distinctly, or was it a mistake of my own? Did I hear an Expression, as of crime, that these men whom your worships are about to try for disdemeanor are charged with—what? and continuing in a low, solemn, heavy voice, 'preaching the Gospel of the Son of God!' Pausing amid the most pofound silence and breathles astonishment, he slowly waved the paper three times around his head, when lifting his hands and eyes to heaven, with peculiar and impressive energy he exclaimed, 'Great God!' The exclamation, the burst of feeling from the audience, were all overpowering. Mr. H. resumed:—

'May it please your worships, in a day like this when truth is about to be aroused to claim its natural and inalienable rights; when the yoke of oppression, that has reached the wilderness of America, and the unnatural alliance of ecclesiastical and civil power, are about to be dissevered, at such a period when liberty, liberty of conscience, is about to wake from her slumberings, and inquire into the reason of such charges as I find exhibited here today in this indictment.' Another fearful pause, while the speaker alternately cast his sharp, piercing eyes on the court and the prisoners and resumed: 'If I am not deceived, according to the contents of the paper I now hold in my hand, these men are accused of preaching the Gospel of the Son of God! Great God!' Another long pause, while he again waved the indictment around his head—while a deeper impreesion was made on the auditory. Resuming his speech:

'May it please your worships, there are periods in the history of man, when corruption and depravity have so long debased the human character, that man sinks under the weight of the oppressor's hand, becomes his servile, abject slave, he licks the hand that smites him, he bows in passive obedience to the mandates of the despot. and in this state of servility, he receives his fetters of perpetual bondage. But, may it please your worships, such a day has passed away! From that period when our fathers left the land of their nativity for settlement in these American wilds for liberty, for civil and religious liberty, for liberty of conscience to worhip their Creator according to their own conceptions of Heaven's revealed will, from the moment they placed their feet upon the American continent, and in the deeply imbedded forest, sought an asylum from persecution and tyranny, from that moment, despotism was crushed, the fetters of darkness were broken and Heaven decreed that man should be free, free to worship God according the bible.

'Were it not for this, in vain were all the sufferings and bloodshed to subjugate this new world, if we, their offspring, must still be oppressed and persecuted. But may it please your worships, permit me to inquire once more, for what are these men about to be tried? This paper says for preaching the gospel of the Savior to Adam's fallen race.' And in tones of thunder, he exclaimed—'What law have they violated?' While the third time, in a low, dignified manner, he lifted his eyes to heaven, and waved the indictment around his head. The court and audience were now wrought up to most intense pitch of excitement. The face of the prosecuting attorney was pallid and ghastly, and he appeared unconscious that his whole frame was agitated with alarm; while the judge, in a tremulous voice, put an end to the scene, now becoming excessively painful, by the authoritative declaration—'Sheriff, discharge those men!'

IDIOCITY.—A careful exploration of one hundered towns, in Massachusets brought to light five hundred and seventy-five cases of idiocy. Of these, four hundred and twenty were idiots from birth, and of this number they obtained information respecting the parents of three hundred and fifty nine. In all but four of these examined cases, it was found that one parent or the other, or both, had in some way departed from the laws of life and health, being either scrofulons, desposed to brain affections, intemperate, grossly sensual, or unnaturally intermarried with blood relations.

Education in America.

What is the enterprise and general prosperity of the americans, says Frazers' (British) Magazine, to be attributed to (their country is not naturally so rich or fruitful as Mexico,) except to their general enlightment? The oldest manufacturers of cotton in the world are the Hindoos; labor with them is cheaper than it is in any other part of the world; yet we take the cotton that grows at the doors of their factories, bring it 13,000 miles to this country, manufacture it here where labor is so expensive, take it back 13,000 miles, and undersell the native manufacturer. Labor is dearer in America than in any part of the world, and yet we dread and fear their competition more than that of any other nation. The reason of this is obvious. All the advantages which the Hindoo possesses are far more than countorbalanced by his intellectual inferiority to ourselves: while we dread the Americans with reason, because he is, intellectually, at least, our equa land considering the general intelligence, and good conduct of the hands he employs, our superior. To what cause, expect that of a decided superiority in captains and crews, can we attribute the fact that the Americans have deprived us of so large a portion of the whale as in a measure to have monopolized it? American clocks, which we now see in almost every hall and cottage, ought to set us thinking. We may be sure of this, the commerce of the world will fall into the hands of those who are most deserving of it. If political or philanthropic considerations should fail to show us the necessity of educating our people, commercial considerations will one day remind us of what we ought to have done. We can only hope that the remainder may not come too late.

BRAVO!—An amusing incident occurred the other evening at the burning of the theatre, related as follows for a fact by a gentleman of respectability, who was an actor in the scene:

Mr. B——, and a party of his jolly English friends who had been dining out, concluded to patronize the opera on that evening, and Mr. B——, whose rotundity was considerably better filled with the sparkle than the rest, had taken a front seat, and was saluting the song and sentiment of the occasion at every "wait," with "unbounded applause," by clapping hands, and vociferating "Bravo!"—"bravo!" bravely.

Presently, like an electric shock came the cry of "fire!" The audience started suddenly for the door—though their retreat was checked to good order by Mr. Rice, the manager, who was on the stage at the time, then ail was confusion and each member ef the company, in endeavoring to save the property, &c., of the profession, was rushing backward and forward in every direction across the stage.

Meanwhile our friends outside had missed their comrade, and thinking perhaps that he might have been injured, one of them stepped up into the boxes just as the fire was bursting through the end of the building in full volumes, and Rice crossing the stage with a side scene on his shoulders. There sat Mr. B., solitary and alone, in the front seat, in perfect extacies at the performance, shouting bravo!—bravo!—a most splendid imitation of a fire!—bravo!—bravo!!—Chicago Journal.

A romantic young lady fell the other day into the river, and was near drowning, but succor being fortunately at hand, she was drawn out senseless and carried home. On coming to, she declared to her family that she must marry him who saved her "Impossible," said her papa. "What, is he already married?" "No," "Wasn't it that interesting young man who lives here in our neighborhood?" "Dear me, no—it was a Newfoundland dog.'

The Mount Holly Mirror, says that a colporteur has during three months visited over 850 families in Burlington County, N. MR. EDITOR: SIR—I understand there are severrl cases of Fever and Ague in our village and neighborhood and I feel it a duty to inform the community through your paper, that having suffered from that most disagreeable complaint for the last twelve months, and tried several medicines without any good result; a friend of mine (Mr. George Scriven 114 Wall-st N. Y.) made me a present of a bottle of Dr. Osgoods Cholagogue which I am happy to say has entirely cured me, and I have no hesitation to pronounce it a most invaluable medicine for that complaint, I therefore cheerfully reccommend it to all those interested. TO MECHANICS, INVENTORS and Manufacturers.

The publishers of the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN respectfully give notice that the VIth Volume of this valuable journal will be commenced on the Twenty first of September next, offering a favorable opportunity for all to subscribe who take an interest in the progress and development of the Mechanics, Arts, and Manufactures of our country. The character of the Scientific American is too well known throughout the country to require a detailed account of the various subjects discussed through its columns.

The aim of the publishers has always been to render it the most thorough and useful scientific journal in the country; and to judge of this, by comparing its circulation and influence with other publications of the same class, they have the unequivocal evidence of its value as the leading exponent of the Arts and Sciencies.

It will be published WEEKLY as heretofore, IN QUARTO FORM on fine paper, affording at the end of the year an ILLUSTRATED ENCYCLOPÆDIA of over FOUR HUNDRED PAGES, with an index, and from FIVE to SIX HUNDRED ORIGINAL ENGRAVINGS described by letters of reference, besides a vast amount of practical information concerning the progress of SCIENTIFIC and MECHANICAL IMPROVEMENTS CHEMISTRY, CIVIL ENGINEERING, MANUFACTURING in its various branches, ARCHITECTURE, MASONRY, BOTANY—in short it embraces the entire range of the Arts and Sciences.

It also possesses an original feature not found in any other weekly journal in the country, viz: an OFFICIAL LIST of PATENT CLAIMS, prepared expressly for its columns at the Patent Office, thus constituting it the "AMERICAN REPERTORY of INVETIONS."

In connection with the publishing department the proprietors transact the most extensive Home and Foreign Patent business done in this country; consequently their facilities must be correspondingly superior.

CHAIN PUMPS.

THE best machine for raising water in use. This Pump has many advantages over any other in use on account of its simplicity of construction, being made wholly of wood and galvanized iron, not liable to get out of order or to get deranged in any way. It can never freeze in winter, and can be put in wells of any depth.

It takes less power to work it than any other machine, to raise the same amount of water.

It is never obstructed by gravel or sand; it keeps the water perfectly sweet and fresh; the action of the chain mixes the gases with the water always keeping it lively and fresh; on ceasing to work it, the water in the tube descends to the level of the water in the well: on commencing to work the pump, the first water that is drawn is from the bottom of the well.

☞ Application can be made to the subscriber or Ephraim W. Briant at P. M. French's store in Plainfield, who will be able to give satisfactory information in relation to said Pump.

BRISTOL'S COMPOUND EXTRACT OF SARSAPRILLA. The value of this great American Specific for all diseases and disorders generated by impure blood, is universally known and appreciated.

TWENTY-FIVE PHYSICIANS,

among the most eminent in this country, have recently signed and caused to be published, a document certifying that BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA was the best preparation of the kind in existence, and that they

USED IT DAILY IN THEIR PRACTICE,

with the happiest effects. Remember that for

MORE THAN TWENTY YEARS

it has been before the public, performing in that time

MILLIONS OF CURES!

During that period multitudes of Sarsaprilla, so called, have been palmed upon the public, but no other has

STOOD THE TEST OF TIME!

Every year has added thousands upon thousands of bottles to its sales. its cures, and the

IMMENSE MASS OF CERTIFICATES

Which, if printed and bonnd would form a library of themselves! The victim of

HEREDITARY SCROFULA

with suppurating glands, honey-combed flesh, and caries eating into his bones, finds in BRISTOL'S SARSAPRILLA a balm for his afflictions. His horrible torments are assuaged and his malady not only relieved, but.

PERMANENTLY CURED!

It may be safely asserted from the results of nearly a quarter of a century's experience, that

BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA,

is beyond all comparison the

MOST WONDERFUL REMEDY ON EARTH

for the following diseases and all others proceeding from.

VITIATED BLOOD.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, Rheumatism, Obstinate Cutaneous Eruptions, Pimples or Pustules on the Face, Blotches, Boils, Chronic Sore Eyes, Ring Worm or Tetter, Scald Head, Enlargement and Pains of the Bones and Joints, Stubborn Ulcers, Syphilitic Symptoms, Sciata or Lumbago, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury.

Let all who wish to purge the blood from the impurities contracted from the free indulgence of the appetite during the winter, and to prepare the system to

RESIST SUMMER EPIDEMICS,

Resort now to

BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA

the gentle aperient, the powerful tonic, the unrivalled antiseptic, and great builder up and

FORTIFIER OF THE SYSTEM!

The record which has been kept since the introduction of Bristol's Sarsaparilla, twenty odd years ago, exhibits an aggregate of known cures which established its invaluable properties. Among the recorded facts are the following, in round tumbers:

There is not space in an advertisement for a full enumeration, but the cures amount to

A GRAND TOTAL OF ONE MILLION.

The public faith in it has never wavered—never can waver: for it is founded on experience, just as their want of faith in other spurious compounds is also founded in experience. They

And are Never Disappointed!

Therefore, however broken in health and spirits, however loathsome to himself and others, let no man despair of recovery. Let the patient only understand that Bristol's Sarsaparilla is an infallible remedy for only persuade him for his own life's sake to try it, and those who know what it has acomplished will have no hesitation in predicting his speedy rostoration to health.

As a means of regulating all the functions of

WOMAN'S DELICATE ORGANIZATION

The undersigned being acquainted with some of the ingredints of HUTCHINGS' VEGETABLE DYSPEPSIA BITTERS, and having used it for some time in his practice with every desired effect, here commends this medicine from the certainty of its effect and gives it a preference over all preparations in medicine for that distressing complaint, Dyspepsia.

T. HARDENBERGH, M. D., No. 1 Beach street N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half; during a greater portion of this time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself until he was recommended to try HUTCHINGS' DYSPEPSIA BITTERS; he very soon derived a benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of HUTCHINGS' BITTERS for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine. L B. WYMAN. 23 Burling Slip.

The following certificate is from M. B. Brady, the celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness. I was advised to take Hutching's Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease, and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia.

M. B. BRADY, No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

NEW MAGNETO ELECTRIC MACHINES,

For medical application.—These instruments possesses a great superiority over all others for medical use, the shocks being obtained entirely from permanent magnets, and the mechanism is so arranged as to cause the current of induced electricity to pass always in one direction. They require no galvanic battery to put them in action and consequently there is no need of acids or other liquids, so objectionable in the other kinds now in use, and they are always ready for immediate application, and are in nowise liable to get out of order. All that is necessary to put the instrument in action is simply to turn a small handle, which could be done by a child.

They are put up in a very portable form, being secured in small neat cases, from which they do not required to be moved.

"It gives me pleasure to certify the value and efficacy of Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL, which I consider peculiarly adapted to cure diseases of the Throat and Lungs."

THE RT.REV. LORD BISHOP FIELD

writes in a letter to his friend, who was fast sinking under an affection of the Lungs:—"Try tbe CHERRY PECTORAL and if any medicine can give you relief, with the blessing of God that will."

CPIEF JUSTICE EUSTIS,

of Louisiana, writes "That a young daughter of his was cured of several severe attacks of Croup by the "CHERRY PECTORAL."

ASTHMA AND BRONCHITIS.

The Canadian Journal of Medical Science states, "That Asthma and Bronchitis so prevalent in this inclement climate, has yielded with surprising rapidity to Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL, and we cannot too strongly recommend this skilful preparation to the Profession and public generally."

Let the relieved sufierer speak for himself:—

HARTFORD, Jan. 26. 1847.

Dr. J. C. Ayer—Dear Sir:—Having been rescued from a painful and dangerous disease by your medicine, gratitude prompts me to send you this acknowledgment, not only in justice to you, but for the information of others in like affliction.

A slight cold upon the lungs, neglected at first became so severe that spitting of blood, a violent cough and profuse night sweats followed and fastened upon me. I became emaciated, could not sleep, was distressed by my cough, and a pain through my chest, and in short had all the alarming symptoms of quick consumption. No medicine seemed at all to reach my case, until I providentially tried your CHERRY PECTORAL, which soon relieved and now has cured me.

Yours with respect. E. A. STEWART.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 17, 1848

Dr. Ayer, Lowell—Dear Sir:—I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form; so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breath on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my Physician prescribed, as an experiment, your CHERRY PECTORAL.

At first it seemed to make me worse, but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

BLAKE'S PATENT

FIRE PROOF PAINT.

THE original and only genuine article, that can be obtained, without subjecting the purchaser to a prosecution for an infringement of my Patent. It has not yet been two year since the first counterfeit, was got up, but in that short time has proved itself, entirely worthless, as will be seen by the statement of more than twenty of the most respectable inhabitants of Sharon Ohio where mine as well as the Counterfeits are made. They say that we have examined recently, a house that was painted, with

Blake's Patent Fire Proof Paint,

SIX YEARS since (as an experiment) and now find the coating as hard as slate or stone. The action of the weather having no effect than to indurate and harden the substance. We will farther state that it has been such a complete failure in all the other kinds of stuff got up, and sold here, called Fire Proof paint (except Blakes) that his only is considered worth useing.

(Signed) Barnabus Crane and 20 others.

Hon. Dauiel Webster has recently examined the patent and at the close of his report says, "I have no doubt whatever, but Mr Blake's Patent is good and valid. [104.

MARRIAGE:

WHY SO OFTEN UNHAPPY.

THE CAUSES AND THE REMEDY!

MANY and many a wife endures years of bodily suffering and of mental anguish, prostrate and helpless, embittering her life, that of her husband, and hazarding the future welfare of her children, arising from causes which, if known, would have spared the suffering, the anguish to the wife, and to the husband embarrassments and pecuniary difficulties having their origin in the mind being weighed down and harassed in consequence of the sickness of the companion of his bosom.

How important that the causes should be known to every wife, to every husband, that the dreadful and harrowing consequences to the health and happiness of both may be avoided! Life is too short and health too precious to admit any portion of the one to be spent without the full enjoyment of the other. The timely possession of a little work entitled as follows has been the means of saving the health and the life of thousands, as over copies have been sold since the first edition was issued.

The author has been induced to advertise it by the urgent and pressing request of those who have been indebted to its publication for all they hold dear (that all may have an opportunity of obtaining it). and who have favored him with thousands of letters of encomium, some of which are annexed to the advertisement.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

Twentieth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, $1.00.

THIS WORK IS INTENDED ESPECIALLY FOR THE MARRIED, or those contemplating marriage, as it discloses important secrets which should be known to them particularly.

Here, every female—the wife, the mother—the one either budding into womanhood, or the one in the decline of years, in whom nature contemplates an important change—can discover the causes, symptoms, and the most efficient remedies and most certain mode of cure, in every complaint to which her sex is subject.

The revelations contained in its pages have proved a blessing to thousands, as the innumerable letters received by the author (which he is permitted by the writers to publish) will attest.

SICKLY AND UNHAPPY WIVES.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Dayton, O.

"DAYTON, May 1, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU—My Dear Sir: 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion,' for which I enclosed one dollar to your address, came safely to hand. I would not have troubled you with these few lines, but that I am impelled by a sense of gratitude, for myself and wife, to give utterance to our sincere and heartfelt emotions.

"My wife has been perceptibly sinking for some three years or more, in consequence of her great anguish and suffering some months before and during confinement; every successive one more and more debilitated and prostrated her, putting her life in imminent danger, and which was, on the last occasion, despaired of. I supposed that this state of things was inevitable, and resigned myself to meet the worst. At this time (now about two months) I heard your book highly spoken of. as containing some matters reaching my case. On its receipt and perusal, I can not express to you the relief it afforded my distressed mind and the joy its pages imparted to my wife, on learning that the great discovery of M. M. Desomeaux provided a remedy. It opened a prospect to me which I little conceived was possible. No pecuniary consideration can ever repay the obligations I am under to you for having been the means of imparting to us the matters contained in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' But for this, ere another year would have passed over my head, in all human probability my wife would have been in her grave, and my children left motherless."

Extract from a Letter.

Competence and Health.

"LANCASTER, PA., Oct. 24, 1847.

"MY DEAR SIR: I know you will have the kindness to bear with me in encroaching upon your time, while I acknowledge (in behalf of myself and wife) the obligations we feel ourselves under to you in having made known certain matters, contained in your most invaluable 'Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' It has been worth its weight in gold to me. If I express myself rather warmly, you will see that I can not do so too warmly, when I inform you of the extent to which I have, through it, been benefited. I will state my situation when I obtained your book through the merest curiosity I look upon it as one of the most fortunate events of my life. I had been married some ten years, and was the father of seven children. I was long struggling unceasingly, to the end that I might gain a moderate competency, but the results of my utmost exertions at the end left me about where I was at the beginning of each year; and that only, with the most stinted economy, sufficing with barely the necessaries of life. Finally, this constant effort was beginning to have its effect upon my health: I felt less capable to endure its continuance, while I felt the necessity of perseverance.

"This constant, unceasing struggle on my part was imperative, in consequence of the prostrated condition of my wife (with occasional intermission) for six years, much of the time confined to her bed, and of course incapable of taking the charge and management of household affairs. Her condition arose from causes of which I was ignorant. Oh! what would I have given had I the six years to live over again! What would my wife have given to have been spared the long days and still longer nights prostrate on a bed of sickness!—all of which would have been avoided, had I then seen a copy of 'THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION.'"

From a Physician.

DANGEROUS DELIVERIES,

OBSTRUCTIONS, IRREGULARITIES, &C.

How many are suffering from obstruction or irregularities peculiar to the female system, which undermine their health, the effects of which they are ignorant, and for which their delicacy forbids seeking medical advice! How many suffer from prolapsus uteri (falling of the womb), or from fluor-albus (weakness, debility, &c., &c)! How many are in constant agony for many months preceding confinement! How many have difficult if not dangerous deliveries, and whose lives are jeoparded during such time, will find in its pages the means of prevention, amelioration, and relief!

Extract from a Letter.

To those just Married.—"Had I known!"

"PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU: Had I known of the im portant matters treated of in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion' some years ago, how much misery I might have escaped! I have suffered years from causes which you point out in your book, without knowing what to do. I obtained a copy, and found my case treated of. I trust every female will avail herself of the information contained in its pages."

Letters are daily received of this character, unnecessary to present.

To those yet unmarried, but contemplating marriage, or perhaps hesitating as to the propriety of incurring the responsibilities attendant upon it, the importance of being possessed of the revelations contained in these pages, so intimately involving their future happiness, can not be appreciated.

It is, of course, impracticable to convey more fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage; neither is it necessary, since it is every one's duty to become possessed of knowledge whereby the sufferings to which a wife, a mother, or a sister, may be subject, can be obviated.

☞ Copies will be sent by Mail free of Postage to the Purchaser.

☞ On the receipt of One Dollar, "THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION" is sent (mailed free) to any part of the United States. Over 20,000 Copies have been sent by MAIL within three months with perfect safety and certainty.

Booksellers and agents engaged in its sale, are making handsome competencies from the ready and extraordinary demand for it, and the extremely liberal terms afforded them.

Active local or travelling Agents, throughout the United States and Canadas, will be supplied on the same terms. Communications are required to be POST-PAID and addressed as above.

☞ CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against various catch-penies intended to be palmed off upon them initiating the title of the work as "The Married LADIES' Medical Companion," and various other titles. Arnica LINIMENT

A CERTAIN CURE FOR RHEUMATISM!

SORE THROAT, BURNS, SCALDS, PAINS IN THE LIMBS, CHEST, SIDE, AND BACK, SPRAINS, BRUISES, CRAMPS, CHILBLAINS, ETC., ETC., ETC.

Price, Twenty-Five Cents.

This newly-invented oleaginous preparation of ARNICA has been, before offering it to the public, satisfactorily tested by several of our most respectable physicians, who were also made acquainted with the ingredients of which it is composed, and the peculiar process of compounding them. So confident is the inventor of its efficacy, that he has authorized every agent—in case it does not prove itself as represented—to take back any part of the bottle and return the full price of it.

The ARNICA LINIMENT will be found more penetrating, and to relieve the most acute pain in less time, than any other external remedy; at the same time it will not irritate the skin or cause it to smart, even if badly broken, as is not unfrequently the case with Burns and Scalds, but will remove the fire and cause the injured part to heal so rapidly as seldom to leave any scar.

Most, if not all, other liniments contain some irritating ingredient, such as pepper, spirits of hartshorn, oil of vitriol, muriatic acid, (spirits of salt,) combined with oil or alcohol, which cause the skin to smart very much, and the second application to be greatly dreaded, particularly by children; and the opinion is generally entertained that the more a liniment causes the flesh to burn and smart, the more good it will do. But this we are convinced is a very great mistake, and results in doing more injury than good: as, for instance, with SPRAINS, BRUISES, BURNS, SCALDS, CHILBLAINS, or any inflammation on or near the surface of the skin. All such exciting embrocations must naturally tend to increase the disease and prolong the cure.

The ARNICA LINIMENT requires neither true nor fictitious testimonials to recommend it, after one trial.

From the National Era.

A Sabbath Scene.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

Scarce had the solemn Sabbath bell
Ceased quivering in the steeple,
Scarce had the parson to his desk
Walked stately through his people.

When down the summer shaded street
A wasted female figure,
With dusky brow and naked feet,
Came rushing wild and eager.

She saw the white spire through the trees,
She heard the sweet hymn swelling;
O, pitying Christ! a refuge give
That poor one in thy dwelling!

Like a scared fawn before the hounds,
Right up the aisle she glided,
While close behind her, whip in hand,
A lank-haired hunter strided.

She raised a keen and bitter cry,
To Heaven and Earth appealing,
Where manhood's generous pulses dead?
Had woman's heart no feeling?

A score of stout hands rose between
The hunter and the flying;
Age clenched his staff, and maiden eyes
Flashed tearful, yet defying.

"Who dares profane this house and day?"
Cried out the angry pastor.
"Why bless your soul, the wench's a slave,
And I'm her lord and master!

I've law and gospel on my side,
And who shall dare refuse me?"
Down came the parson, bowing low,
"My good sir, pray excuse me!

Of course, I know your right divine
To own and work and whip her;
Quick, deacon, throw that Polyglott
Before the wench and trip her!"

Plump dropped the holy tome, and o'er
Its sacred pages stumbling, bound hand and foot, a slave once more
The hapless wretch lay trembling.

I saw the parson tie the knots,
The while his flock addressing,
The Scriptural claims of slavery
With text on text impressing.

"Although," said he, "on Sabbath day
All secular occupations
Are deadly sins, we must fulfil
Our moral obligations:

And this commends itself as one
To every conscience tender;
As Paul sent back Onesimus,
Christian frends, we send her!"

Shriek rose on shriek; the Sabbath air
Her wild cries tore asunder;
I listened, with hushed breath, to hear
God answering with His thunder!

All still!—the very altar's cloth
Had smothered down her shrieking,
And, dumb, she turned from face to face,
For human pity seeking!

I saw her dragged along the aisle,
Her shackles harshly clanking;
I heard the parson over all,
The lord devoutly thanking!

My brain took fire: "Is this," I cried,
"The end of prayer and preaching?
Then down with pulpit, down with priest,
And give us nature's teaching!

Foul shame and scorn be on ye all
Who turn the good to evil,
And steal the Bible from the Lord,
To give it to the Devil!

That garbled text or parchment law,
I own a statute higher,
And God is true, though every book
And every man's a liar!"

Just then I felt the deacon's hand
In wrath my coat-tail seize on;
I heard the priest cry "Infidel!"
The lawyer mutter, Treason!"

I started up—where now were church,
Slave, master, priest, and people?
I only heard the supper-bell,
Instead of clanging steeple.

I woke; and lo the fitting cause
Of all my dream's vagaries—
Two bulky pamphlets, Webster's text
With Stuart's commentaries!

But on the open window's sill,
O'er which the white blooms drifted,
The pages of a good old Book
The wind of summer lifted.

And flower and wine, like angel wings
Around the Holy Mother,
Waved softly there as if God's Truth
And Mercy kissed each other,

And, freely from the cherry bough
Above the casement swinging,
With golden bosom to the sun,
The oriole was singing.

As bird and flower made plain of old
The lessons of the teacher,
So now I heard the written Word
Interpreted by Nature!

For to my ear methought the breeze
Bore freedom's blessed word on;
THUS SAITH THE LORD: BREAK EVERY YOKE
UNDO THE HEAVY BURDEN!

PROFESSOR WEBSTER.—We are assured upon good authority, one who professes to know, that Professor Webster has made another and full confession, in which he admits the premediated murder of Dr. Parkman, thus falsifying his previous statements. This confession is in the hands of the authorities, but will not be made public until after the execution.—Tribune.

The Quaker and Robber.

The most honest of all quakers, Jonathan Simpson, inhabited in London, a small, pretty house, with his daughter, a young girl scarcely eighteen years of age. Mary was a beautiful blonde, with large blue eyes, as wise as she was beautiful. She was constantly surrounded by a host of admirers, anxious to win her heart, but their efforts were in vain. Mary was not a coquette, and far from enjoying the effects produced by her charms, she was often annoyed by it. Edward Weresford, a young artist, intimate in the family, was the only one whose society she really enjoyed.

A very simple occurrence had been the cause of this intimacy. A sudden and unexpected death had carried away the quaker's wife, still young and beautiful, and axious to preserve the image of one so dear to him, he had called the young artist to her death bed. It was there that Edward had seen, for the first time, the young and disconsolate girl, and there their attachment first sprang into life, amidst the tears of the one and heartfelt sympathy of the other. A year had scarcely elapsed, when the young artist made known to the father of Mary his desires and hopes.

The good Jonathan saw no reason to oppose the mutual inclination of the two lovers. Without being rich, Edward, with the aid of his pencil, was amply able to support a family. His father, Mr. Weresford, one of the oldest merchants of the city had retired from business with a large fortune. His was a rare instance of rapid success in speculations, so rapid, indeed, that few had been able to follow its progress. His manners were rough and uncouth and he lived alone in the outskirts of London, without troubling himself about his son; he was one of those peculiar men who trouble nobody, in order not to be troubled themselves, and was tolerably good natured if no favors were reqnired of him.

Edward, sure that his father would readily consent to his marriage with the pretty quakeress, was anxiously awaiting the day that should seal their union.

Jonathan Simpson, who owned large farms in the neighborhood of London, started one morning to collect a large sum of money which he designed for the expenses of the wedding. He was absent only through the day, and as he was returning after dark on horseback, he perceived at a short distance a man standing in the middle of the road, evidently for no good purpose. He stopped, hesitating whether to go on or turn back. In the meantime the man was advancing towards him, and flight seemed impossible; he therefore determined to make the best of it, and go slowly on. As he approached nearer he perceived that the man was masked. The quaker lacked not courage, but naturally calm and inoffensive, and unable to resist an armed man, he drew from his pocket a purse containing twelve guineas, and gave it to the thief, who, counting the money, allowed the traveler to pass and proceeded on his journey. But the robber, seeing the little resistance that had been made and in hopes of a second spoil, soon overtook the honest Jonathan, placed himself across the road, and pointing his pistol at the traveller,

"Your watch!" said he.

The quaker was surprised, but not frightened.—He coolly pulled his watch from his pocket, looked at the time, and handed it to the robber.

"Now," said he, "allow me to go home, I pray thee; my daughter will feel anxious at my absence."

"One minute," replied the thief, more and more emboldened by this coolness, "swear you have no other money."

"I never swear," replied the quaker.

"Well, affirm that you have no other money, and upon my word, as I am incapable of using violence towards a man who yields with so much grace. I will let you go on,"

Jonathan thought a moment and shook his head.

"Whoever thou art," replied he gravely, "thou hast guessed that I am quaker, and that not even for my life would I forsake the truth. Now, I must tell thee, that I have underneath my saddle, two hundred pounds sterling."

"Two hunred pounds!" exclaimed the thief, whose eyes flashed under his mask

"But if thou art good, if thou art human," continued the quaker, "thou wilt leave me this money; my daughter is going to be married, and I will not be able to regain such a sum for a long time. The dear girl loves her betrothed, and it would be cruel to put off their union; thou hast a heart, thou hast loved, perhaps, and canst not commit such a wicked action."

"What the deuce do I care for your daughter her lover, or their marriage? I want the money, and must have it at once."

Jonathan, with a sad heart, lifted the saddle, took a heavy bag from underneath it, gave it to the thief, and started at a gallop.

"Stop a minute, my friend," cried the robber, seizing the bridle. "As soon as you arrive home, you will go straight to denounce me to your magistrates; that is all right, and I have nothing to say to it, but it is important, your know, that I should go ahead of you. My horse is tired and almost worn out; yours on the contrary, seems strong and vigorous and much more able to carry this heavy bag of gold; alight then, I pray thee, and let me go on thy horse; you may take mine afterwards, if you choose."

It was too late to offer any resistance; Jonathan quietly dismounted, saying to himself, with resignation, "If I had known it before, how easily I might have escaped from the rascal; for with such a horse, he could certainly never have overtaken me."

In the mean time, the masked man, thanking him ironically for his kindness, started at full gallop, and soon disappeared.

Before reaching London, the unhappy traveler had time to think of his misfortune, and of the poor lovers, so fond of each other, and whose happiest must unuvoidably be postponed. The money of which he had no means of identifying the robber, should he ever happen to come across him, A sudden idea struck him, however, and he stopped.

"Yes!" he exclaimed, "I may yet succeed. If the rascal stops in London I may perhaps discover him. How could he be so imprudent!"

His spirits thus raised by I know not what hope of success, Jonathan reached home, as if nothing had happened, and whispered not a word of his adventure. He did not go to the magistrate, but kissed his daughter, who suspected nothing, went to bed and slept soundly till morning, trusting in providence for the rest.

The next morning, however, he might perhaps help providence, and began to make inquiries. He took the horse out of the stable where he remained all night, and threw the bridle loose upon its neck, in hopes that it would naturally go straight to its master's house. He allowed the poor animal, who had had nothing to eat, to wander through the streets of London, and he followed after. But soon poor Jonathan gave up all hopes of success, and made up his mind that the robber had never inhabited London.

"What a fool I was," thought he, "not to have complained to the magistrate while it was yet time, instead of trusting to the instinct of this stupid animal!"

He was interrupted in his reflections by the cries of some children who had nearly been run over by the horse The animal was just starting off at full speed.

"Do not stop him—let him go!" cried the quaker.

"For mercy's sake let him go!" and closely following on the track, he saw him enter the gate of a yard attached to a stately mansion in the outskirts of the city.

"He must be here!" thought the quaker, who lifted his eyes towards heaven to thank providence. He passed the house, and perceived in the yard a servant who, patting the horse's neck, was leading him into the stable.

He then inquired of a neighbor the name of the owner of the house.

"That house belongs to the rich merchant, Weresford," was the reply.

The quaker stood amazed.

"Weresford," continued the man, who thought he had not been understood. "Weresford, you must have heard of him—the man who made such an immense and rapid fortune."

"Thank thee, my friend, thank thee," replied Jonathan.

He was stunned with astonishment. "Weresford! Edward's father! A man so generally respected—a thief, a highway robber?"

He thought he was dreaming, and turned back to go home. However several instances of men wealthy and respected, though connected with robbers, came to his mind; he then thought of that immense fortune acquired so unacountably, and again of the horse who seemed to recognise his master's house. Jonathan resolved at once to unravel the mystery. He boldy knocked at the door of the house, and inquired for the merchant. Mr Weresford was not up, although the clock had just struck twelve. This confirmed the quaker's belief. He insisted upon being admitted, and soon found himself in the bedroom of the wealthy merchant, who, scarcely awakened and rubbing his eyes, inquired in a rough tone, "Who are you, and what do you want?"

His voice at once roused the reccollection of Jonathan, and firmly established his suspicions. He quietly took a chair and seated himself by the bedside with his hat on his head.

"You keep your hat on," exclaimed the merchant with apparent surpise.

"I am a quaker," replied Jonathan, calmly, "and thou knowest such is our custom."

At the word "quaker," Weresford raised himself in bed, and stared at the visitor. He knew him without doubt, for he turned pale.

"Well," demanded he, scarcely able to speak, "what may—be—if you please—the—the—errand?"

"I beg thy pardon for being in such a hurry," replied Jonathan, "but among friends ceremony is not necessary, and I came to ask thee for the watch thou didst borrow of me yesterday."

"The—watch!"

"I care a great deal for it; it once belonged to my beloved wife, and I cannot part with it. My brother-in-law, the alderman, would not forgive me if he knew that I parted with it even for a single day."

The name of the alderman seemed to make quick impression upon Weresferd. Without waiting for a reply, Jonathan continued:

"Thou wilt oblige me also by returning the twelve guineas which I lent thee at the same time. However, if thou dost need them for a few days, thou mayest keep them, but thou must give me a receipt."

The coolness of the quaker abashed the merchant so that he dared not deny the possession of the stolen property, but still unwilling to own it, he hesitated how to reply, when Jonathan continued;

"I have come also to inform you of the marriage of my daughter Mary. I had received a sum of two hundred pounds sterling for the expenses of the occasion, but a sad accident happened to me yesterday upon the road to London. I was completely stripped, so that I must ask thee to give thy son a portion, which, had it not been for this, I should never have asked of thee."

"My son!"

"Why, yes. Dost thou not know that he is in love with Mary, and that he is to marry her?"

"Edward!" exclaimed the merchant, jumping out of bed.

"Edward Weresford," quietly replied the quaker. "I wish I could keep away from him all that happened last night, but if thou refusest me the sum which I had promised, I will be compelled to tell him how I lost it."

Weresford advanced towards a closet, took out a box doubly locked, opened, and handed successively to Johnathan his watch, his purse, and his bag of money.

"Very well," said the quaker, "I see that I was right to rely upon thee."

"Is that all you want?" inquired the merchant roughly.

"No, I expect something more of thy friendship."

"Speak!"

"Thou wilt disinherit thy son.

"What?"

"Thou wilt disinherit him; I do not wish to have it said that I speculated upon thy fortune," and saying these words, Jonathan Simpson went out of the room.

"No," whispered he, when he found himself alone, "no, children are not responsible for the faults of their parents. Mary shall marry the son of this man, but touch his money, never!"

In passing through the yard, he perceived Weresford at one of the windows, and exclaimed, "Hallo! friend; I brought back thy horse; return me mine if thou pleasest."

"A few minutes after, Jonathan, well mounted, carrying behind him his long bag of money, his watch and purse in his pocket, was trotting slowly home.

"I have just been making a wedding call on thy father," said he to Edward, whom he found at his house. "I think we will agree."

Two hours after, Weresford arrived at the house of Jonathan, and taking him aside,

"Honest quaker," said he "your conduct has touched my very soul. It was in your power to dishonor me, to dishonor my son, to ruin me in estimation, and to refuse him your daughter. You have acted nobly; I am humbled before you. Take these papers. Adieu; you will never see me again."—Saying this he departed.

The quaker being left alone, opened the papers, and found among them drafts of considerable value against the first banking houses in London. They contained, also, a long list of names, with sums of different value affixed to each, and ending with these lines:

"These names are those of people who have been robbed, together with the amount which is to be returned to them; draw the money and return it accordingly to the right owners. Whatever may be left is my legitimate property, and your daughter may one day accept, without blushing, my inheritance."

The next day Weresford had left London, and never was heard of afterwards.

On the day of Edward and Mary's marriage, the quaker invited a large number of merry friends, amoug whom many could be heard loudly praising the liberality of the London robber, who had remitted to them, throuhg the hands of Jonathan, their lost capital and the interest.

Farming on Twenty-one Acres of Land.

Messrs Editors—Many of the cultivators of the soil, who occupy large possessions, do not realize the amount of labor that can be profitably employed in cultivation; and few farm laborers are aware how small a piece of ground will afford full employment to an industrious man, and yield himself and family the comforts of life and make them an independent home.

In illustration of these facts, I will give an account of farmer B. His farm consists of twenty-one acres; one acre of it is occupied with buildings, yards and garden, and twenty acres are for cultivation—all made productive by thorough draining and bountiful manuring. A good substantial fence is all around it, but no division fences. He has 57 rods of patent, portable fence, which is easily removed, with which he encloses one-fourth of the ground for pasture.

The farm is divided into four equal parts—5 acres in each part. First season, No 1 is in grass, clover and timothy, for pasture; No 2 in hoed crops—one acre in wurtzels, one in potatoes, and three in corn; No 3 in barley; and No 4 in wheat. With these crops he keeps a regular rotation each year. The second season, No 1 is manured in the fall with all the manure he has collected the past year, and plowed for the next season's hoed crops; No 2 is ploughed in the fall for barley the next spring; No 3 (barley stubble) is sown with timothy and clover for the next season's pasture—which rotation he uniformly pursues.

He keeps a yoke of oxen, two cows, twenty good ewes, and a breeding sow; for which five acres of fresh clover on a rich soil will afford plenty of pasture provided that he does not turn into it too soon in the spring. The wheat and barley straw, corn stalks and roots, will be ample for them all winter. He is industrious, economical and prudent. Everything is done well and in season. The ground is kept clean no weeds being allowed to grow, not even around the fence; it is made rich by plentiful applications of manure, which renders it very productive. His wheat averages 30 bushels per acre. It will take twenty-four bushels to bread the family the year, (which consists of himself, wife, and four little ones,) and will take 7 bushels for seed, which will leave 119 to sell; this at $1 per bushel, $119. His barley yields 40 bushels per acre; it will take 5 of it for seed, and 192 bushels to market, at 50 cents per bushel, will bring $96. The corn averages 60 bushels per acre; the three acres produce 180 bushels; it will take 80 bushels to feed the pigs, fat the pork and use in the family, (for they eat Johnny cake and mush,) which leaves him 100 bushels to market, at 50 cents per bushel is $50. The potatoes and beets are all used at home. The wool of the 20 ewes, averaging $1 per fleece, will be $20. They raise 20 lambs, which he sells in July or August for $20.—By taking the lambs from the ewes early, the latter will get fat by fall, 16 of them are sold for $30, with which he purchases 20 ewes for the next season's keeping—and he has five fat sheep left for the use of the family. The sow has six pigs the last of March or early in April; five of them, with the sow, are fatted, and a young sow kept for pigs next spring. The 5 pigs and old sow, when fattened, will make 1100 lbs of pork, 500 will do for the family, with the five fat sheep, and leave him 600 lbs to sell, which at 5cts. a pound is $30. The two calves are fattened and sold for $5. This makes $340 worth sold from the produce of the 20 acres, and the family have had their farm living the past year. It may be thought that this calculation is too large for an average production, but I assure that if the operator is industrious economical and judicious, he will seldom fall short of the quantity stated. But it is asked, how can an industrious man be constantly employed on 20 acres of ground cultivated for farm purposes? Look at it. His ground for spring crops is all ploughed in the fall. On the first of April he commences operations for the season. He first sows the grass seed on the wheat; 10cwt. of plaster on the ground for hord crops; and as soon as the ground is sufficiently dry, he harrows and cross-harrows until it is thoroughly pulverized, and the nearer it can be made to a garden tilth the better.

But if he is ahead of the season with his work he can always have full employment in making the manure heap. He collects every thing that will make manure that his time and means will permit; he puts on at least one ton of plaster at different times. Leached ashes, swamp muck, marl, dirty salt, and rine, are old ball collected and mixed with the barn yard dung, so as to increase the manure heap to at least 200 loads.

The ground being in good order and the season favorable, he commences planting the first of May and takes time and does it well—for there is more lost by careless planting than would pay for four times the labor of doing it well. He first plants the wurtzel then the potatoes and corn. Planting done the wheat is to be weeded; and as soon as the wurtzels are up he begins hoeing, which affords him employment until the first, and perhaps the fifth of July. He then has some leisure, and assists a neighbor in haying to procure help in hauling in the grain.

He commences harvest as soon as the grain will answer, and barley will do to cut pretty green. If it is not sufficiently dry to bind, let it lie two or three days in swarth. Harvest begun, he may work as faithfully as he pleases until the grain is all secured. That done he harrows, cultivates or ploughs shallow the barley stubble, so as to pulverise it thoroughly four inches deep, and sows on it half a ton of plaster. The corn is now ready to cut up; that done he ploughs the barley stubble deep and well, and sows the wheat. The summer crops are now ready to gather, which employs him awhile. When all is secured, he takes on the manure spreads it evenly over the surface and ploughs it under.—The hoed ground is also to be ploughed for parley next spring, which keeps him busy until it is time to prepare for winter.

In winter he takes good care of his stock, threshes the grain, and provides fuel—having none on his farm. The orchard is planted by the fence around the farm and door yard.

Now, my young friends, be industrious and saving, and you will soon be able to purchase 21 acres of land.

☞ Reader, do you take a newspaper? If not you certainly do not consult your own interest, and if you have a family, by taking one a short time only, you will certainly be convinced that you have sadly neglected theirs. If you do take one, you undoubtedly know their value, and we are convinced that after perusing ours you will find yourself uneasy and be dissatisfied with yourself until you subscribe for it. As it is published every Thursday, it makes it very convenient for those who live at a distance, and who visit Plainfield on that day for tailor work, or on other business, to accommodate themselves with it. Certainly where a paper can be had for the trifling sum of ten shilling a year, none should fail to avail themselves of the opportunity. Every man of intelligence and reflection, every prosperous farmer and business man, will tell you that in no possible way can you more judiciously and beneficially expend ten shillings than in paying for the Plainfield Gazette.

☞ The new State Constitution of Michigan, which has yet to be approved in November by the people, makes the judiciary elective, provides for home exemption, submits the question of negro suffrage to the people, admits Indians as citizens, provides for eight circuits with one judge elected in each, every county of 10,000 inhabitants to have four terms of court a year, Supreme Court to meet four times a year and establishes free common schools, to be kept open three months in the year.

No Time to Read.—How often do we hear men excuse themselves from subscribing to a paper or periodical, by saying they have no time to read!—When we hear a man thus excuse himself, we conclude he has never found time to confer any substantial advantages either upon his family, his country, or himself. To hear a freman thus express himself. is truly humiliating, and we can form no other opinion than that such a man is of little importance to society.

San Francisco. The growth of this city is without a paralell. No person can realise it, without viewing it from an eminence, and thus behold at a glance its thousands. Two years ago, and there were not a dozen houses throughout its whole length and breadth.—Now, you can count over two thousand dwelling houses and stores, and a permanent population of at least 25,000 souls, and during the winter month's half as many more. Thrice has this city suffered by disastrous fires within six months past: and yet the whole will be re-built in a better, more enduring, and substantial manner, within 60 days. Over 500 ships are now riding safely at anchorage in this harbor, laden with the products of every clime and nation. One year ago, scarce a cart, wagon or vehicle of any kind could be found. Now there are 100 licensed carmen, to say nothing of carriages, etc.

Political and Religious Freedom—No 2.

The great question of man's political and religious freedom which is agitating the world at large, and which this nation is so especially interested in, have been to us, as undoubtedly they have been to our readers in common with the people throughout the country, subjects of deep interest and anxious watchfulness. Never, perhaps, since the formation of our government, has so important a crisis arisen. Not only for our own country and for the present, but for the world and all future time, is the question now to be determined, of the inalienable right of all men to liberty and equal rights. We have watched the political horizon with intense interest and scanned all the various phenomena that have flitted across it with deep solicitude, knowing that our all—that the inalienable rights of our race to life, liberty, to pursue happiness and to worship God according to the dictates of their consciences, in accordance with the equal rights of their brethren—are depending upon their just appreciation, correct understanding, and the consequent correct disposition of them. We have freely discussed the various questions as they have arisen, with the freedom which we conceived their importance to demand. This we shall continue to do so long as we publish a paper, believing that their free discussion is demanded of us, and of all others whose position gives them influence, as the only course calculated to arrive at a correct conclusion as to their merits; this is our duty as faithful guardians of that liberty, transmitted to us by our forefathers as the inalienable gift to all men of their and our God.

As all are, or should be, acquainted with the history of our government, we will come directly to the subject matter of it, to the eternal principles of truth and justice and consequent equality of rights upon which it is founded.

To say, that because a property in slaves was conceded in the formation of this government, in the adoption of the constitution, that therefore it should be forever guarantied and protected is most preposterously absurd. For what, was the Declaration of Independence, containing the fundamental principles of liberty, adopted, and proclaimed to the world? Was it, that it should be made a mockery of—that kings, priests and a priviliged aristocracy might point to to prove from our non observance of its principles, their pretensions to a divine right? Most holy consistency! Most wise and farseeing and consistent patriots were our forefathers if this is what they sought? They fought, and died, with an appeal to heaven of the sincerity of their intentions to fulfil its declarations, on their lips, that they fought for liberty, for man's inalienable rights, yet that man might be irrevocably doomed to perpetual bondage, did they? Great God! who dare charge that the immortal signers of that instrument, that an Adams, a Gerry, a Hopkins, a Sherman, a Stockton, a Morris, a Rodney, a Harrison, a Hancock, pledged their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor, and that the immortal Washington and his compatriots fought that mankind might be doomed to eternal bodage? Away with such slanderous imputations on their revered memories, and on the sacred manes of those, their companions, whose martyrdom in the cause of liberty has set the world on fire, and whose deaths and whose lives so triumphantly and so gloriously refutes the foul slander.

The full grown blaze of liberty, of liberty for all men, which has spread abroad, kindled by that spark, the Declaration of Independence, can never, thanks be to the indomitable perseverance of its immortal signers, protectors and defenders, never be quenched until every soul on God's footstool enjoys its inestimable blessings.

We might leave this subject to the reflection of our readers, without comment, and let them pass judgment upon its general merits; but duty to ourselves and to the public compels us to say that there are many, who by their words and their acts cast this reproach, this unutterable disgrace upon the revered names to which we have alluded. We regret to say that there are many, indeed that the party once proudly claiming to be guided by pure democratic principles, are in danger of loosing sight of these their great landmarks and fundamental basis, through the corruption of party leaders and the ambition of their chiefs. We trust they will see the necessity of reform, and that a return back to the first and fundamental principles of democracy can alone save them.

Directly bearing upon and intimately connected with this subject, being the legitimate offspring with slavery of feudal privileges and divine rights, is that of special privileges. There has ever been a class in all ages of the world, and we regret to say that they still exist in our country, and especially in the State of New Jersey, whose utmost exertions are made to defeat the full enfranchisement of man, and the progress of liberal and enlightened principles. They claim to have a patent right of exemption to the condition annexed to their creation and existence—"to subdue and cultivate the earth,"—and that it is the especial duty of others to subdue and cultivate it for them. This class are totally opposed to all legislation which would in the remotest degree tend to alienate their pretended claims. Hence the difficulty of those who comply with the conditions of their existence—the producing classes, those who subdue and cultivate the earth—have to contend against in their exertions to procure their own and their fellow man's rights,

From the commencement of this goverment until the year 1844 we lived under a charter of the British king; which as a matter of course entailed the perogatives of the king, lords and priests, which they pretended to claim by the grace of an impartial and just God—being his vicegerents on earth! Against these pretensions the people of New Jersey have long struggled. Again and again have they been promised their just boon,—their equal rights, guarantied by just and equal laws; again and again have they been deceived by their enemies, by their assumption of sympathy and apparent honesty and zeal in the cause of reform.

Although the great mass of the people, of both political parties, have strove to bring about a more liberal and enlightened, just and equal system, the machinations of the privileged class have hitherto prevented it, it is but little they have been able to accomplish.

A regard to truth, and a desire to promote the best interest of the people, with which we consider our own closely, intimately, indissolubly connected, requires us to say, that this has been the general policy of the Whig party, indeed they have boldly put it upon record, brazingly claiming the divine right to be your lords and masters, thus hoping to confound you with the audacity of their pretentions.

If the reader will glance over the history of the past, and especially in regard to special and exclusive priveleges, both national and state, he will be at no loss to identify the principles with their authors and the parties to which they belong. We have not space had we time to go into details, we will therefore merely alluded to the more prominent. All will recollect the tenacity with which the leaders—we must here except their honest but deluded followers, who now see how they opposed their own best interests—of the Whig party, adhered to that monster privilege a United State Bank, and to its legitimate offspring an irresponsible credit system growing out of a special chartered bank system; all will likewise recollect their grand scheme of a high tariff protection to lordly manufactures, and the beautiful opportunity this collecting and disbursing of the surplus revenue back again among the people who paid it, gave to the office holders—the great sticklers for special privileges—to pocket this one of the most important of their divine rights. To the incorruptible patriot Jackson and to his indomitable perseverence in the cause of freedom and to the determination and perseverence of the people for equal rights are we indebted for the barely timely death of this monster, and also for its equally delusive coadjutor a protective tariff. From them the danger is past; and notwithstanding the bold predictions and confidant assertions to the contrary, the accelerating increasing prosperity of our country, in all that makes a nation truly great or happy, since their deaths, conclusively prove their folly and their worse than uselessness, their danger to our liberties.

In conclusion we will glance at the history of our state affairs. As before observed, up to 1844 we lived under and were governed by the charter of the British king. This charter as a matter of course did not recognise, only to a privileged class, man's right to participate in the choice of his rulers or the enactment of the laws by which he is governed. It is a matter of history that the whigs as a party—we are happy to acknowledge that there were and are many honorable exceptions who did what they could to abolish such invidious and anti-republican distinctions, and whose republican principles we trust will urge them to assist in their total overthrow,—were satisfied with this charter, and were —opposers in many instances by the more cunning, covertly—the present Constitution. Their conduct since its adoption has been in accordance with their previous history—the opposers of liberal, enlightened, general, just and equal laws—the enactors of special, unequal and illiberal laws, granting special and exclusive privileges to those who would colleague with them to keep them in power. The proof of this is in their passing by a whig legislature in 1846 the law requiring a property qualification, or its re enactment at that period. It is again confirmed by a whig legislature in 1850.—The vote upon repealing this odius and unjust law stood as follows:—

Ayes and Noes upon the bill to abolish Free hold Qualification in New Jersey.

Ayes—Braddock, Butcher, Buzby, Carpenter, Fritz, Hageman, Hineline, Hooper, Hopper, Hornbeck, Hoxey, Hurf, Huyler, Loller, Marlow, Newell, Nixon, Opdyke, Phillips, Price, Ribble, Remsted, Risley, Sithens, Tinsman, Walling—26.

Noes—☞ Abraham, Brown, Cobb, Condit, Cor-☞iell, Day, Doty, Duell, Emley, French, Gas-☞kill, Kanouse, Meeker, Pierson, Stockton, ☞ Thomson, Vandyke, Van Wagoner, Wade, ☞ Wood, Wyckoff—21—all whigs in the negative.

A two-third vote being required its repeal was lost.

Thus it will be seen that the Whigs as a party are opposed to equal rights; they prefered the charter of king James because it required a property qualification as the basis of man's rights; they still cling to it with a tenacity worthy of a better cause. Of course the people will not trust them again until this stigma upon the principles of republicanism is done away, by its erasure from the statute book. This uniformity of opposition to liberal and enlightened legislation on the part of the Whigs can only proceed from a want of sympathy to the cause. It is therefore preposterous on their part to re assert what they have so uniformly repudiated. The people will not because they cannot believe them, they of course will elect men who have ever been known to be in favor of equal rights through the enactment of just and equal laws Remodel and Reform of the County Prison.—The Committee, (S. G. Gould, Chairman,) appointed by the Freeholders of this County, at their last meeting, to carry out the plans of the Board in relation to the remodeling and reforming the county Prison, had a meeting yesterday at the Clerks office, attended by N. H. Morgan, Esq., late the efficient superintendant of the Hartford (Ct.) County Prison. They resolved to proceed forthwith with the contemplated change, the erection of workshops within the present building, the addition of a wing for females and other arrangements, adapting it to the plan of having the prisoners work. The contract for the whole was taken by responsible persons for the sum limited by the Board, $7,200) to be completed by the 1st December next, under the superintendence of Mr. Morgan.—Daily Adv.

Virginia—Convention Election.—Our returns are still meager and partial, as the election did not close till Saturday night, but they leave no room for doubt that the friends of radically reformed constitutiou have swept the state. Old party lines were ganerally disregarded, as was right, and nobody knows nor cares how many of the delegates are called whig or call themselves democrats. Enough that Virginia awakes from her slumber of half a century, resolved to have truly republican constitution She thinks she has talked democracy long enough to begin to act it. Not a bad idea.

Thomas H. Benton.

It now appears that the defeat of Senator Benton, in his own state, is quite certain. But when we reflect that Mr. Benton has so manfully, shown himself willing to suffer a political defeat for that glorious satisfaction which must ever be the reward of philanthropist, we politically extend to him our heart and hand. To Thomas H Benton; who has, amid the buffetting storms of political opposition, so nobly held forth in the strength and fortitude of an honest heart.

It was said, before California was admitted, "had Senator Benton voted for the Compromise Bill, and got his friends to do so, California would now be a state and his son-in-law in the Senate." This was no doubt the truth; but if Mr Benton has, in battling with the Compromise Bill, acted the part of a disunionist, (?) he did it in view of that glorious sentiment, the language of which is, "give us disunion—break every tie that binds our glorious union—separate the North from the South: if it be necessary in ordor to sever those chains which threaten to menacle the limbs of our fellow men: for sooner than bask in the sunshine of political favor at the sacrafice of my better feelings for the welfare of my fellow creatures, I am prepared to receive the darts of my political enemies, counting it joy to suffer for humanity's sake."

Mr. Benton has, instead of sacrificing to his own pecuneiar interest, nobly and fearlessly stood up in opposite the monster Compromise Bill, and its misanthropic advocate; (Henry Clay;) and we now have the pleasure of reflecting, that, contrary to the wishes of "Sage of Ashland," the Compromise Bill has, by the masterly strokes of "Old Bullion," trembled, totterd, and fell; and has, we hope, buried beneath its ruins, many of those man-hating sentiments, which allow the riveting on of the chains and shackles of Slavery.

If Thomas H. Benton is doomed to suffer a political defeat, for the noble stand he has taken for the good of others he will ever hold a place in the heart of the true philanthropist; and his name will blaze forth on the page of history, as the representative of a nation's glory, and a lasting monument to its political greatness.

Spirit of the Press.

The "Tribune" is opposed to the Pearce Bill, and says.—

"But when you ask us to give Texas Ten Millions and 25,000 square miles more of Territory than the Compromise gave her, we feel crowded quite too far; and especially while she is holding an Extra Session and calling out Mounted Regiments to take Santa Fe by force from the United States, we feel like holding up and seeing this bluster of rebellion through before we pay the first dollar. If Texas say fight, why fight it must be; and and see how that operates. Let no member of Conguess give a vote on this question that he is not fully prepared to justify to his conscience and his constituents."

The Tribune also treats of the departure of Mr. McKennan, as a positive resignation,—an announcement which we think somewhat premature. The Tribune would like to see T. Butler King of Ga., A. F. Hopkins of Ala., J. L. Pettigrew, of S. C., or any other true Union man of the South called to the vacancy.

The "Courrier" dwells upon the flagitiousness of the course of Texas, which may soon find itself engaged in actual hostility with the Federal Government. It presumes that the Executive will maintain the present boundaries between Texas and New Mexico, and in case the House bill passes it may be necessary it says to maintain that line.

The "Journal of Commerce declares the plan of establishing a line of steamers to Africa, admirable and worthy of the great American Republic.

The "Southern Press," at Washington predicts, with confidence that immediately upon the admission of California into the Union, "the Governor of Georgia will issue his proclamation; that the delegates will be chosen, that her convention will be holden, and that her convention will see in sesession, the only remedy left her, and will adopt it!" The "Augustan Chronicle;" which may be supposed to be quite as well informed, assures the writer that if he supposes the people of Georgia to be equally fanatical and deluded with himself," he is very much mistaken. It adds these emphatic word:—

"If California be admitted, and Governor Towns, in his quixotic zeal to acquire a little notoriety, calls a convention and orders an election as contemplated by the law of the last Legislature, the people will take the matter into their own hands and will teach Gov. Town weak and puerile as she is, the demagogues of the last Legislature, and all sectional ultraists, that they know the value of this Union and will preserve it, whether the people of California adopt or reject slavery."

Harrisburg. August 24.

The court, which was occupied during yesterday hearing testimony on the habeas corpus of the negroes charged with stealing horses in Virginia, rendered their decision this morning. It appears the negroes were slaves and had stolen horses to escape with. The court decided that the slave who steals a horse to escape with commits no crime—no criminal offence. The prisoners were thereupon ordered to be discharged.

Further accounts state, that ten free negroes have been arrested for inciting to riot, and that the owners of slaves and other persons engaged in securing them after their discharge by the Court, are now before the Court on a writ of habeas copus. The crowd before the prison were dispersed by the military, called out under General Sailer.

Portland, August 24.

The gravel train on the Kenebec and Portland railroad was thrown from the track this mornining in Cumberland, killing four Irishman and severely injuring several others—some so badly as to be no hopes of their recovery The accident was caused by timber and stone being maliciously placed upon the track by some person unknown.

Montreal, August 24.

A dreadful fire occurrred here last night in the St. Lawrence suburbs. Several acres of ground are in ruins,—from one hundred to one hundred and twenty-five houses have been destroyed. Loss is $120,000.

Population.—Census returns are beginning to come in. We note the following:

Buffalo,	29,000	50,000
Bridgeport,	3,294	6,080

☞ A paper is being circulated in Boston to raise the sum of $20,000 to be given to the wife and children of Dr. Webster, to place them above want during life. Mrs. Parkman, it is said, heads the list with $500.

☞ Prospects of Jersey City.—The Telegraph says that the population of this place is about 7000 and ingreasing, at the rate of 15 per cent per annum. In 1802 Major Hunt and family, John Murphy and wife, and Joseph Bryant constituted the whole number of inhabitants, occupying one house and its outhouses. In 1829 Rev. Dr. Barry took a census of the place, and found it to contain 1,025 inhabitants In 1834 the population was 1,500; 1840, 3,033; 1850 about 7,000. Van Vors township now numbers about 5,000. The population of the two places—in effect the same, as they doubtless soon will be in fact—is, therefore 12,000.

Jews in the United States.—There are, it is supposed, 50,000 Jews in the United States, mostly in the large cities. In New York they have ten synagogues. One is about to be erected in Syracuse.

Mrs. Partington says, nothing despises her so much as to see people who profess to expect salvation, go to church without their purse when a reccollection is to be taken.

Bishop Onderdonk.—Rumor says that this prelate will, at the next convocation of the fathers of the Church, offer his resignation and indicate his preference for a successor.

MR. EDITOR: SIR—I understand there are severrl cases of Fever and Ague in our village and neighborhood and I feel it a duty to inform the community through your paper, that having suffered from that most disagreeable complaint for the last twelve months, and tried several medicines without any good result; a friend of mine (Mr. George Scriven 114 Wall-st N. Y.) made me a present of a bottle of Dr. Osgoods Cholagogue which I am happy to say has entirely cured me, and I have no hesitation to pronounce it a most invaluable medicine for that complaint, I therefore cheerfully reccommend it to all those interested. GEORGE W. F. RANDOLPH.
Plainfield, Aug. 1850.

TO MECHANICS, INVENTORS and Manufacturers.

The publishers of the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN respectfully give notice that the VIth Volume of this valuable journal will be commenced on the Twenty first of September next, offering a favorable opportunity for all to subscribe who take an interest in the progress and development of the Mechanics, Arts, and Manufactures of our country. The character of the Scientific American is too well known throughout the country to require a detailed account of the various subjects discussed through its columns.

The aim of the publishers has always been to render it the most thorough and useful scientific journal in the country; and to judge of this, by comparing its circulation and influence with other publications of the same class, they have the unequivocal evidence of its value as the leading exponent of the Arts and Sciencies.

It will be published WEEKLY as heretofore, IN QUARTO FORM on fine paper, affording at the end of the year an ILLUSTRATED ENCYCLOPÆDIA of over FOUR HUNDRED PAGES, with an index, and from FIVE to SIX HUNDRED ORIGINAL ENGRAVINGS described by letters of reference, besides a vast amount of practical information concerning the progress of SCIENTIFIC and MECHANICAL IMPROVEMENTS CHEMISTRY, CIVIL ENGINEERING, MANUFACTURING in its various branches, ARCHITECTURE, MASONRY, BOTANY—in short it embraces the entire range of the Arts and Sciences.

It also possesses an original feature not found in any other weekly journal in the country, viz: an OFFICIAL LIST OF PATENT CLAIMS, prepared expressly for its columns at the Patent Office, thus constituting it the "AMERICAN REPERTORY of INVETIONS."

In connection with the publishing department the proprietors transact the most extensive Home and Foreign Patent business done in this country; consequently their facilities must be correspondingly superior.

TERMS: $2. per year, in advance; $1. for Six Months

CHAIN PUMPS.

THE best machine for raising water in use. This Pump has many advantages over any other in use on account of its simplicity of construction, being made wholly of wood and galvanized iron, not liable to get out of order or to get deranged in any way. It can never freeze in winter, and can be put in wells of any depth.

It takes less power to work it than any other machine, to raise the same amount of water.

It is never obstructed by gravel or sand; it keeps the water perfectly sweet and fresh; the action of the chain mixes the gases with the water always keeping it lively and fresh; on ceasing to work it, the water in the tube descends to the level of the water in the well; on commencing to work the pump, the first water that is drawn is from the bottom of the well.

☞ Application can be made to the subscriber or Ephraim W. Briant at P. M. French's store in Plainfield, who will be able to give satisfactory information in relation to said Pump.

GREAT

SPRING & SUMMER MEDICINE.

BRISTOL'S COMPOUND EXTRACT OF SARSAPRILLA. The value of this great American Specific for all diseases and disorders generated by impure blood, is universally known and appreciated.

TWENTY-FIVE PHYSICIANS,

among the most eminent in this country, have recently signed and caused to be published, a document certifying that BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA was the best preparation of the kind in existence, and that they

USED IT DAILY IN THEIR PRACTICE,

with the happiest effects. Remember that for

MORE THAN TWENTY YEARS

it has been before the public, performing in that time

MILLIONS OF CURES!

During that period multitudes of Sarsaprilla, so called, have been palmed upon the public, but no other has

STOOD THE TEST OF TIME!

Every year has added thousands upon thousands of bottles to its sales, its cures, and the

IMMENSE MASS OF CERTIFICATES

Which, if printed and bound would form a library of themselves! The victim of

HEREDITARY SCROFULA

with suppurating glands, honey-combed flesh, and caries eating into his bones, finds in BRISTOL'S SARSAPRILLA a balm for his afflictions. His horrible torments are assuaged and his malady not only relieved, but.

PERMANENTLY CURED!

It may be safely asserted from the results of nearly a quarter of a century's experience, that

BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA,

is beyond all comparison the

MOST WONDERFUL REMEDY ON EARTH

for the following diseases and all others proceeding from.

VITIATED BLOOD.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, Rheumatism, Obstinate Cutaneous Eruptions, Pimples or Pustules on the Face, Blotches, Boils, Chronic Sore Eyes, Ring Worm or Tetter, Scald Head, Enlargement and Pains of the Bones and Joints, Stubborn Ulcers, Syphilitic Symptoms, Sciata or Lumbago, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury.

Acites, or Dropsy

Exposure, or

Imprudence in Life, Liver Complaint, Ague and Fever, Intermitting Fever, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Plethora of Blood in the Head, Piles, Pains in the Back, Side, Breast or Loins, and all forms of Muscular, Glandular, and Skin Diseases.

It is also a sovereign specific for General Debility and the best renovator of a broken constitution. It braces and reinvigorates every organ, promotes activity and regularity in every function, and produces that condition of the whole physical system which is the best security for ☞ LONG LIFE!

Let all who wish to purge the blood from the impurities contracted from the free indulgence of the appetite during the winter, and to prepare the system to

RESIST SUMMER EPIDEMICS,

Resort now to

BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA

the gentle aperient, the powerful tonic, the unrivalled antiseptic, and great builder up and

FORTIFIER OF THE SYSTEM!

The record which has been kept since the introduction of Bristol's Sarsaparilla, twenty odd years ago, exhibits an aggregate of known cures which established its invaluable properties. Among the recorded facts are the following, in round numbers:

Cured of Summer Complaints, 10,000.

100,000 Cured of Scrofula.

Cured of Rheumatism, 58,000

150,000 Cared of Diseases of the Skin.

Cured of Liver Complaints, 35,000.

27,000 Cured of Diarrhœa and Dysentery.

There is not space in an advertisement for a full enumeration, but the cures amount to

A GRAND TOTAL OF ONE MILLION.

The public faith in it has never wavered—never can waver! for it is founded on experience, just as their want of faith in other spurious compounds is also founded in experience. They

FLY FROM MINERAL NOSTRUMS

to seek hope, life, and vigor from this

PURELY VEGETABLE REMEDY.

And are Never Disappointed!

Therefore, however broken in health and spirits, however loathsome to himself and others, let no man despair of recovery. Let the patient only understand that Bristol's Sarsaparilla is an infallible remedy for only persuade him for his own life's sake to try it, and those who know what it has acomplished will have no hesitation in predicting his speedy restoration to health.

A LEGION OF DISEASES,

As a means of regulating all the functions of

WOMAN'S DELICATE ORGANIZATION

it has no equal in the materia medica, and at that critical period of life, when the first stage of her decline commences, its cordial and invigorating properties will enable her to

PASS THE CRISIS SAFELY.

READ, AND SATISFY YOURSELVES:

Read the following from an eminent Physician:

The undersigned being acquainted with some of the ingredints of HUTCHINGS' VEGETABLE DYSPEPSIA BITTERS, and having used it for some time in his practice with every desired effect, here commends this medicine from the certainty of its effect and gives it a preference over all preparations in medicine for that distressing complaint, Dyspepsia.

T. HARDENBERGH, M. D., No. 1 Beach street N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half; during a greater portion of this time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself until he was recommended to try HUTCHINGS' DYSPEPSIA BITTERS; he very soon derived a benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of HUTCHINGS' BITTERS for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine. L B. WYMAN. 23 Burling Slip.

New York, September 3. 1849.

The following certificate is from M. B. Brady, the celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness. I was advised to take Hutching's Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease, and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia.

M. B. BRADY, No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

The proprietor of this medicine has received many other certificates of cures, equally remarkable, of the various diseases for which this preparation is applicable; but the above are deemed necessary to satisfy any unprejudiced mind of its value and superiority above all other preparations.

NEW MAGNETO ELECTRIC MACHINES,

For medical application.—These instruments possesses a great superiority over all others for medical use, the shocks being obtained entirely from permanent magnets, and the mechanism is so arranged as to cause the current of induced electricity to pass always in one direction. They require no galvanic battery to put them in action and consequently there is no need of acids or other liquids, so objectionable in the other kinds now in use, and they are always ready for immediate application, and are in nowise liable to get out of order. All that is necessary to put the instrument in action is simply to turn a small handle, which could be done by a child.

They are put up in a very portable form, being secured in small neat cases, from which they do not required to be moved.

CHERRY PECTORAL:

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, ASTHMA, WHOOPING-COUGH AND CONSUMPTION.

The uniform success which has attended the use of this preparation—its salutary effect—its power to relieve and cure affections of the Lungs, have gained for it a celebrity equalled by no other medicine. We offer it to the afflicted with entire confidence in its virtues, and the full belief that it will subdue and remove the severest attacks of disease upon the throat and Lungs. These results, as they become publicly known, very naturally attract the attention of medical men and philanthropists everywhere.—What is their opinion of CHERRY PECTORAL may be seen in the following:—

VALENTINE MOTT, M. D.,

Prof. Surgery Med. College, New York, says:—

"It gives me pleasure to certify the value and efficacy of Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL, which I consider peculiarly adapted to cure diseases of the Throat and Lungs."

THE RT.REV. LORD BISHOP FIELD

writes in a letter to his friend, who was fast sinking under an affection of the Lungs:—"Try the CHERRY PECTORAL and if any medicine can give you relief, with the blessing of God that will."

CPIEF JUSTICE EUSTIS,

of Louisiana, writes "That a young daughter of his was cured of several severe attacks of Croup by the "CHERRY PECTORAL."

ASTHMA AND BRONCHITIS.

The Canadian Journal of Medical Science states, "That Asthma and Bronchitis so prevalent in this inclement climate, has yielded with surprising rapidity to Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL, and we cannot too strongly recommend this skilful preparation to the Profession and public generally."

Let the relieved sufierer speak for himself.—

HARTFORD, Jan. 26. 1847.

Dr. J. C. Ayer—Dear Sir:—Having been rescued from a painful and dangerous disease by your medicine, gratitude prompts me to send you this acknowledgment, not only in justice to you, but for the information of others in like affliction.

A slight cold upon the lungs, neglected at first became so severe that spitting of blood, a violent cough and profuse night sweats followed and fastened upon me. I became emaciated, could not sleep, was distressed by my cough, and a pain through my chest, and in short had all the alarming symptoms of quick consumption. No medicine seemed at all to reach my case, until I providentially tried your CHERRY PECTORAL, which soon relieved and now has cured me.

Yours with respect. E. A. STEWART.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 17, 1848

Dr. Ayer, Lowell—Dear Sir:—I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form; so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breath on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my Physician prescribed, as an experiment, your CHERRY PECTORAL.

At first it seemed to make me worse, but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

BLAKE'S PATENT

FIRE PROOF PAINT.

THE original and only genuine article, that can be obtained, without subjecting the purchaser to a prosecution for an infringement of my Patent. It has not yet been two year since the first counterfeit, was got up, but in that short time has proved itself, entirely worthless, as will be seen by the statement of more than twenty of the most respectable inhabitants of Sharon Ohio where mine as well as the Counterfeits are made. They say that we have examined recently, a house that was painted, with

Blake's Patent Fire Proof Paint,

SIX YEARS since (as an experiment) and now find the coating as hard as slate or stone. The action of the weather having no effect than to indurate and harden the substance. We will farther state that it has been such a complete failure in all the other kinds of stuff got up, and sold here, called Fire Proof paint (except Blakes) that his only is considered worth useing.

(Signed) Barnabus Crane and 20 others.

Hon. Daniel Webster has recently examined the patent and at the close of his report says, "I have no doubt whatever, but Mr Blake's Patent is good and valid. [104.

MARRIAGE:

WHY SO OFTEN UNHAPPY.

THE CAUSES AND THE REMEDY!

MANY and many a wife endures years of bodily suffering and of mental anguish, prostrate and helpless, embittering her life, that of her husband, and hazarding the future welfare of her children, arising from causes which, if known, would have spared the suffering, the anguish to the wife, and to the husband embarrassments and pecuniary difficulties having their origin in the mind being weighed down and harassed in consequence of the sickness of the companion of his bosom.

How important that the causes should be known to every wife, to every husband, that the dreadful and harrowing consequences to the health and happiness of both may be avoided! Life is too short and health too precious to admit any portion of the one to be spent without the full enjoyment of the other. The timely possession of a little work entitled as follows has been the means of saving the health and the life of thousands, as over

copies have been sold since the first edition was issued.

The author has been induced to advertise it by the urgent and pressing request of those who have been indebted to its publication for all they hold dear (that all may have an opportunity of obtaining it), and who have favored him with thousands of letters of encomium, some of which are annexed to the advertisement.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S

Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

Twentieth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, $1.00.

THIS WORK IS INTENDED ESPECIALLY FOR THE MARRIED, or those contemplating marriage, as it discloses important secrets which should be known to them particularly.

Here, every female—the wife, the mother—the one either budding into womanhood, or the one in the decline of years, in whom nature contemplates an important change—can discover the causes, symptoms, and the most efficient remedies and most certain mode of cure, in every complaint to which her sex is subject.

The revelations contained in its pages have proved a blessing to thousands, as the innumerable letters received by the author (which he is permitted by the writers to publish) will attest.

SICKLY AND UNHAPPY WIVES.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Dayton, O.

"DAYTON, May 1, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU—My Dear Sir: 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion,' for which I enclosed one dollar to your address, came safely to hand. I would not have troubled you with these few lines, but that I am impelled by a sense of gratitude, for myself and wife, to give utterance to our sincere and heartfelt emotions.

"My wife has been perceptibly sinking for some three years or more, in consequence of her great anguish and suffering some months before and during confinement; every successive one more and more debilitated and prostrated her, putting her life in imminent danger, and which was, on the last occasion, despaired of. I supposed that this state of things was inevitable, and resigned myself to meet the worst. At this time (now about two months) I heard your book highly spoken of. as containing some matters reaching my case. On its receipt and perusal, I can not express to you the relief it afforded my distressed mind and the joy its pages imparted to my wife, on learning that the great discovery of M. M. Desomeaux provided a remedy. It opened a prospect to me which I little conceived was possible. No pecuniary consideration can ever repay the obligations I am under to you for having been the means of imparting to us the matters contained in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' But for this, ere another year would have passed over my head, in all human probability my wife would have been in her grave, and my children left motherless."

Extract from a Letter.

Competence and Health.

"LANCASTER, PA., Oct. 24, 1847.

"MY DEAR SIR: I know you will have the kindness to bear with me in encroaching upon your time, while I acknowledge (in behalf of myself and wife) the obligations we feel ourselves under to you in having made known certain matters, contained in your most invaluable 'Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' It has been worth its weight in gold to me. If I express myself rather warmly, you will see that I can not do so too warmly, when I inform you of the extent to which I have, through it, been benefited. I will state my situation when I obtained your book through the merest curiosity I look upon it as one of the most fortunate events of my life. I had been married some ten years, and was the father of seven children. I was long struggling unceasingly, to the end that I might gain a moderate competency, but the results of my utmost exertions at the end left me about where I was at the beginning of each year; and that only, with the most stinted economy, sufficing with barely the necessaries of life. Finally, this constant effort was beginning to have its effect upon my health: I felt less capable to endure its continuance, while I felt the necessity of perseverance.

"This constant, unceasing struggle on my part was imperative, in consequence of the prostrated condition of my wife (with occasional intermission) for six years, much of the time confined to her bed, and of course incapable of taking the charge and management of household affairs. Her condition arose from causes of which I was ignorant. Oh! what would I have given had I the six years to live over again! What would my wife have given to have been spared the long days and still longer nights prostrate on a bed of sickness!—all of which would have been avoided, had I then seen a copy of 'THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION.'"

From a Physician.

DANGEROUS DELIVERIES,

OBSTRUCTIONS, IRREGULARITIES, &C.

How many are suffering from obstruction or irregularities peculiar to the female system, which undermine their health, the effects of which they are ignorant, and for which their delicacy forbids seeking medical advice! How many suffer from prolapsus uteri (falling of the womb), or from fluor-albus (weakness, debility, &c., &c.)! How many are in constant agony for many months preceding confinement! How many have difficult if not dangerous deliveries, and whose lives are jeoparded during such time, will find in its pages the means of prevention, amelioration, and relief!

Extract from a Letter.

To those just Married.—"Had I known!"

"PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU: Had I known of the im portant matters treated of in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion' some years ago, how much misery I might have escaped! I have suffered years from causes which you point out in your book, without knowing what to do. I obtained a copy, and found my case treated of. I trust every female will avail herself of the information contained in its pages."

Letters are daily received of this character, unnecessary to present.

To those yet unmarried, but contemplating marriage, or perhaps hesitating as to the propriety of incurring the responsibilities attendant upon it, the importance of being possessed of the revelations contained in these pages, so intimately involving their future happiness, can not be appreciated.

It is, of course, impracticable to convey more fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage; neither is it necessary, since it is every one's duty to become possessed of knowledge whereby the sufferings to which a wife, a mother, or a sister, may be subject, can be obviated.

Over 20,000 Copies have been sent by MAIL within three months with perfect safety and certainty.

Booksellers and agents engaged in its sale, are making handsome competencies from the ready and extraordinary demand for it, and the extremely liberal terms afforded them.

Active local or travelling Agents, throughout the United States and Canadas, will be supplied on the same terms. Communications are required to be POST-PAID and addressed as above.

☞ CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against various catch-penies intended to be palmed off upon them initiating the title of the work as "The Married LADIES' Medical Companion," and various other titles. Arnica LINIMENT

A CERTAIN CURE FOR

RHEUMATISM!

SORE THROAT, BURNS, SCALDS, PAINS IN THE LIMBS, CHEST, SIDE, AND BACK, SPRAINS, BRUISES, CRAMPS, CHILBLAINS, ETC., ETC., ETC.

Price, Twenty-Five Cents.

This newly-invented oleaginous preparation of ARNICA has been, before offering it to the public, satisfactorily tested by several of our most respectable physicians, who were also made acquainted with the ingredients of which it is composed, and the peculiar process of compounding them. So confident is the inventor of its efficacy, that he has authorized every agent—in case it does not prove itself as represented—to take back any part of the bottle and return the full price of it.

The ARNICA LINIMENT will be found more penetrating, and to relieve the most acute pain in less time, than any other external remedy; at the same time it will not irritate the skin or cause it to smart, even if badly broken, as is not unfrequently the case with Burns and Scalds, but will remove the fire and cause the injured part to heal so rapidly as seldom to leave any scar.

Most, if not all, other liniments contain some irritating ingredient, such as pepper, spirits of hartshorn, oil of vitriol, muriatic acid, (spirits of salt,) combined with oil or alcohol, which cause the skin to smart very much, and the second application to be greatly dreaded, particularly by children; and the opinion is generally entertained that the more a liniment causes the flesh to burn and smart, the more good it will do. But this we are convinced is a very great mistake, and results in doing more injury than good: as, for instance, with SPRAINS, BRUISES, BURNS, SCALDS, CHILBLAINS, or any inflammation on or near the surface of the skin. All such exciting embrocations must naturally tend to increase the disease and prolong the cure.

The ARNICA LINIMENT requires neither true nor fictitious testimonials to recommend it, after one trial.

To my Mother.

Soon I'm coming home, dear mother,
Soon to see thee once again;
Happy shall I be, dear mother,
Tho' I cannot long remain.

Let me be a child then, mother,
Fondly clinging to thy side;
As you've often called me, mother,
Tho' in manhood's strength and pride.

Let me sit once more, dear mother,
Where I've often sat by thee;
With thine arm around me mother,
And my head upon thy knee.

Fondly still caress me, mother,
Place thy hand upon my brow;
As then hast so often, mother,
Oh, I feel its pressure now.

Let me gaze once more, dear mother,
In thy lovelit beaming eye,
Sweetly smiling on me, mother,
Breathing forth affection's sigh.

Let me nestle, dearest mother,
Once again upon thy breast,
Where I have so often, mother,
Soothed my aching head to rest.

Clasp thine arm around me, mother;
Press me to thy gentle breast;
As I homeward fly, dear mother,
Like a doveling to its nest.

The Home of my Childhood.

I hail thee with pleasure, loved home of my childhood,
The land of my birth and my own native hills,
The rich teemiug meadows, and "wild tangled wildwood,"
And the sweet gentle music of murmuring rills.

How oft have I roamed, oer thy heath covered mountains,
Or wandered through forests, or evergreen pine,
And drank from thy crystal and sweet flowing fountains,
A more welcome draught than Falernian wine.

The prospect so grand, from my Father's plantation,
In rapture I've gazed on the scenery around,
Till filled with the purest, sublimest sensation,
I've felt that no lovelier spot could be found

Looming up in the distance, with coronets gleaming,
Now radiant beneath the first beams of the morn,
Are seen the Green Mountains, with rich foliage teeming,
Anon, a lone summit, deserted, forlorn.

The Mohawk so smoothly, so silently gliding
Gently laving its marginal borders of green
With villas beyond, from the vision scarce hiding,
Like spots on the ocean of verdure are seen.

My Wife's Gold Ring.

Or John Gaspard Lavater and the Poor Widow.

It was a practice with Lavater (an eminent clergyman, born in Zurich, Switzerland, 1741), to read every morning one or more chapters of the Bible, and to select from them one particular passage for frequent and special meditation during the day. One morning after reading the fifth and sixth chapters of the Gospel of Matthew, he exclaimed, "What a treasure of morality! how difficult to make choice of any particular portion of it!" After a few moments' consideration, he threw himself upon his knees, and prayed for Divine guidance.

When he joined his wife at dinner, she asked him what passage of scripture he had chosen for the day.

"'Give to him that asketh thee; and from him that would borrow of thee, turn not away,'" was the reply. "And how is this to be understood?" said his wife.—"'Give to him that asketh thee; and from him that would borrow of thee, turn not away,'—these" rejoined Lavater, "are the words of Him to whom all and everything belong that I possess. I am the steward, not the proprietor. The proprietor desires me to give to him who asks of me; and not to refuse him who would borrow of me; or, in other words, if I have two coats, I must give one to him who has none, and if I have food, I must share with him who is an hungered and in want; this I must do without being asked; how much more, then, when asked."

"This," continues Lavater in his diary, "appeared to me so evidently and incontrovertably to be the meaning of the verses in question, that I spoke with more than usual warmth; my wife made no further reply than that she would well consider these things.

"I had scarcely left the dining-room a few minutes, when an aged widow desired to speak to me, and she was shown into my study. 'Forgive me, dear sir,' she said, 'excuse the liberty I am about to take; I am truly ashamed, but my rent is due tomorrow, and I am short six dollars; I have been confined to my bed by sickness, and my poor girl is nearly starving; every penny that I could save I have laid aside to meet this demand, but six dollars are yet wanting, and tomorrow is term day.' Here she opened a parcel, which she held in her hand, and said: 'This is a book with a silver clasp, which my late husband gave me the day we were married. It is all I can spare of the few articles I possess, and sore it is to part with it. I am aware that it is not enough, nor do I see how I could ever repay—but, dear sir, if you can, do assist me.'

"'I am very sorry, my good woman, that I cannot help you,' I said; and putting my hand into my pocket, I accidentally felt my purse, which contain- about two dollars; these, I said to myself, cannot extricate her from her difficulty, she requires six; besides, if even they could, I have need of this money for some other purpose. Turning to the widow, I said; 'Have you no friend, no relation, who could give you this trifle?'"

"No, there is no one! I am ashamed to go from house to house. I would rather work day and night. My excuse for being here is, that people speak so much of your goodness. If, however, your cannot assist me, you will at least forgive my intrusion; and God, who has never yet forsaken me, will not surely turn away from me in my sixtieth year!"

"At this moment the door of my apartment opened and my wife entered. I was ashamed and vexed. Gladly would I have sent her away; for conscience whispered, 'Give to him that asketh thee; and from him that would borrow of thee, turn not thou away.' She came up to me and said, with much sweetness, 'This is a good old woman; she has certainly been ill of late; assist her if you can.'

"Shame and compassion struggled in my darkened soul. 'I have but two dollars,' I said in a whisper, and she requires six; I'll give her a trifle in the hand and let her go.'

"Laying her head on my arm and smiling, my wife said aloud, what conscience had whispered before: 'Give to him that asketh thee; and from him that would borrow of thee, turn not thou away.'

'I blushed, and replied, with some little vexation: Would you give your ring for the purpose?'

"With pleasure," answered my wife, pulling off her ring.

"The good old widow was either too simple or too modest to notice what was going on, and was preparing to retire, when my wife called to her to wait in the lobby. When we were left alone, I asked my wife, 'Are you in earnest about the ring?

"'Certainly, how can you doubt it?' she said: 'do you think that I would trifle with charity? Remember what you said to me but half a year ago. Oh, my dear friend, let us not make a show of the gospel; you are in general so kind, so sympathising, how is it that you find it so difficult to assist this poor woman? why did you not, without hesitation, give her what you had in your pocket? and did you not know that the quarter will be paid to us in less than eight days?' She then added with much feeling: 'Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body what ye shall put on Behold the fowls of the air; they sow not, neither do they reap nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feedeth them."

"I kissed my wife, while tears ran down my cheeks: 'Thanks, a thousand thanks, for this humiliation!" I turned to the desk, took from it the six dollars, and opened the door to call the poor widow—all darkened around me at the thought that I had been so forgetful of the omniscience of God as to say to her, 'I cannot help you.' Oh, thou false tongue! thou false heart! If thou, Lord, shouldst mark iniquities, oh Lord, who shall stand! 'Here is what you need,' I said, addressing the widow.

"At first she seemed not to understand what I meant, and thought I was offering a small contribution, for which she thanked me, and pressed my hand; but when she perceived that I had given her the whole sum, she could scarcely find words to express her feelings. She cried: 'Dear sir, I can not repay; all I posesess is this poor book, and it is old.'

"'Keep your book,' said I, 'and the money, too, and thank God, and not me, for verily I deserve no thanks, after having so long resisted your entreaties; go in peace, and forgive, forgive an erring brother.'

"I returned to my wife with downcast looks; but she smiled, and said: 'Do not take it so much to heart my friend; you yielded at my first suggestion; but promise me that so long as I wear a gold ring on my finger, and you know that I possesses several besides, you will never allow yourself to say to any person, 'I cannot help you.' She kissed me and I left the apartment.

"When I found myself alone, I sat down and wrote this account in my dairy, in order to humble my deceitful heart—this heart which no longer ago than yesterday, dictated the words: 'Of all the characters in the world, there is none I would, more avoid than that of a hypocrite;' yet to preach the whole moral law and fulfill only the easy part of it, is hypocrisy. Merciful Father, how long must I wait and reflect, and struggle, ere I shall be able to rely on the perfect sincerity of my profession.

"I read over once more the chapter which I had read in the morning with so little benefit, and felt more and more ashamed, and convinced that there is no peace, except where principle and practice are in perfect accordance. How peacefully and happy I might have ended this day, had I acted up conscientiously to be blessed doctrines I profess! Dear Saviour, send thy Holy Spirit into this benighted heart! cleanse it from secret sin! and teach me to employ that which thou hast committed to my charge, to thy glory, a brother's welfare, and my own salvation!"

A SUFFERING YOUTH—"Father, I wants a dollar," said a country boy—a strapping lad of sixteen, who measured two axhandles in his stockings—to his dad on Saturday night—"I wants a buzzum pin amazingly, all the big boys in town have got 'em but me."

"Fudge," replied the sire a buzzum pin! nonsense! You better get a pair of shoes or a new felt, for a dollar, or suthin' o' some consekwence—but b-u-z-z-u-m-p-i-n!—pshaw!"

"Humph!" returned the juvenile, "these ere things you spoke on are all well enough in the fall: won't my palm-leaf dew for this summer, and can't I go bare-foot now? But," sobbed out the strippling, "I am really suffering for a buzzum pin!

☞ A man very much intoxicated, was sent to prison.

"Why didn't you bail him out?" inquired a bystander.

"Bail him out! Bail him out!" exclaimed the other—"you couldn't pump him out.

☞ Here, you little rascal, walk up and give an account of yourself; where have you been?" "After the girls, father." "Did you ever know me te do so when I was a boy." "No sir—but mother did."

If you don't know what to do with yourself in these hot nights, angle for mosquitoes. No difficulty in getting a bite.

☞ A queer genius being asked why he did not attend the funeral of his wife, replied that he could not leave his shop, and that it was always better to attend to business before pleasure.

To wipe all tears from off all faces is a task too hard for mortals; but to alleviate misfortune is within the most limited power.

Grand and Petit Jurors.

SECRET TRIBUNALS—PROPERTY QUALIFICATION.

One of the wrongs inflicted upon the community by inefficient or bad laws, is made manifest in our system of jury duty. A people who justly appreciate liberty should demand open proceedings in all cases of real or supposed violations of law or established rules of justice. Wherever there is secrecy in judical procoedings, there is likely to be found dishonesty. The public, whose welfare is concerned in all preliminary investigations, should know the nature of the developments made. Criminals, whose guilt is as plain as light at noon, often manage to strangle investigations in a secret jury room, and poison justice at its verv fountain. The laws thus become a farce, and justice a delusion. On the other hand, an honest man, against whom there is no well founded charge of wrong, is made to suffer from a secret investigation, brought about by enemies, before a Grand Jury who are ignorant of a real objection in view, and who would instantly ignore a bill could they hear the testimony brought by the accused.

An able solicitor, in extensive criminal practice in England, says, that his objections to the Grand Jury system, are, "that it is a protection, very often, to guilty parties, and that it assists the compromise of offences which have been fully investigated before the magistrates; for by means of its secret-acting, there is no opportunity of knowing what takes place before it." Another eminent Judge in a criminal court in England, who has tried 25,000 cases says:—"I do not know one single argument in favor of the Grand Jury system. I never heard an argument, conclusive to my mind, in favor of it." The opinions of the eminent criminal jurists were solicited on the propriety of an act introducod into the Parliament of Great Britain in the last year, 1849, to abolish the Grand Jury system in the metropolian districts including what is called the Central Criminal Court. We believe this act passed, and is now in force. The London Times remarked, that the Grand Jury system had become a useless ceremony in all cases; but, not only useless, it had often been either accidently or designedly mischievous. The committing magistrate made a far more searching inquiry into the validity of the charges preferred against the accused, that ever took piace in the Graud Jury room. This inquiry, or Judicial investigation, is public, and if there is prima facia evidence of probable guilt, or strong ground of suspicion, a petit jury is called upon to investigate more fully the whole matter.

Between these two investigations there is no necessity of a secret tribunal. The Grand Jury is a relic of another age; of a former condition of society. The magistrate, who conducts his inquiry with open doors who confronts the witnesses with the accused, who admits the legal advisers of the supposed criminal to his court, and permits them to argue against the propriety of commital on grounds of law or fact, and who exercises his solemn functions under the eye of public scrutiny, is all that is necessary before a case goes to a jury to be tried upon its merits, after full time is had for preparation on both sides. One competent man, who conducts his proceedings in open court, is all that is requisite, and far better than all intermediate bodies, conducting their business in secret. All we want to know is, whether there is probable grounds for sending the acused party before a jury of his countrymen, who are to hear the evidence on both sides determine accordingly. What we want to arrive at, is, that every investigation, resulting in a commital or discharge, by any poliece magistrate, or justice of the peace, shall take place in open court, and that all intermediate bodies, whose proceedings are secret, shall be dispensed with. Grand Juries are grand humbugs, calculated to injure the innocent, or allow the guilty to escape.

Commiting magistrates, and jurors to investigate the case, are all that are wanted. But the law of this State, and of several other States in the Union, is defective in its provisions in relation to petit jurors. The result of the law, in this State, is that not one half of our male population, citizens of the United States, are ever called upon to do jury duty. A man must be the owner of real estate, before he can be called upon to do jury duty. This excludes many of the most competent men in the State from a seat in the jury box, and tends to keep a large class of our best citizens in ignorance of our judicial system, whether civil or criminal. Thus it is evident that a large portion of our active and intelligent male population are never called upon to do jury duty. A little property, no matter how they came to own it, makes them qualified jurors in the eye of the law.

All men twenty-one years of age, citizens of the U. S. by birth or adoption, can vote for Governor, Members of the Legislature, or President of the U. States; yet, unless they have a certain amount of property, they are not competent to sit in the jury box, and decide upon a case involving a few dollars, or affecting the peace, prosection and good order of society. No one can fail to see the injustice and absurdity of such a law. It is a remnant of the odious property qualifications required to endow a man with the rights belonging to him. The sooner it ceases to disgraee our statute book, the better, for all classes of the community. The right to sit in the jury box is in importance to that of a voice in selecting those who make or laws and administer our Government. A certain amount of property, and a certain degree of intellect, do not necessarilly follow each other. Jurymen should be paid for their services just as other services are paid for, and then the intelligent man not worth one hundred dollars, and the intelligent man worth many hundred, would be found, side by side, deciding upen the disputes of civil litigants, and acquitting or convicting the accused, in criminal cases. All would then have the benefit of the information derived in the jury box, and the community would have the benefit of the intelligence of all its members.—Hunterdon Democrat.

A GOOD REFORT.—On Sunday, a lady called to her little boy who was tossing marbles on the side walk, to come into the house. "Don't you know you shouldn't be out there, my son? Go into the back yard, if you want to play marbles—it is Sunday" "Well, yes. But aint it Sunday in the back yard, mother."

The Haytien Goverment has passed a law to prevent the cutting of any more logwood on that Island.

Truth—Error.

Truth courts investigatiou, but error shrinks from scrutiny. Truth fears no evil from the most rigid examination, but error always fears the consequences. Truth is immutable and will stand criticism. Truth, like its author, is eternal, and will exist amidst the wreck of matter and the crush of worlds, while error will be swept away with the refuge of lies. The more you examine truth, like gold, the brighter it shines. Truth is not tarnished by inspection, but discovers more splendor. Any system which shrinks from scrutiny, discovers corruption in its premises, and is unworthy the attention of an intelligent mind.

JUVENILE AMBITION.—Speaking of boys, we heard a couple of pretty good anecdotes reeently. Every body knows how customary it is for these juvenile specimens of humanity to "crow like chanticleer" over others on every possible occasion, and especially if they are rivals at school or elsewhere, to brag down each other on the extent of their father's possessions; as, for example, "My pa has got a great big house, and yours h-a-i-n-t!" My pa's got a new wood-shed," and "My pa's gol a hog-pen," and so on from buildings and lands down to hen-coops and martin boxes. In a certain down-east village two young reprobates had been engaged one day in a brag game of this sort, when one of them having exhausted all his father's possessions, real, personal and mixed, was "stumped" at last—brought to a dead stand. Meanwhile his antagonist was chuckling with all the ecstacy of a veteran gamester who holds the trump card. He had brought up his corps de reserve in the shape of a corn barn and an old spavined horse, and was charging home upon our urchin with the fury of a Cossack transfixing a Pole. Our hero stood silent under his biting taunts—his countenance the picture picture of blank despair. He tried to recall one, just one, additional piece of property that his pa owned; but it was like "calling spirits from the vasty deep"—it would not come Suddenly, a bright though struck him.—"Well," said he, his features brightening up, and his eyes sparkling with triumph, "I don't care, Jim; there's one thing you haint got—you hain't got any dead grandmother!"

THE ECCENTRIC CLERGYMAN.—In the early times of New England, in one of the oldest towns in Essex county there resided an aged clergyman, who had long ministered to the same people. He was a learned and good man, but unfortnnately was careless and whimsical in the use of language. Often his coarse and odd expressions in prayer, highly amused the young and thoughtless, while they grieved the aged pious. In his old age this failing so increased that his people, after long forbearance, called in a council of his brethren in the ministry to advise with him and them in the matter. A committee of the church kindly but fully stated the cause of dissatisfaction. The good old man admitted all they alleged in regard to his multiplied eccentricities, and humbly asked forgiveness; and he promised, if still allowed to exercise his vocation, that he would set a double guard upon his lips, and not again offend as he had done. His people were really attached to him, and readily assented to a continuance of his ministrations. The whole difficulty seemed to be amicably settled. His brethren of the council begged him to pursue in futuure the course he had promised. A public meeting was held, the doings of the venerable body published, and much satisfaction was expressed in view of the happy prospect of the pastor and people. By request, the old gentlemen was to close the meeting with prayer. Afte suitable expression of thanks for the pleasant result of the proceedings, he soon became fervent, and prayed that in future they might all set their horses together, and ride cheek by jowl, check by jowl, right into the kingdom of Heaven!

Origin of the phrase "Brother Jonathan."

General Washington placed great confidence in the good sense and patriotism of Jonathan Trumbull, who at an early period of the American revolution, was governor of the State of Connecticut. In a certain emergency, when a measure of great importance was under discussion, Washington remarked, "We must consult brother Jonathan on the subject."—The result of that consultation was favorable, and the words of the commander-in-chief passed into a common phrase, applied indiscriminatly by officers and men in all cases of difficulty which occurred during the war. Thus, from the constant use of the expression, "We must consult brother Jonathan," which soon passed from the army to the people at large, the Americans received from the English that appellation which has stuck as elosely as their "John Bull" has to them.

A FREAK OF THE FLUID.—During Saturday afternoon, whille a heavy storm was passing down the lake, so as to prevent telegraphing, the lightning took possession of the wires and followed them to the office in this city. The main wire was disconnectected from the instrument; but the lightning jumped some six inches from the end of it, and caught another wire leading to the relay.

The insulated wire on the helists was melted off, and fell in drops on the wood works. From these it passed to the key, which was open some half an inch, and brought it down, melting the plating, soldering the key solid together.

When the lightning left the main wire and jumped, it burned the window frame black and burned a card some six inches off. The sparks and fire flew, resembling the explosion of a fire rocket, making a report as loud as the firing of a pistol.—Detroit Adv.

It is merit and title, which gives importance. It is usefulness, and not grandeur, which makes the world happy.

GENTLEMEN.—Whoever is open, loyal, and true; whoever is of humane and affable demeanor; whoever is honorable in himself, and in his judgment of others, and requires no law but his word to make him fulfil an engagement, such a man is a gentleman, and such a man may be found among the tillers of the ground.—De Vere.

The Storm of Monday.

The Central Railroad has suffered severely, and one life was lost upon it in consequence. Tuesday morning, the freight train, in coming upon a culvert near Newmarket, found it to be undermined and settling fast, but the train got over without accident. They immediately despatched an express back to the passenger traid with intelligence of the unsafe state of the road; the freight train proceeded as far as an embankment near Westfield, which gave way and precipitated two freight cars below, crushing them to pieces, and immediately killing a brakeman called Dutch Andrew.

As far as we can learn the loss of bridges, dams, &c., throughout the country is immense.

Dudley S. Gregory, of Hudson, Samuel Mairs, of Morcer, Dr. Spencer, of Burlington, Samuel B Halsey of Morris, Dr Beaseley of West Jersey. Dr. Ferdinand S. Scenck, Hon. Wm. A. Newell, member of Congress, Hon. John Runk, of Hunterdon

DEMOCRATS.—Hon. John Cassedy, of Hudson, Gen. Isaac G. Farlee, of Hunterdon. Hon. George Sykes, of Burlington, Henry A. Ford, Esq., of Morristown, Hon. Littleton Kirkpatrick, of New-Brunswick, Dr George F. Fort, of Ocean.

The youth who has the proper desire for mental exercise, has always time for improvement. Every hour of the day, in proper application and attention to business—not merely for the purpose of finishing his day's work, but to learn the principles upon which trade is conducted—he should learn something while at night there is spare time for all—however close may be the application during the day, to study—and to learn. This course will afford, it is true, but litle leisure for visiting the theatres or tavers, and may encroach upon some hours of sleep, but the spirits will be all the brisker for the denial and the pocket less impaired. The men have risen to distinction, are not those who waited for opportunities to learn they seized them at all times, and grew industrious.

☞ Public attention is directed to the card of Mr. H. W Lowery, in another column. Mr. L., we understand from a friend at Somerville, has taught at that place, a class of nearly two hundred youngsters with much credit to himself and to the entire satisfaction of his pupils and the public. The public Journals of that place also favorably notice the improvement he has made in the musical powers of his pupils by his careful and enlightened instruction. Mr. L. refers to citizens of Somerville with whom our public are acquainted. Certainly where the object is commendable, the expenses so reasonable, a generous patronage will be awarded.

MAP OF ESSEX COUNTY.—We have received from the publisher, Mr. H. A. Belding, a Map of Essex County, by J. C. Sidney, Civil Engineer. Its appearance is very creditable to the publisher, and so far as we have examined also to the surveyor—being an accurate Map of the County, with the Roads, Lanes, Streams, Churches, School-houses, Stores, Mills, &c., with the names of property holders accurately delineated. It is invaluable for reference, and should find a place in every school-house and public-institution in the county. Indeed, no person who can afford it should fail to procure so useful, convenient and ornamental appendage to the places of business or residence. Price $4. to be had of the pub lisher at Newark N. J.

☞ We would call the public attention to the advertisement of Mr. Evans, in another column. Mr. E. has determined to become a citizen having, opened a store and manufactory among us, he would therefore solicit a share of the public patronage. Being a practical workman and a man of experience in his business we trust he will succeed. Competition ensures accommodation—the best articles at the lowest price—it should therefore be encouraged. Give him a call.

"FACTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL.—The whole number of persons convicted of crimes in the State of New York, from 1840 to 1848, inclusive, was 27,940. Of these, 1,182 were returned as having received a "common education," 414 as having "a tollerably good education," and 128 only as "well educated." Of the remaining 26,225, about half were able merely to read and write; the residue were destitute of any education whatever."

These facts should indeed arrest the attention of the thoughtful," and indeed every member of society. They reveal the important truth, that whatever is saved by a community or a state, pecuniarily from the want of a proper system of education, is expended in the support of convicts in jails and prisons; while, in a moral point of view, the State is greatly the sufferer. Every member of society should be convinced that a liberal system of common school education is demanded no less by pecuniary considerations than the well being of a people. He should be impressed with the importance of establishing such a liberal system in our own state, that every child may have the means of acquiring an education which will fit him for a useful life, and form a barrier against vice and crime—for it remains a truth, that if we neglect to furnish our youth with the elements of a good education, we must contribute the more liberally to their support in our jails and prisons. To the question, whether it be better to establish such a general system of education, or support criminals in prisons, (made criminals too often by such neglect,) the response should be universal in favor of the former. Generations unborn would praise us for such an enlightened view of the subject, and our own consciences will assure us that we have done a good work.

From the Tribune of Friday last.

—Prof. Webster dies to-day. We loathe the infliction of death by human law, but hold that, so long as the law of blood for blood shall be upheld, it ought to be faithfully adhered to. Sanguinary penalties are pernicious, but capricious, uncertain, intermittent penalties are worse. To train a child with a horsewhip will often make him a hardened ruffian; but to threaten chastisement continually, yet never chastise, is the way to imbue him with a contempt for your authority, and a recklessness of control perhaps even more pernicious. Let the Law keep its word, but let it study humanity, not in remittiug penalties but in modifying them. We shall rejoice over the day which sees the last gallows burned, but we would have the Law of the Gallows first repealed. Let there be no paltering with criminals, but a wise blending of firmness with charity and mercy.

As to Prof. Webster, we believe that his conviction and punishment would exert a more salutary effect if he were immured in a solitary cell for life than it now will. Horror for his crime will now be unwholesomely blended with sypathy for his ignominious fate and for his dreadfully afflicted family. Had he been simply and securely imprisoned for life, the most compassionate must have said—'The man who could 'so treachorously take the life of his neighbor and 'benefactor cannot be left at large; he is a dangerous 'wild beast; and the example of such impunity to 'murder would encourage others to revel in crime.' Had he been imprisoned for life, thousands who shudder at the thought of taking their children to his execution would have taken them to see him in prison, and said, 'My children! see what crime com-'pels the gentle and the good to do with criminals, in 'order that the innocent may dwell in relative secu-'rity.' He wonld have beed a solutary lesson and a warning for years. Now he will be cut off; the nine days' horror will pass away; and the Professor, his crime and his fate, will be soon covered by the waters of oblivion. A few years hence save by the deeply interested few, the Boston tragedy will be as though it never had been.

—That the crimiual should be pitied as well as punished, we know: how much he is to be pitied, who but the All-Seeing may determine? In the case of Webster, we see a man born to the enjoyment of every luxury, educated in pride and indolence, by nature passionate and vindictive, weakly self-indulgent, prone to obstentation, delighting in entertainments, with limited means and sumptuous appetites, surrounded by a family who were either kept in ignorance of the disparity between his income and his expenditures, or blindly pursuing their own enjoyment regardless of his embarassments and his peril; The end might have been less horrible but must have been less disastrous. The man who will spend twice his income may begin in thoughtlessness but must end in crime; the wife and daughters who insists that the husband and father shall buy costly dressess or furniture or give lavish entertainments in contempt of his remonstrances that his income will not justify the required outlay—they may escape the legal penalty of the guilt into which they drive him, but from the moral and general consequences of his direliction they cannot and should not be shielded. May we all learn from the fate of Webster to govern our appetites, to limit our expenditures, to find enjoyment rather in doing and sacrificing for others than in grasping for ourselves, and thus shun the meshes which entangled and ultimately destroyed him. As for that his penitence may be sincere and accepted above, and that his fate may exert a salutary influence on the communty, must be the earnest aspiration of all.

Execution of Prof. Webster—His letter to Rev. Dr. Parkman, &c. &c.

The following letter which we find in the Boston Transcript, was addressd by Prof. Webster to Rev. Dr. Parkman, brother of Dr. Geo Parkman. A copy of the letter was retained by Prof. W. and confided to a friend, with permission to make such use of it as he might see fit, after the execution:

Boston, Tuesday, Aug. 6.

REV. DR. PARKMAN. Dear sir,—I cannnot leave this world in the peace of mind for which I pray, without addressing you as the head of that family which I have so deeply injured and afflicted, to make known to you and them the bitter anguish of soul, the sincere contrition and penitence I have felt at having been the cause of the affliction under which you and they have been called to mourn. I can offer no excuse for my wicked and fatal ebulition of passion but what you already know, nor would attempt to palitate it.

I had never, until the two or three last interviews with your brother, felt towards him anything but gratitude for his many acts of kindness and friendship. That I should have allowed the feelings excited on those occasions to have overpowered me so as to involve the life of your brother, and my own temporal and eternal welfare, I can, even now, hardly realize.

I may not receive from you forgiveness in this world, yet I cannot but hope and believe you will think of me with compassion, and remember me in your prayers to Him who will not turn away from the humble and repentant. Had I many lives, with what joy would I lay them all down, to alleviate the affliction I have caused; but I can now only pray for forgiveness myself and for every consolation and blessing upon every member of your family.

In justice to those dearest to me, I beg to assure you, and I entreat you to believe me, no one of my family had the slightest doubt of my entire innocence up to the moment when the contrary was communicated to them by Dr. Putnam. That they have your sincere pity and sympathy I feel assured.

There is no family toward every member I have always felt a greater degree of respect and regard than that of which you are now the head. From more than one I have received repeated acts of friendship and kindness, for which I have ever been trnly grateful.

Toward yourself in particular have not only my own feelings been those of the most sincere regard and gratitude, but every individval of my family has felt toward you that you were their pastor and friend. Often has my wife recalled the interest you took in her from her becoming your parishioner, and often has she spoken, with feelings of gratitude, of the influence of your public ministrations, and of your direction of her inquiries and reading in what related to her religious views. These she has often recalled and referred to as having firmly established the religious faith and trust which are now such sources of consolation and support to her and our children, as well as to myself.

Nothing that has occurred has weakened these feelings, and although those I leave behind me may not meet you without the keenest anguish, I trust you will exonerate them from any participation in or knowledge of the father's sin, up to the moment I have mentioned, and may you remember them in your prayers to the Father of the fatherless and the widow's God.

I beg you, my dear sir, to consider this strictly a private letter and by no means to give it publicity; at the same time I will request you to make known to the immediate members of your family the state of my feeling and my contrition.

That every consolation and blessing may be vouchsafed to yourself and to every member of your family, is the heartfelt prayer of

Yours, most resp'y,

(Signed,) J. W. WEBSTER.

Arrival of Jenny Lind.

NEW-YORK. Sunday Sept. 1. 1850.

The long expectation is over—Jenny Lind has landed on our shores. It was confidently expeeted yesterday morning that the Atlantic would arrive in the course of the day, and crowds collected on all points where a look-out down the bay could be had, eager to catch the first glimpse of her hull in the distance. The sky was very thick toward Sandy Hook, with a strong wind from the south-east, which led many to fear that the steamer would be detained till night. Nevertheless, large numbers lingered all forenoon around the Canal-street pier, where a sort of triumphal arcade, hung with flags, had been erected.

Towards one o'clock two guns were heard in the direction of Sandy Hook, and immediately after the signal flag of a steamer was run up at the telegraph station below Clifton. In a few minutes the atlantic hove in sight, and her giant bulk looming through the light mist which still lay on the outer bay.

The passengers were all above, grouped about the bulwarks, or looking after their effects amid a wilderness of baggage. On the top of a light deck-house, erected over the forward companion-way, sat the subject of the day's exeitement—the veritable Jenny Lind—as fresh and rosy as if the sea had spared her its usual discomforts, and enjoying the novel interest of everything she saw, with an apparent unconciousness of tho observation she excited.

Mdile. Lind was dressed with great taste and simplicity. She wore a visite of rich black cashmere over a dress of silver-gray silk, with a pale blue silk hat, and black veil. At her feet lap a silky little lap-dog, with ears almost half the length of its body; it was of that rare breed which are worth their weight in gold, and was a present from queen Victoria.

As the vessel neared Canal-street pier, the interest was increased by the spectacle of some thirty or forty thousand persons congregrated on all the abjacent piers and shipping, as well as all the roofs and windows fronting the water. The spars and riggins of vessels—the bulkheads along the wharves, and every other spot commanding a sight, were crowded while every fender at the Hoboken-st. ferry house was topped with a piece of living statuary.—in addition to the usual flags at the pier, a splendid Sweedish banner was floating in the air. From all quarters, crowds of persons could be seen hurrying down towards the Atlantic's dock.

The Atlantic ran past the pier as she came up, turned and went down stream some distance, and then glided slowly into her place. Some little time elapsed before she could be made fast and the gangway adjusted. The immense crowd was kept away from the immediate neighborhood of the vessel by the gate across the pier, inside of which about fifty persons had been admitted.

We learned from those who boarded the Atlantic that the crowd on shore was most dense and suffocating and that five or six persons had been pushed into the dock in the struggle, but were rescued without injury. Many had been in waiting on the ground for several hours.

The carriage containg the freight of song was started with difficulty, owing to the enthusiastic crowd around it. Mdlle. Lind and her cousin, Mdlle Ahamansen, occupied the back seat; the former bowed repeatedly as she passed through the gathered thousands. The people fell back respectfully and made way, literally heaping the carriage with flowers as she passed along.

Her arrival created nearly as much excitement in the Irving house as in the streets. There are at present 530 guests in the house, and each several one is anxious to get a glimpse of her. All the passages leading to her apartments were crowded—Throughout the evening crowds continued to collect about the hotel, and so incessant were their calls that she was obliged to appear twice again, at the windows. Finally, being quite exhausted by the excitement of the day, she retired, and her faithful Sweedish servants kept watch to prevent disturbance.

THE SERENADE.

After 11 o'clock the crowd began to gather again as it was known that the musical fund society of the city intended giving Mdlle. Lind a serenade at midnight. At the appointed time the serenading band, numbering 200 instruments, made its appearance, and taking its station in Reade-st played several national airs under the windows of Mdlle. Lind's apartments. The crowd by this time occupied all the space in front of the Irving house, extending some distance up and down Broadway—many thousands in all.

Immediately under Mdlle. Lind's parlor, fronting on Broadway, a company of firemen in their red shirts stationed themselves with their tall lanterns, mabing a very picteresque part of the scene. The view of tho crowd from the windows of the Irving house, was very grand and striking. The musicians now came into broadway, where they played a number of airs among which "Hail Columbia" and "Yankee Doodle" were predominant. Mdlle. Lind's appearance at the window was the signal for a storm of shouts and cheers prolonged almost without end.

During the performonce of Yankee Doodle, she kept time to the music with much spirit, and at the close requested its repetition. She listened, again with evident delight, clapping her hands when the band had finished.

She waived her handkerchief to the company and withdrew; but cheer on cheer followed and she was obliged to appear again and again, till the reluctant throng was finally obliged to dispurse.—Among those present in the street, were numbers of ladies.

Important and Interesting from Texas.

NEW-ORLEANS, August 27.

The Texas Governor's Message was referred to a committee of both Houses—13 in the Senate and 21 in the House. The first resolution, passed unanimously by the Committe, was as follows: "That Texas will maintain the integrity of her territories at all hazard." On the 16th, a bill was introduced into the Senate authorizing the governor to raise five regiments of 1,000 men each—the pay same as the United States troops of the same class, each volunteer furnishing his own horse and arms. The bounty, half a section of land for three months' service, whole sections for six two sections for twelve months. The Governor is authorized to command personally.

Capt. Love has returned from an exploring expedition up the Rio Grande. He ascended 1,400 miles with a keel-boat, aud reports steamboat navigation practicable 1,000 miles.

Indian depredations, murders, &c. continue.—The papers notice several skirmishes with our troops.

Among the true friends of various Reforms, intended for the benefit of the laboring classes, and brought before the Legislature last year, Mr. CHARLES D. HINELINE, of Camden, occupied a foremost rank. The projects to equalize Taxation among all persons according to the property they own—to disseminate educuation among all the children of the State—to exempt from sale $200 worth of property, where the defendent was really poor—to protect the children employed in factories from overwork, by limiting the day's labor to ten hours—the abolishment of the freehold qualification—the right of the people to frame a charter for municipal government to suit themselves, and not to have those palmed upon them, to suit the interest of a few speculators (as was the case with the Camden and Burlington city charters)—all found in Mr. Hineline an able and untiring friend. He never deserted his post, when the peculiar interests of his constituents was at stake, or the interests of the people generally. He cannot be spared from the public counsels next session, when these questions are all again to be contested, and we hope, with better results. We do not know that he will be a candidate, but if our voice could be heard in Camden, we would counsel his nomination. In that event, we do not doubt of his triumphant re-election.

Certainly the People of Camden, of all political parties, will not think of sending any other person. Never were their interests more faithfully represented. We trust to see more men of the same stamp elected to the next legislature. Passaic of course will not neglect to send the able and truly democratic member, Mr. Thomas D. Hoxey. These two men especiallw deserve the thanks of the People of New-Jersey for the stand they took in the cause of reform—advocating with distinguished ability every beneficial measure. We also trust to see a change, to a more liberal and democratic standard, of members from this county. We do not want men who continually oppose the best interests of the people.—More anon.—[Ed.

☞ Reader, every man of intelligence and reflection, every prosperous farmer or business man, will tell you that in no possible way can you more judiciously and beneficially expend ten shillings, than in paying for the Planfield Gazette. They will tell you that if you do not take a newspaper that you most sadly neglect your own interest; and if you have a family, by taken one a short time only, you will be convinced that you have sadly neglected theirs. If you do take one, you undoubtedly know their value, and we are convinced that after perusing our's, you will find yourself uneasy and be dissatisfied with yourself until you subscribe for it. As it is published every Thursday, it makes it very convenient for those who live at a distance and who visit Palinfield on that day for tailor-work, or on other business, to accommodate themselvess with it. Certainly, where a newspaper can be had for the trifling sum of ten shillings a year, none will fail to avail themselves of the opportunity.

FOR FEMALES AND MALES

Dr. Lazetti's Juno Cordial, or Protective Elixir.

This is the only actual remedy ever discovered for impetency, Genital Debility, Nocturnal Emissions, and all diseases occasioned by certain secret habits; and many of the nostrums recently recommended for the same complaints are worthless imitations which its unrivalled excellence. fame and popularity have brought into the market. The Medical Faculty of Europe and the United States are unanimous in their recommendations of the Juno Cordial and have not given their sanction in a single instance that has been authenticated, to any compound for the same purposes. The nature of the maladies relieved by the Juno Cordial are generally such as to leave the publication of certificates of cures out of the question, or the proprietor could produce a host of the most conclusive testimony to show that the great reputation that it enjoys was not accidentally obtained, but is firmly based upon its positive, and apparently miraculous virtues. In all directions are to be found the happy pareuts of healthy offspring, who would not have been so, but for this extraordinary preparption. And it is equally potent in the many diseases for which it is recommended. Objection has been naturally made to the price of the Juno Cordial, because the trash that has been thrown into the market in opposition to it is sold cheaper; but the fact is, the Cerdial cannot be afforded for less, and ought to be much dearer, as many of the ingredients which compose it are among the costliest things in nature; whereas the others are made up of cheap drugs, worth but little in money, and less in merit. We assure the reader that the utmost reliance may be placed on the Juno Cordial in the cure of the maladies mentioned above, and also those that follow, viz: Loss of Muscular Energy, Physical Lassitude and General Prostration, Irritability, and all Nervous Affections, Indigestion, Sluggishness of the Liver, Gleet, Lucorrhoea or Whites, and Flour Albus and every disease in any way connected with the disorder of the Procreative Functions—in all of which it will afford almost immediate relief, and, if used as directed, is almost certain to produce a positive and permanent cure. Persons about to marry, if conscious of any weakness or disability of a certain nature, should take this Cordial, as it will infallibly restore health and vigor in a brief period, and where want of offspring is a cause of regret, if recourse be had to it the most beneficial results may be anticipated with confidence. It is of priceless value to those without offspring. It has taken the precedence in Italy, and will in all other countries where it may become known.

To spread wide the blessings of this medicine, I have appointed Messrs. Judson & Co., of the City of New York, in the United States of America, my sole Agents for its sale; and none can be genuine unless it comes through them, and their signature is on the weapper.

MR. EDITOR: SIR—I understand there are severrl cases of Fever and Ague in our village and neighborhood and I feel it a duty to inform the community through your paper, that having suffered from that most disagreeable complaint for the last twelve months, and tried several medicines without any good result; a friend of mine (Mr. George Scriven 114 Wall-st N. Y.) made me a present of a bottle of Dr. Osgoods Cholagogue which I am happy to say has entirely cured me, and I have no hesitation to pronounce it a most invaluable medicine for that complaint, I therefore cheerfully reccommend it to all those interested. TO MECHANICS, INVENTORS and Manufacturers.

The publishers of the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN respectfully give notice that the VIth Volume of this valuable journal will be commenced on the Twenty first of September next, offering a favorable opportunity for all to subscribe who take an interest in the progress and development of the Mechanics, Arts, and Manufactures of our country. The character of the Scientific American is too well known throughout the country to require a detailed account of the various subjects discussed through its columns.

The aim of the publishers has always been to render it the most thorough and useful scientific journal in the country; and to judge of this, by comparing its circulation and influence with other publications of the same class, they have the unequivocal evidence of its value as the leading exponent of the Arts and Sciencies.

It will be published WEEKLY as heretofore, IN QUARTO FORM on fine paper, affording at the end of the year an ILLUSTRATED ENCYCLOPÆDIA of over FOUR HUNDRED PAGES, with an index, and from FIVE to SIX HUNDRED ORIGINAL ENGRAVINGS described by letters of reference, besides a vast amount of practical information concerning the progress of SCIENTIFIC and MECHANICAL IMPROVEMENTS CHEMISTRY, CIVIL ENGINEERING, MANUFACTURING in its various branches, ARCHITECTURE, MASONRY, BOTANY—in short it embraces the entire range of the Arts and Sciences.

It also possesses an original feature not found in any other weekly journal in the country, viz: an OFFICIAL LIST of PATENT CLAIMS, prepared expressly for its columns at the Patent Office, thus constituting it the "AMERICAN REPERTORY OF INVETIONS."

In connection with the publishing department the proprietors transact the most extensive Home and Foreign Patent business done in this country; consequently their facilities must be correspondingly superior.

CHAIN PUMPS.

THE best machine for raising water in use. This Pump has many advantages over any other in use on account of its simplicity of construction, being made wholly of wood and galvanized iron, not liable to get out of order or to get deranged in any way. It can never freeze in winter, and can be put in wells of any depth.

It takes less power to work it than any other machine, to raise the same amount of water.

It is never obstructed by gravel or sand; it keeps the water perfectly sweet and fresh; the action of the chain mixes the gases with the water always keeping it lively and fresh; on ceasing to work it, the water in the tube descends to the level of the water in the well; on commencing to work the pump, the first water that is drawn is from the bottom of the well.

☞ Application can be made to the subscriber or Ephraim W. Briant at P. M. French's store in Plainfield, who will be able to give satisfactory information in relation to said Pump.

GREAT.

SPRING & SUMMER MEDICINE.

BRISTOL'S COMPOUND EXTRACT OF SARSAPRILLA. The value of this great American Specific for all diseases and disorders generated by impure blood, is universally known and appreciated.

TWENTY-FIVE PHYSICIANS,

among the most eminent in this country, have recently signed and caused to be published, a document certifying that BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA was the best preparation of the kind in existence, and that they

USED IT DAILY IN THEIR PRACTICE,

with the happiest effects. Remember that for

MORE THAN TWENTY YEARS

it has been before the public, performing in that time

MILLIONS OF CURES!

During that period multitudes of Sarsaprilla, so called, have been palmed upon the public, but no other has

STOOD THE TEST OF TIME!

Every year has added thousands upon thousands of bottles to its sales, its cures, and the

IMMENSE MASS OF CERTIFICATES

Which, if printed and bound would form a library of themselves! The victim of

HEREDITARY SCROFULA

with suppurating glands, honey-combed flesh, and caries eating into his bones, finds in BRISTOL'S SARSAPRILLA a balm for his afflictions. His horrible torments are assuaged and his malady not only relieved, but.

PERMANENTLY CURED!

It may be safely asserted from the results of nearly a quarter of a century's experience, that

BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA,

is beyond all comparison the

MOST WONDERFUL REMEDY ON EARTH

for the following diseases and all others proceeding from.

VITIATED BLOOD.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, Rheumatism, Obstinate Cutaneous Eruptions, Pimples or Pustules on the Face, Blotches, Boils, Chronic Sore Eyes, Ring Worm or Tetter, Scald Head, Enlargement and Pains of the Bones and Joints, Stubborn Ulcers, Syphilitic Symptoms, Sciata or Lumbago, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury.

Acites, or Dropsy

Exposure, or

Imprudence in Life, Liver Complaint, Ague and Fever, Intermitting Fever, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Plethora of Blood in the Head, Piles, Pains in the Back, Side, Breast or Loins, and all forms of Muscular, Glandular, and Skin Diseases.

It is also a sovereign specific for General Debility and the best renovator of a broken constitution. It braces and reinvigorates every organ, promotes activivity and regularity in every function, and produces that condition of the whole physical system which is the best security for ☞ LONG LIFE!

Let all who wish to purge the blood from the impurities contracted from the free indulgence of the appetite during the winter, and to prepare the system to

RESIST SUMMER EPIDEMICS,

Resort now to

BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA

the gentle aperient, the powerful tonic, the unrivalled antiseptic, and great builder up and

FORTIFIER OF THE SYSTEM!

The record which has been kept since the introduction of Bristol's Sarsaparilla, twenty odd years ago, exhibits an aggregate of known cures which established its invaluable properties. Among the recorded facts are the following, in round tumbers:

Cured of Summer Complaints, 10,000.

100,000 Cured of Scrofula.

Cured of Rheumatism, 58,000

150,000 Cured of Diseases of the Skin.

Cured of Liver Complaints, 35,000.

27,000 Cured of Diarrhœa and Dysentery.

There is not space in an advertisement for a full enumeration, but the cures amount to

A GRAND TOTAL OF ONE MILLION.

The public faith in it has never wavered—never can waver: for it is founded on experience, just as their want of faith in other spurious compounds is also founded in experience. They

FLY FROM MINERAL NOSTRUMS

to seek hope, life, and vigor from this

PURELY VEGETABLE REMEDY.

And are Never Disappointed!

Therefore, however broken in health and spirits, however loathsome to himself and others, let no man despair of recovery. Let the patient only understand that Bristol's Sarsaparilla is an infallible remedy for only persuade him for his own life's sake to try it, and those who know what it has acomplished will have no hesitation in predicting his speedy rostoration to health.

A LEGION OF DISEASES,

As a means of regulating all the functions of

WOMAN'S DELICATE ORGANIZATION

it has no equal in the materia medica, and at that critical period of life, when the first stage of her decline commences, its cordial and invigorating properties will enable her to

PASS THE CRISIS SAFELY.

The undersigned being acquainted with some of the ingredints of HUTCHINGS' VEGETABLE DYSPEPSIA BITTERS, and having used it for some time in his practice with every desired effect, here commends this medicine from the certainty of its effect and gives it a preference over all preparations in medicine for that distressing complaint, Dyspepsia.

T. HARDENBERGH, M. D., No. 1 Beach street N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half; during a greater portion of this time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself until he was recommended to try HUTCHINGS' DYSPEPSIA BITTERS; he very soon derived a benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of HUTCHINGS' BITTERS for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine. L B. WYMAN. 23 Burling Slip.

New York, September 3. 1849.

The following certificate is from M. B. Brady, the celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness. I was advised to take Hutching's Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease, and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia.

M. B. BRADY, No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

The proprietor of this medicine has received many other certificates of cures, equally remarkable, of the various diseases for which this preparation is applicable; but the above are deemed necessary to satisfy any unprejudiced mind of its value and superiority above all other preparations.

NEW MAGNETO ELECTRIC MACHINES,

For medical application.—These instruments possesses a great superiority over all others for medical use, the shocks being obtained entirely from permanent magnets, and the mechanism is so arranged as to cause the current of induced electricity to pass always in one direction. They require no galvanic battery to put them in action and consequently there is no need of acids or other liquids, so objectionable in the other kinds now in use, and they are always ready for immediate application, and are in nowise liable to get out of order. All that is necessary to put the instrument in action is simply to turn a small handle, which could be done by a child.

They are put up in a very portable form, being secured in small neat cases, from which they do not required to be moved.

CHERRY PECTORAL:

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, ASTHMA, WHOOPING-COUGH AND CONSUMPTION.

The uniform success which has attended the use of this preparation—its salutary effect—its power to relieve and cure affections of the Lungs, have gained for it a celebrity equalled by no other medicine. We offer it to the afflicted with entire confidence in its virtues, and the full belief that it will subdue and remove the severest attacks of disease upon the throat and Lungs. These results, as they become publicly known, very naturally attract the attention of medical men and philanthropists everywhere.—What is their opinion of CHERRY PECTORAL may be seen in the following:—

VALENTINE MOTT, M. D.,

Prof. Surgery Med. College, New York, says:—

"It gives me pleasure to certify the value and efficacy of Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL, which I consider peculiarly adapted to cure diseases of the Throat and Lungs."

THE RT.REV. LORD BISHOP FIELD

writes in a letter to his friend, who was fast sinking under an affection of the Lungs:—"Try the CHERRY PECTORAL and if any medicine can give you relief, with the blessing of God that will."

CPIEF JUSTICE EUSTIS,

of Louisiana, writes "That a young daughter of his was cured of several severe attacks of Croup by the "CHERRY PECTORAL."

ASTHMA AND BRONCHITIS.

The Canadian Journal of Medical Science states, "That Asthma and Bronchitis so prevalent in this inclement climate, has yielded with surprising rapidity to Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL, and we cannot too strongly recommend this skilful preparation to the Profession and public generally."

Let the relieved sufierer speak for himself:—

HARTFORD, Jan. 26. 1847.

Dr. J. C. Ayer—Dear Sir:—Having been rescued from a painful and dangerous disease by your medicine, gratitude prompts me to send you this acknowledgment, not only in justice to you, but for the information of others in like affliction.

A slight cold upon the lungs, neglected at first became so severe that spitting of blood, a violent cough and profuse night sweats followed and fastened upon me. I became emaciated, could not sleep, was distressed by my cough, and a pain through my chest, and in short had all the alarming symptoms of quick consumption. No medicine seemed at all to reach my case, until I providentially tried your CHERRY PECTORAL, which soon relieved and now has cured me.

Yours with respect. E. A. STEWART.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 17, 1848

Dr. Ayer, Lowell—Dear Sir:—I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form; so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breath on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my Physician prescribed, as an experiment, your CHERRY PECTORAL.

At first it seemed to make me worse, but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

BLAKE'S PATENT

FIRE PROOF PAINT.

THE original and only genuine article, that can be obtained, without subjecting the purchaser to a prosecution for an infringement of my Patent. It has not yet been two year since the first counterfeit, was got up, but in that short time has proved itself, entirely worthless, as will be seen by the statement of more than twenty of the most respectable inhabitants of Sharon Ohio where mine as well as the Counterfeits are made. They say that we have examined recently, a house that was painted, with

Blake's Patent Fire Proof Paint,

SIX YEARS since (as an experiment) and now find the coating as hard as slate or stone. The action of the weather having no effect than to indurate and harden the substance. We will farther state that it has been such a complete failure in all the other kinds of stuff got up, and sold here, called Fire Proof paint (except Blakes) that his only is considered worth useing.

(Signed) Barnabus Crane and 20 others.

Hon. Daniel Webster has recently examined the patent and at the close of his report says, "I have no doubt whatever, but Mr Blake's Patent is good and valid. [104.

MARRIAGE:

WHY SO OFTEN UNHAPPY.

THE CAUSES AND THE REMEDY!

MANY and many a wife endures years of bodily suffering and of mental anguish, prostrate and helpless, embittering her life, that of her husband, and hazarding the future welfare of her children, arising from causes which, if known, would have spared the suffering, the anguish to the wife, and to the husband embarrassments and pecuniary difficulties having their origin in the mind being weighed down and harassed in consequence of the sickness of the companion of his bosom.

How important that the causes should be known to every wife, to every husband, that the dreadful and harrowing consequences to the health and happiness of both may be avoided! Life is too short and health too precious to admit any portion of the one to be spent without the full enjoyment of the other. The timely possession of a little work entitled as follows has been the means of saving the health and the life of thousands, as over

copies have been sold since the first edition was issued.

The author has been induced to advertise it by the urgent and pressing request of those who have been indebted to its publication for all they hold dear (that all may have an opportunity of obtaining it), and who have favored him with thousands of letters of encomium, some of which are annexed to the advertisement.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

Twentieth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, $1.00.

THIS WORK IS INTENDED ESPECIALLY FOR THE MARRIED, or those contemplating marriage, as it discloses important secrets which should be known to them particularly.

Here, every female—the wife, the mother—the one either budding into womanhood, or the one in the decline of years, in whom nature contemplates an important change—can discover the causes, symptoms, and the most efficient remedies and most certain mode of cure, in every complaint to which her sex is subject.

The revelations contained in its pages have proved a blessing to thousands, as the innumerable letters received by the author (which he is permitted by the writers to publish) will attest.

SICKLY AND UNHAPPY WIVES.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Dayton, O.

"DAYTON, May 1, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU—My Dear Sir: 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion,' for which I enclosed one dollar to your address, came safely to hand. I would not have troubled you with these few lines, but that I am impelled by a sense of gratitude, for myself and wife, to give utterance to our sincere and heartfelt emotions.

"My wife has been perceptibly sinking for some three years or more, in consequence of her great anguish and suffering some months before and during confinement; every successive one more and more debilitated and prostrated her, putting her life in imminent danger, and which was, on the last occasion, despaired of. I supposed that this state of things was inevitable, and resigned myself to meet the worst. At this time (now about two months) I heard your book highly spoken of as containing some matters reaching my case. On its receipt and perusal, I can not express to you the relief it afforded my distressed mind and the joy its pages imparted to my wife, on learning that the great discovery of M. M. Desomeaux provided a remedy. It opened a prospect to me which I little conceived was possible. No pecuniary consideration can ever repay the obligations I am under to you for having been the means of imparting to us the matters contained in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' But for this, ere another year would have passed over my head, in all human probability my wife would have been in her grave, and my children left motherless."

Extract from a Letter.

Competence and Health.

"LANCASTER, PA., Oct. 24, 1847.

"MY DEAR SIR: I know you will have the kindness to bear with me in encroaching upon your time, while I acknowledge (in behalf of myself and wife) the obligations we feel ourselves under to you in having made known certain matters, contained in your most invaluable 'Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' It has been worth its weight in gold to me. If I express myself rather warmly, you will see that I can not do so too warmly, when I inform you of the extent to which I have, through it, been benefited. I will state my situation when I obtained your book through the merest curiosity I look upon it as one of the most fortunate events of my life. I had been married some ten years, and was the father of seven children. I was long struggling unceasingly, to the end that I might gain a moderate competency; but the results of my utmost exertions at the end left me about where I was at the beginning of each year; and that only, with the most stinted economy, sufficing with barely the necessaries of life. Finally, this constant effort was beginning to have its effect upon my health: I felt less capable to endure its continuance, while I felt the necessity of perseverance.

"This constant, unceasing struggle on my part was imperative, in consequence of the prostrated condition of my wife (with occasional intermission) for six years, much of the time confined to her bed, and of course incapable of taking the charge and management of household affairs. Her condition arose from causes of which I was ignorant. Oh! what would I have given had I the six years to live over again! What would my wife have given to have been spared the long days and still longer nights prostrate on a bed of sickness!—all of which would have been avoided, had I then seen a copy of 'THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION.'"

From a Physician.

DANGEROUS DELIVERIES,

OBSTRUCTIONS, IRREGULARITIES, &C.

How many are suffering from obstruction or irregularities peculiar to the female system, which undermine their health, the effects of which they are ignorant, and for which their delicacy forbids seeking medical advice! How many suffer from prolapsus uteri (falling of the womb), or from fluor-albus (weakness, debility, &c., &c.)! How many are in constant agony for many months preceding confinement! How many have difficult if not dangerous deliveries, and whose lives are jeoparded during such time, will find in its pages the means of prevention, amelioration, and relief!

Extract from a Letter.

To those just Married.—"Had I known!"

"PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU: Had I known of the im portant matters treated of in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion' some years ago, how much misery I might have escaped! I have suffered years from causes which you point out in your book, without knowing what to do. I obtained a copy, and found my case treated of. I trust every female will avail herself of the information contained in its pages."

Letters are daily received of this character, unnecessary to present.

To those yet unmarried, but contemplating marriage, or perhaps hesitating as to the propriety of incurring the responsibilities attendant upon it, the importance of being possessed of the revelations contained in these pages, so intimately involving their future happiness, can not be appreciated.

It is, of course, impracticable to convey more fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage; neither is it necessary, since it is every one's duty to become possessed of knowledge whereby the sufferings to which a wife, a mother, or a sister, may be subject, can be obviated.

☞ Copies will be sent by Mail free of Postage to the Purchaser.

☞ On the receipt of One Dollar, "THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION" is sent (mailed free) to any part of the United States. All letters must be post-paid (except those containing a remittance), and addressed to Dr. A. M. MAURICEAU, Box 1224, New York City. Publishing Office, No. 129 Liberty st., New York.

Over 20,000 Copies have been sent by MAIL within three months with perfect safety and certainty.

Booksellers and agents engaged in its sale, are making handsome competencies from the ready and extraordinary demand for it, and the extremely liberal terms afforded them.

Active local or travelling Agents, throughout the United States and Canadas, will be supplied on the same terms. Communications are required to be POST-PAID and addressed as above.

☞ CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against various catch-penies intended to be palmed off upon them initiating the title of the work as "The Married LADIES' Medical Companion," and various other titles. The title of the work is "THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION," BY Dr. A. M. Mauriceau. [105

Arnica LINIMENT

A CERTAIN CURE FOR

RHEUMATISM!

SORE THROAT, BURNS, SCALDS, PAINS IN THE LIMBS, CHEST, SIDE, AND BACK, SPRAINS, BRUISES, CRAMPS, CHILBLAINS, ETC., ETC., ETC.

Price, Twenty-Five Cents.

This newly-invented oleaginous preparation of ARNICA has been, before offering it to the public, satisfactorily tested by several of our most respectable physicians, who were also made acquainted with the ingredients of which it is composed, and the peculiar process of compounding them. So confident is the inventor of its efficacy, that he has authorized every agent—in case it does not prove itself as represented—to take back any part of the bottle and return the full price of it.

The ARNICA LINIMENT will be found more penetrating, and to relieve the most acute pain in less time, than any other external remedy; at the same time it will not irritate the skin or cause it to smart, even if badly broken, as is not unfrequently the case with Burns and Scalds, but will remove the fire and cause the injured part to heal so rapidly as seldom to leave any scar.

Most, if not all, other liniments contain some irritating ingredient, such as pepper, spirits of hartshorn, oil of vitriol, muriatic acid, (spirits of salt,) combined with oil or alcohol, which cause the skin to smart very much, and the second application to be greatly dreaded, particularly by children; and the opinion is generally entertained that the more a liniment causes the flesh to burn and smart, the more good it will do. But this we are convinced is a very great mistake, and results in doing more injury than good: as, for instance, with SPRAINS, BRUISES, BURNS, SCALDS, CHILBLAINS, or any inflammation on or near the surface of the skin. All such exciting embrocations must naturally tend to increase the disease and prolong the cure.

A Child's Dream of a Star.

There was once a child, and he strolled about a good deal, and thought of a number of things. He had a sister, who was a child, too, and his constant companion. These two used to wonder all day long They wondered at the beauty of the flowers; they wondered at the height and blueness of the sky; the wondered at the depth oi the bright water; they wodered at the goodness and the power of God who made the lovely world.

They used to say to one another, sometimes, Supposing all the children upon earth were to die, would the flowers, and the water, and the sky, be sorry? They believed they would be sorry. For, say they, the buds are the children of the flowers, and the little playful streams that gambol down the hill-sides are the children of the water; and the smallest bright specks, playing at hide and seek in the sky all night, must surely be the children of the stars; and they would all be grieved to see their playmates the chilcren of men, no more.

There was one clear shining star that used to come out in the sky before the rest, near the church spire, above the graves. It was larger and more beautiful, they thought, than all the others, and every night they watched for it, standing hand in hand at a window. Whoever saw it first, cried out, "I see the star!" And often they cried out both together, knowing so well, when it would rise, and where. So they grew to be such friends with it, that before lying down in their beds, they always looked out once again, to bid it good night: and when they were turning round to sleep, they used to say, "God bless the star!"

But while she was still very young, oh very very young, the sister drooped, and came to be so weak that she could ne longer stand in the window at night; and then the child looked sadly out by himself, and when he saw the star, turned round and said to the pale face on the bed, "I see the star!" and then a smile would come upon the face, and a little weak voice used to say, "God bless my brother and the star!"

And so the time came, all too soon! when the child looked out alone. and when there was no face on the bed; and when there was a little grave among the graves not there before; and when the star made long rays down towards him, as he saw it through his tears.

Now, thefe rays were so bright, and they semed to make such a shining way from earth to heaven that when the child went to his solitary bed, he dreamed about the star; and dreamed that, lying where he was, he saw a train of people taken up that sparkling road by angels. And the star, opening, showed him a great world of light, where many more such angels waited to receive them.

All these angels, who were waiting, turned their beaming eyes upon the people who were carried up into the star, and some came out from the long rows in which they stood, and fell upon the people's necks, and kissed them tenderly, and went away with them down avenues of light, and were so happy in their company, that lying in his bed he wept for joy.

But, there were many angels who did not go with them, and among them one he knew. The patient face that once had lain upon the bed was gloirified and radient but his heart found out his sister among all the host.

His sister's angel lingered near the entrance of the star. and said to the leader among those who brought the people thither:

"Is my brother come?"

And he said "No."

She was turning hopefully away, when the child stretched out his arms, and cried "O, sister, I am here! Take me?" and then she turned her beaming eyes upon him, and it was night; and the star was shining into the room, making long rays down towards him as he saw it through his tears.

From that hour forth, the child looked out upon the star as on the Home he was to go to, when his time should come; and he thought that he did not belong to the earth alone, but to the star too, because of his sister's angel gone before.

There was a baby born to be a brother to the child; and while he was so litte that he never yet had spoken word, he stretched his tiny form out on his bed, and died.

Again the child dreamed of the opened star, and of the company of angels, and the train of people, and the rows of angels with their beaming eyes all turned upon those people's faces.

Said his sister's angel to the leader:

"Is my brother come?"

And he said "Not that one but another."

As the child beheld his brother's angels in her arms, he cried, "O, sister, I am here! Take me!" And she turned and smiled upon him, and the star was shining.

He grew to be a young man, and was busy at his books when an old servant came to him, and said:

"Thy mother is no more. I bring her blessing on her darling son!"

Again at night he saw the star, and all that former company. Said his sister's angel to the leader:

"Is my brother come?"

And he said, "Thy mother!"

A mighty cry of joy went forth through all the star, because the mother was re-united to her two children. And he stretched out his arms and cried, "O, mother, sister and brother, I am here! Take me!" And they answered him "Not yet," and the star was shining.

He grew to be a man, whose hair was turning gray, and he was sitting in his chair by the fireside heavy with grief, and with his face bedewed with tears, when the star opened once again.

Said his sister's angel to the leader "Is my brother come?"

And he said, "Nay, but his maiden daughter."

And the man who had been the child saw his daughter, newly lost to him, a celestial creature amongst those three, and he said "My daughter's head is on my sister's bosom, any her arm is round my mother's neck, and at her feet there is old time, and I can bear the parting from her, GOD be praised?"

And the star was shining.

Thus the child came to be an old man, and his steps were slow and feeble, and his back was bent. And one night as he lay upon his bed his children standing round, he cried, as he had cried, so long ago:

"I see the star!"

They whispered to one another "He is dying."

And he said, "I am. My age is falling from me like a garment, and I move towards the star as a child. And O, my Father, now I thank thee that it has so often opened, to receive those dear ones who await me!"

And the star was shining; and it shines upon his grave.—Household Words.

Choosing a Profession.

BY MISS ELIZA A. CHASE.

One pleasant afternoon in summer, two school boys were seated beneath a tree, musing, as neither seemed inclined to conversation. At length the larger turned to the other, and said:—"Well, Ernest, school is over, and a long vacation is before us; how do you intend to spend your leisure time?"

"I shall look about and decide upon my future business, as the close of the next term I must leave school. I intend to visit different shops, and choose a suitable trade."

"Learn a trade! You do not mean what you say, Ernest. Why not choose a profession?"

"Because, William, the professions, as you term them, are already over-stocked, and I deem a trade the safest and best business. In these days of improvement, a mechanic will always find sure and profiitable employment."

"A mechanic! That is too small business for me. I will be a physician, a lawyer, or a merchant; none of your low trades for me, Ernest."

"I differ from you, William, in calling any honest employment low. But for machinists, where would be our steamboats, railroads, and the like? I am much pleased with the business of making machinery for steam-engines; and as I have already told you, I shall become a little more acequainted with the various trades, and choose such as I prefer."

"And I shall do no such thing. I will be a professional man, and while I am wealthy and honored, you will be a poor mechanic."

"I hope you will succeed, William; but time will show whether I shall be a poor mechanic."

Ernest Graham was the only child of a widow in limited circumstances; but he possessed what is more valuable than wealth, a mind stored with correct principles and useful information. Knowing that he must depend entirely on himself, he wisely adopted the resolutfon of finding some occupation, the profits of which would increase with the growing interests of the country.

Accordingly, after visitiug diffent places, and by his intelligent inquires eliciting much valuable and important information, he engaged as an apprentice to a machanist.

His studies were not neglected, however, and all the time he could spare from his laborious employment was devoted to the cultivation of his mind.—Being very fond of the study of mechanics, he soon united the theory with the practice of his art. By his intelligent, energy and faithfulness, he won the confidence of his employer, and ere long was admitted as partner in the thriving establishment.

At the age of twenty-one William Langdon left college and in a short time commenced business as a merchant, with a capital of ten thousand dollars. His father dying soon after, left him sole owner of the whole property; and in a few years, by imprudence and extravagance, he became so involved that he was obliged to compound with his creditors for fifty cents on a dollar. He then went to the west, to try his fortune there.

At the age of thirty-five these men again met.—William Langdon had returned, with a broken constitution and a helpless family, and, failing elsewhere, applied to Earnest Graham for employment. "It is too small business" were the werds which rose to the lips of Graham; but, suppressing the taunt he kindly extended aid to the unfortunate man

"While I am wealthy and honored, you will be a poor mechanic," William had said, in his boyish days; but the fact was far different. Ernest Graham had obtained a patent for valuable improvements in machinery, and instead of the "poor mechanic" was the "wealthy and honored" inventor; while William Langdon earned a sustenance as book-keeper in the firm of his former school-mate.

A SINGULAR CASE.—A Miss Purbeck recently died in Salem, Mass., who had been suffering from a painful and singular malady for nineteen years. When she was about fourteen years old during a fever, there was a large gathering of some kind in the back of her neck. It was lanced, but so unskilfully, that she was thrown into a great deal of nervous agitation. Shortly after she was turned from a sleigh, and received a severe blow on the upper part of the spine. When about twenty years old she became subject to spasms, which continued up to the day of her death. She never left her bed, took a little nourishment, struck her face often violently with the palm of her hand, opened and closed her month with such force that sometimes broke her teeth, while her right shoulder blade made a noise as if it was dislocated. But what is peculiarly curious about this case is, that during the whole period of her suffering, she never slept for more than a few minutes at a time. By taking large doses of opium, she could produce a semi unconsciousness, but no profound sleep.

The Haunted House.

AN ARKANSAS SKETCH.

Nick Trammel was one winter evening sitting by the fire of the only public house in Ecore Fabre, a little excited by the fumes of numerous recent potations, but in excellent humour with himself, his company, and the world in general. There was quite a crowd present, anxiously waiting for Nick to "branch out" into one of his funny stories, a thing which he seldom failed to do, when in good spirits. Nick's house, situated far away in the heart of the wilderness, had a wide spread notoriety for being the favorite resort of goblins and spirits of the damned, and the neighborhood was as studiously avoided by the believers in demonology in that wild region, as certain places in the land of witchcraft were in the olden time, when the startling notice of "spirits seen here," nailed up against a tree, forbade the approach of timorous spirits.

The company had been joking Nick about the stories in circulation, concerning strange sounds said to have been heard both at noonday and at midnight, in and about his dwelling, which was situated near the Texan frontier. Nick took it all in good part, and being earnestly solicited to give his views upon the subject of supernatural appearances in general, after treating all hands around to ardent spirits, undertook to enlighten the audience with regard to the spirits supposed to hold revels in his domicil, and with which it was thought that he had a certain kind of understanding.

"You see, 'cording to my 'sperience, speerets is all flam flum—sorter flash in the pan fol de rol. I never seen enny speerets but bar-room speerets, and them are speerets I like to meet with. But 'sarning' them speerets about my clarin,' I can settle your curiosity quicker nor I never settled a bar's dander. I can guv you the whole carcumstance in the twinkle of a panther's eye watchin' a deer at the drink.

"You know what sort of a she-critter my wife is, she'd out count'nance an owl, and outfight a grizzel bar—a wild varmint can't look look her in the eye. Well, one arfternoon, she and I had got into a little sort of tantrum about sumthin' or other, and I put out to the corn patch to see what the niggers war doin'. Well, as I war kinder santrin' down the path I seen two of tho niggers away off at a par of bars, when they orter bin hoin' corn. I cut a big cudgel, intendin' to give 'em Jesse, and toddled on to whar they war. I took a sorter circum-go-round-'em shute, to keep the rascals from seein' me till I got rite upon 'em, but afore I got thar, I seed sumthin' more than common was the matter. One was on one side the fence and tuther on tuther, and they was a wrigglin,' and twistin', and yellin' like wimmen at er revivel meetin'. I put my trotters into quick motion, and when I arrive, I found they'd got a whoppin' wild cat stretched across the fence. I diskivered arterwuds that the wild cat had jumpt on one of 'em as he was gettin' over the bars, an' that the other had grabbed the animal by the hind trotters, and thar they'd bin a holdin' him acrost the fence ever since mornin'. I didn' stan, about askin, partiklers then, but I ran up as quick as 'er a flash of Dupont's powder, to see what they war doin,. Just as I came pop upon the fun, one of the niggers bawled out:

"'Take him off, massa, we've got enuff of 'im,' and with that both let go, and sure enuff, I did take 'im off, for the varmint sprang ker-whack right on my shoulders. O Jimminy! how his finger nails stuck in! I put off at a dog trot for the house, thinkin' that the old 'oman's face would make him let go. I made long tracks, I tell you, an' at last, with the varmint tryin' all the time to gnaw through my bar skin cap, I bolted plum into the house, whar my wife, not half over her tantrums, was gittin' ready to bake, and so was slashing away like all possessed.

"'Take him off!' I bawled, but instead er that, she drawed herself into a corner and commenced to laugh like er fiend er Bedlam.

"That made me mad, and the more I bawled the more she laughed, till at last I made a desperate resolution. The old 'oman had just filled the oven chock full er pine wood, an' had er rousin' fire in the chimney. I turned a sorter whirler-bout, and fell backerds plum inter the fire, thinkin' that the varmint would have the worst er the bargain. An' so it turned out, for the critter fetched one all fired yell, an' went plum into the oven among the pitchwood. I got up mighter sudden, I tell you, all a fire, but I didn't stan' about that. I got the old gun, and was just agoin' to fire inter the oven whar the wild cat was lickin' himself and snappin' his eyes kinder, when the old 'oman jumped on me, and would not let me bang away. I suppose because she felt sorter friendly towards the varmint for givin' me sich a goujin'.

"'Verry well, old 'oman,' sez I, 'you may have 'im all to yourself.'

"So I 'stinguished my rags—for I'd been smokin' like er volcaner all the time—took the old gun on my shoulder, and made tracks.

Arter I went off, the old 'oman got a big case knife and a long stick, an' tried to get Mr. Cat out. But he either liked his new quarter or was afraid of the old 'oman's vinegar phix, and wouldn't move no more nor a bar in a crotch. At last the old 'oman got her dander up, an' swore she'd fix the varmint; and so she sot fire to the pitch wood, and blocked up the oven so the critter couldn't git out! An' then such a crackin'o' pitch wood, such a spittin' an' catorwaulin', an' such a rippin' an, tearin' you never heard in all yer born days. I come back just afore night, an' found a lot of hosses hitched to the trees, an' a crowd o' people listenin' to the hell yell kicked up by the wild cat.

"What in the d—l is the matter here?' asked one of the people of the old 'oman, who was a knitin' in the door.

"'Oh, nothin',' answered the old 'oman, and kept on a knittin'.

"I went off an' slept in the woods, an' I could hear the varmint's consarned noise more nor half a mile. The people staid round all night, and said the devil must be in the house, an' so she was as to that matter, but they and everybody else allers stopped and hark't when they'd pass the house, expectin' to hear the groans and lamentations of some infernal devils or other. The old 'oman has never said wild cat since. That's the way my house got the name of the haunted house. Boys, what are you agwine to drink?"—True Delta.

Education the basis of Liberty.

The importance of the principles involved in the coming election, indeed in all and every election held by the people, should induce them to seriously consider their importance, the inestimable value of a vote thereon to their own happiness and welfare and to the peace and prosperity of their country. Every man is interested individually, for his family, his friends and his country, and should therefore seriously ponder the relative value of every measure to their happiness and prosperity. Every man being equally and inalienably entitled to equal rights, and to pursue happiness according to the dictates of their consciences, being simply controlled by the equal and inalienable rights of his fellow man, it therefore behoves all, the rich and the poor, the high and the low to cast their votes for all measures that are best calculated to promote these ends, and against all those from whatever scource arising, that are calculated to retard or prevent the enjoyment of them. The question, as to whether a measure will promote party ascendency and aggrandisement should never for a moment be entertained. Will the measure promote the best interest and equal rights of all the members of this confederacy? This is the only question to be considered, and every man owes it to himself, his country and to the best interests of the human race to decide it aright.

To secure these ends, and especially under a republican or representative government, it becomes imperatively necessary for the people through all and every incipient step and intermediate stage of action, that they should superintend, or rather that they should be part and parcel and identified with every action or measure, the principles of which may so vitally affect their interests.

The great hindrance heretofore in all governments of the earth has been, that the people not knowing, have been deprived of their rights. This has also been too much the case under our own government; a few interested and designing individuals have usurped and endowed themselves with rights which are general, which all are equally and inalienably entitled to. A more general knowledge of man's rights prevailing, the people demand their restoration—hence the contention between the people and those who aspire to be a privileged class. Never but by a determination on the part of the people to enjoy equal rights, and then too but by a full knowledge of their value, will those who have so long enjoyed special privileges be made to yield them up.

Knowledge therefore being so essentially necessary to a proper understanding and just appreciation of the value of Liberty, we trust that all, that every single individual who exercises the privileges of a freeman, irrespective of all party considerations, will demand that those who are to be selected as our rulers and law makers shall be those who have liberality and independence enough to give the people knowledge. Let that best, that only certain guarantee to the perpetuity of our government, the happiness of the people,--the School House—crown every hill top and grace every valley; then will degradation and vice the consequent companions of ignorance and misery be banished, and virtue, contentment and happiness prevail over the land. This is the grand starting point under a republican government. Let Education cast its benign influences over the ignorant, the degraded, the selfish, over crime and the criminal, and its ennobling qualities will soon be evident in the banishment of these evils and in the enlightenment and happiness of all. Ignorance begets vice, vice crime, and crime entails misery. Education therefore, being the basis of Liberty, by being secured to the masses, will ensure all collateral and dependent measures; let all unite therefore to banish ignorance, crime and misery from our land.

August 29 1850.

☞ The sale of tickets to Jenny Lind's first Concert took place at Castle Garden on Saturday, and it is pretty well understood that Barnum is putting it on rather thick. The first ticket was sold to Genin, the Hatter, for $225; but nearly all believe that it was a mock auction. About 1400 tickets were sold at prices ranging from 5 to 25 dollars, the total proceeds of which amout to $9,119. Not one fourth of the tickets have been disposed of, and the auction was adjourned to Monday. Even at $3 per ticket, the space yet to be filled would amount to $20,000.

—Second Day.—The sale of Tickets for the first Concert of Jenny Lind was resumed at Castle Garden at 10 o'clock on Monday morning, and was very largely attended. The whole number of Tickets sold thus far is 4476, averaging $5 53 each, amounting to $24, 753 50.

☞ As one of the Central Railroad trains was crossing the track of the New-Jersey Railroad at Elizabethtown, on Wednesday, the train of the latter came in contact with the former, crushing the hindmost car to pieces. Fortunately it did not contain a single passenger.

California, Utah, and the Texas Boundary Bills Passed.

The House of Representatives on Saturday, passed the California Admission bill and the Utah Territorial Organization bill, through all stages, just as they came from the Senate, and now only await the President's signature to render them laws of the land. California finally passed by the decisive vote of 150 to 57, and Utah by 97 to 85. A motion to affix the Wilmot Proviso to the latter was defeated by 78 to 69.

The bills as passed provide as follows:

1. That the Northern Boundary of Texas shall be the parallel of 36° 30′ North latitude for three degrees of longitude westward from the old line between the U. States and Mexico, or to the 103d meridian of longitude due west from Greenwich; thence follow that meridian down to the 32d parallel of latitude; thence due west to the Rio Grande, which is made the westerly limit of Texas thence to its mouth. As a compensation for surrendering her claims to territory North of this line, Texas is to receive Ten Millions of Dollars in five per cent bonds of the United States, whereof Five Millions are made specifically applicable to the payment of the Public Debt of Texas.

2. New Mexico, including all the Territory acquired from Mexico North and West of the above line East of the Rio Grande, and all of said Territory West of said River, is organised into a regular Territory, for which Officers are to be appointed and Courts organized as for other Territories of the United States.

3. All the Territory acquired by the United States from Mexico lying Westward of New-Mexico as aforesaid and East of California is organized into another Territory under the appellation of Utah. (This Territory includes the Salt Lake region, or Great Ceutral Basin of our Continent, in which the Mormons have set up their Ebenezer.)

4. California is admitted into the Union as a State, with her chosen Boundaries and her Free Constitution; so that her two Senators and two Members already chosen may take their seats forthwith.

5. The Territoris of New-Mexico and Utah as aforesaid are to be admitted into the Union as States, with or without Slavery as their People shall decide. Now we know that they will both decide against Slavery, promptly, surely, emphatically; but it would not be a bad thing to be sure of it.

—Well: the past is past. The next question in order is, "Shall Free New-Mexico be admitted as a State into the Union?" That will be the ruling question at the next Session. We say, Ay! We presume Congress will now hurry through the Appropriation bills. (we hope not forgetting the Cheap Postage and Land Reform bills) and adjourn within a fortnight.—Tribune.

The Compromise Completed.

Washington, Sept. 9.

President Fillmore has signed the Texas Boundary, New-Mexico, California and Utah bills.

Califonia is now a State of the Union, and her Senators, and Representatives may take their seats unquestioned.

California Senators Sworn in.

Senate.—Mr. Douglass presented the credentials of Dr, Gwinn, and Mr. Barnwell those of Col. Fremont, Senators from california.

Mr. Jefferson Davis moved their reference to the com. on the Judiciary, on account of the unconstitutionality of the admission of California.

After a spirited debate, the motion was lost, 12 to 36, and Messrs. Gwinn and Fremont were sworn in, took their seats, and then drew for terms. Col. Fremont the first class and Dr. Gwinn the third.

Col. Fremont gave notice of a large number of bills for the benefit of California.

Missouri Election.

All doubts as to the result of the Congressional election in this State are now removed. The Delegation in the next Congress will stand:

1st District—F. Darby, (Whig.)
IId Dist.—Gilchrist Porter, (Whig.)
IIId Dist.—John G. Miller, (Whig.)
IVth Dist.—Willard P. Hall (Anti-Benton.)
Vth Dist.—John S. Phelps, (Benton.)

The Lngislature will stand: Senate, 12 Whigs, 13 Bentonites, 8 Anti-Bentonites. The House; 56 Whigs, 41 Bentonites, 34 Anti-Bentonites.

The Tariff.—We presume that after three successive failures in the House of Representatives to procure an alteration of the Tariff, or rather to instruct the Committee of Ways and Means to bring in a bill to that effect, the effort will be abandoned for the present, to be renewed perhaps at the approaching session. The fact is, that the present Tariff works too well to be hastily repudiated by the country. It is a good Tariff—a very good Tariff--the best we have had for twenty-five years It affords immense revenue, and gives a moderate incidental protection to home productions, without burdening the people with excessive taxes The votes which follow, took place on Monday last.

Mr. Van Dyke, of N. J., asked leave to offer a resolution—that the Committee of Ways and Means be instructed to report, as speedily as possible, a bill to modify our present revenue laws, and so to increase the duties on foreign articles which come into competition with our own products as will give a fair and reasonable protection to the labor and industry of the coudtry; and that such duties be made specific whenever it is practicable to do so.

Objection being made he moved that the rules be suspended. The question being taken, it was decided in the negative—yeas 89, nays 98.

Mr. Preston King of N. Y., asked leave to offer a resolution—instructing the Committee of Ways and Means to report a bill so modifying the tariff of 1846 as to make the duty on iron specific, at the rates they would now be, if the advalorem duty of 1846 had been made specific duty, equal to the ad valorem duty levied by the act at the time it became a law.

Objection being made, Mr. King moved a suspension of the rules; but the motion was disagreed to —yeas 85, nays 104.—Jour. of Commerce.

☞ Reader, every man of intelligence and reflection, every prosperous farmer or business man, will tell you that in no possible way can you more judiciously and beneficially expend ten shillings, than in paying for the Planfield Gazette. They will tell you that if you do not take a newspaper that you most sadly neglect your own interest; and if you have a family, by taken one a short time only, you will be convinced that you have sadly neglected theirs. If you do take one, you undoubtedly know their value, and we are convinced that after perusing our's, you will find yourself uneasy and be dissatisfied with yourself until you subscribe for it. As it is published every Thursday, it makes it very convenient for those who live at a distance and who visit Palinfield on that day for tailor-work, or on other business, to accommodate themselves with it. Certainly, where a newspaper can be had for the trifling sum of ten shillings a year, none will fail to avail themselves of the opportunity.

Pioneers to the March of Mind.

There always have been, in all countries, and under all forms of government individuals in mental advance of, and apparently in opposition to, the main body of a people. They are the pioneers to the march of mind—the first to fall before it—and, although they make the road to knowledge, to freedom, and to happiness, practicable and easy, they do so only by paving it with their own bones. The vocation of these invaders of the dark empire of ignorance and tyranny renders them the especial dread of despots, and all other upholders of usurped power and unjustly-acquired wealth; and they are therefore always persecuted with a horrible malignancy which no other being but man can feel and exercise.

When we take into consideration the various circumstances which have retarded human advancement, we cannot be surprised that the disenthralment of man from man has not yet been achieved. Under despotisms—and the majority of government are little else than despotisms—the knowledge of truth and liberty progresses slowly; for the gibbet and the dungeon are of two easy access to be neglected by the governors, especially where custom has made the immolation of a victim a matter of but little moment. Should the ruling few think fit to give a reason for their bloody acts, they fabrisome black and odious lie, calculated to mislead the multitude, and work upon their passion and their prejudices; and the unhappy and enslaved people are made to gloat upon the sufferings and decry the principles of him who would have made them enlightened and happy: they are taught to regard him as one of the deadliest enemies of the human race, and, believing him to be such, they exult at his discomfiture and glory in his downfall. The governors cry "Crucify him!" and the deluded governed loudly echo "Crucify him!"

Should the fearless champion of truth escape for a time with life, it makes but little difference in favor of his cause. Evey thing is against him. The great body of those whose are oppressed and who stand most in need of deliverance are perhaps unable to read; and the oral communication of political knowledge, even in countries professing to enjoy the liberty of thought and speech, is almost as slow and unsafe a method as that adopted by means of books.—Wherever the body is enslaved, the mind is still more tyranized over; for the anathema of the priest is ever at the call of the despot, and the hereafter of the first is always more dreaded, by an ignorant people, than the present tyranny of the last. The minds alike of the oppressed and the oppressor are warped and confined from infancy to manhood; and thus benighted and enslaved, does generation follow generation; and these simple truths and principles which, under certain circumstances, might have become universally known and acted upon during the passing of one generation, are, under other circumstances, almost unknown and unregarded at the end of centuries.—Middletown Banner.

Arrival of the Empire City.

Later from California.

The steamer Empire City, Capt. Wilson, arrived here yesterday morning from Chagres, via Kingston, Jam. 29th August, bringing 186 passengers and $756,000 in gold dust on her freight list, together with about $400,000 in the hands of passengers.

Among the passenger in the Empire City, is Gen. Riley, ex-Governor of California, and his family. A splendid dinner was given at Monterey, on the 24th of July, on the occasion of his retiring from California, and a splendid gold chain and medal were presented to him by his hosts.

The steamship Panama arrived at Panama from Sanfrancisco on the evening of the 21st, bringing $2,300,000 in gold dust, and about 240 passeners. The P. left Acapulco August 16th. On the 17th, the Cholera broke out amongst the passengers. About 50 died.

Mr. C. G. Birdseye, a passenger in the Panama, communicates the following:

"On the fourth day out one case of cholera occurred, and up to the morning of the 22d, twenty were buried from the ship, every case proving fatal. Ten died at Panama, five on the road from Panama to Cruces; three at Chagres, and one on board the Empire City, before her departure, the only case on board that steamer.

"It is estimated by the surviving passengers of the Panama, that fifty of our number died."

Another great object of public interest has been the great numbers of murders and assinations which have lately taken place in the San Joaquin mines, most of which have been traced to the foreigners of Spanish decent, and but one opinion is expressed, viz: that they shall and must quit the country, or abide perhaps extreme consequences. Meetings have been held to that effect, and some of the first citizens of the country are appointed to see the undertaking carried into effect.

The foreign miners' tax has worked well, either compelling aliens to pay for their intrusion upon our treasures, or compelling them to leave the placers for our daily arriving fellow citizens.

The following is an extract from a letter in the Sacramento Transcript:—

The number now on the plains is variously estimated from 50,000 to 100,000 souls, destined to this ElDorado, the one half of which will not reach here without suffering, and one quarter without subsisting on their animals, or enduring starvation. I have seen hundreds, more than 150 miles on the other side of the Sink of St. Mary's River that were out of provisions, or had but a few pounds to sustain a miserable and wretched existence, with animals that could never reach the Desert by reason of the scarcity of forage.

Those who started late, will fare still worse; as the season becomes warmer, feed less and provisions shorter. I saw one man with two small boys, 120 miles beyond the sink, who had left his wagon and lost all his animals but one, and all the provisions he had was three or four pounds of rice; another with his wife and children, I overtook seventy-five miles beyond the Sink, with four horses that were just able to move with the empty wagon, the wife walking ahead, in the burning sand and scorching sun, to relieve the poor laden animals, that were destined never to see the Sink. I saw, on the road side, where slices had been taken out of dead horses and mules, to appease the gnawing appetites of immigrants.

New Church at Newark.—The corner-stone of the new Central M. E. Church, under the pastoral charge of Rev. J. B. Wakeley, was laid on Thursday afternoon, at the corner of Market and Mulberry sts. in presence of a large collection of spectators. The edifice is erected in the Gothic style of architecture, 100 feet deep by 66 wide; whole depth, 136 feet including the lecture-room, to which there are to be three entrances, one on each side, and one in the rear from an alley, 18 feet wide, running from Mulcerry-st. The church is to have a tower and spire, 200 feet high.

Combination of the Working Classes.

No movement more decisively indicates the wholsome tendancy of union among Trades, than the formation of Societies of Working men for their mutual benefit. These societies are every where springing up, almost every branch of the men who toil, are boldly asserting their rights, to be respected as the proper judges of their own worth. By these proceedings they exhibit an independent self-reliance, which is an earnest of their speedy and permanent elevation and manifest a true apprhension of the only method by which their rights are to be secured and maintained. The working men of this country need no blood-stained hands to emancipate themselves from the various forms of oppression to which they have been so long subject,—Action Combination, and Education, are all that is necessary to elevate them to the position they ought to occupy. Sit not then, fellow workingman, with folded hands calling on Hercules. But be up and doing—let us remember that the remedy is with us, and that "God helps those who help themselves." Dr channing in an address to the workingmen of America counsels them to labor for a clear understanding of the subjects that now agitate the community, and thus advises them make them your study, instead of wasting your leisure in vauge, passionate talk about them. The time thrown away by the mass of the people on the rumors of the day, might, if better spent, give them a good acquaintance with the constitution, laws, history, and interests of their country, and thus establish them on those great principles by which particular measures are to be determined. In proportion as the peple thus improve themselves, they will cease to be the tools of designing politcians. Their intelligence, not their passions and jealousies, will be addressed by those who seek their votes. They will exercise not a nominal but a real influence in the government and destinies of the country, and at the same time will forward their own growth and virtue.—Camden Democrat.

A New-York Incident.

Going up-town in a Harlem car, yesterday, we saw a young woman approach the car to take passage not thinking of any impediment, when she was decidedly though without extra insult, repelled by the Conductor, who informed her that she could not be permitted to ride in the car. Stepping to the door to learn the reason of this strange proceedlng, (as there were but two or three persons in the car) we saw that the woman was copper-colored, (either half or quarter African by descent) and were informed that this was the reason of her repulse,

"But isn't it a very base reason?"

"Can't help it, sir; the passengers make a fuss and say they can't ride with nigger's."

—We fear that is true—yet what a shameful, loathsome, debasing truth it is! Here in this metropolis of Christian America, with at least a regiment of priests and other professed teachers of righteousness and humility, in the midst of two hundred and odd steeples and within sight of half a dozen, a cleanly, respectable looking woman is repelled from a public conveyance, in which there is room enough to place her six feet from any one else, because of her dusky compl exion!

Who drove that helpless woman back upon the side-walk, in an agony of chagrin and mortification?

Not the conductor—he was but the passive instrument of others—not the Company—they would have been willing enough to pocket her six-pence, if the Public would have permitted it. But a base and wicked Popular Prejudice, the offspring of Slavery, fostered and stimulated for selfish ends by a deluding and counterfeit party democracy, countenanced and upheld by our empty and cowardly fashionably Christianity, with negro pews in its Churches and negro quarters at its communion-tables—these are the real culprits who subjected that unoffending woman to insult and ignominy in a street of this Christian Republican metropolis.

Must this class of outrages be perpetuated?

We think not. Nay we trust they are already outgrown True, the negro-pews are still maintained in most of our Churches, especially the most costly and stylsh, and the Negro-phobia is studiously fomented by our swindling Democracy, so that if a dozen black men should venture into a Democratic City Meeting to listen to the eloquence there poured forth in glorification of Human Freedom and equality, they would be kicked down stairs in short order—yet still, we believe Public Sentiment is fast out growing the Paganism of the Chuch and the aristocracy of Democracy. We believe our Railroads and Stages might now resolve to carry neat, decently dressed black and copper colored persons the same as white ones, without any material damage to their interests—that they would hardly lose more passengers than they would gain by so doing, and that after a year or so they would lose none at all. Africans are carried now the same as Whites throughout the greater part of New-England though twenty years ago the mean prejudice of caste and color was as rank and brutal there as it now is here. And if the Railroads and Stages should once get Christianized in this respect, there would be hope that the churches might in time be ashamed into following the example. As to what vaunts itself 'Democracy,' that is more incorrigible, but it too will knuckle to a purified Public Sentiment. Only let it be understood that more votes can be obtained by Negro-qhobia, and Fred Douglass will be called to address a Ratifying Convention in Tammany Hall, with two or three of Afric's noblest sons for Vice-Presidents.

—But isn't it a good idea, in view of facts every day transpiring around us, to talk of organizing the whole North into a grand Anti-Slavery party? They who don't see that the spirit of Slavery is as rampant and predominent in New-York as in virginia know far too little to be trusted with the devising of new parties. Let us purify our own borders before arraying ourselves in a grand crusade against the sins of our neighbors.

The above from Saturday's New York Tribune, but for its inferences in regard to democracy, would need no comment. With our correction, its truthfulness will be admitted by all honest men.—The picture which it draws of fashionable religion is alas too true.

The spurious democracy of which it speaks, does not pertain to those alone who assemble at Tammay Hall, but has also been put forth by the party to which the Editor of the Tribune belongs—making use of "purified public sentiment," not to advance democracy, but the selfishness and aggrandisement of the Whig party. With this correction, these truths we trust all our readers will ponder, as it is upon their thoughtful consideration alone that true democracy and genuine religion can ever prevail.

☞ Congress has agered to adjourn on the 30th inst. by a strong vote in both Houses. We believe this vote will be hailed with universal approbation.

Death of a Distinguished Missionary.

Letters received by the Hibernia announce the death of Rev. Dr. Judson, aged 60, on the 12th of April, on board the French bark Aristotle, bound to the Isle of Bourbon. He was buried in the sea on the evening of his death, in Lat 13N. Lon. 93 E. He had been a missionary for 38 years.

Slave Emigration to California.—The steamer Commodore Stockton is advertised to sail shortly from Charleston, for California, with a number of Southern gentlemen accompanied by their slaves. It would seem from this, that the scheme for establishing a slave colony in that territory, for the purpose of working the gold mines, is not altogether a humbug, as has been conjectured. It is repsented that this association will be formidable in numbers and influence. The Jackson (ultra) Mississipian asserts that "5004 slaves will be sent to California before the expiration of this year, if the measure before Congress to admit California can be repudiated by that body." It thinks that in case this enterprise is successful, the value of slaves at home will greatly enhanced.

Good.—A country clergyman, by his dull monotonous discourse, set all his congregation asleep, except an idiot, who set with open mouth listening. The parson enraged and thumping the pulpit, exclaimed—What! all asleep but this poor idiot?" "Yes," exclaimed the poor boy, "and if I had not been an idiot I would have been asleep too." Truly a wise reply.

CHAIN PUMPS.

THE best machine for raising water in use. This Pump has many advantages over any other in use on account of its simplicity of construction, being made wholly of wood and galvanized iron, not liable to get out of order or to get deranged in any way. It can never freeze in winter, and can be put in wells of any depth.

It takes less power to work it than any other machine, to raise the same amount of water.

It is never obstructed by gravel or sand; it keeps the water perfectly sweet and fresh; the action of the chain mixes the gases with the water always keeping it lively and fresh; on ceasing to work it, the water in the tube descends to the level of the water in the well; on commencing to work the pump, the first water that is drawn is from the bottom of the well.

☞ Application can be made to the subscriber or Ephraim W. Briant at P. M. French's store in Plainfield, who will be able to give satisfactory information in relation to said Pump.

GREAT.

SPRING & SUMMER MEDICINE.

BRISTOL'S COMPOUND EXTRACT OF SARSAPRILLA. The value of this great American Specific for all diseases and disorders generated by impure blood, is universally known and appreciated.

TWENTY-FIVE PHYSICIANS,

among the most eminent in this country, have recently signed and caused to be published, a document certifying that BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA was the best preparation of the kind in existence, and that they

USED IT DAILY IN THEIR PRACTICE,

with the happiest effects. Remember that for

MORE THAN TWENTY YEARS

it has been before the public, performing in that time

MILLIONS OF CURES!

During that period multitudes of Sarsaprilla, so called, have been palmed upon the public, but no other has

STOOD THE TEST OF TIME!

Every year has added thousands upon thousands of bottles to its sales, its cures, and the

IMMENSE MASS OF CERTIFICATES

Which, if printed and bound would form a library of themselves! The victim of

HEREDITARY SCROFULA

with suppurating glands, honey-combed flesh, and caries eating into his bones, finds in BRISTOL'S SARSAPRILLA a balm for his afflictions. His horrible torments are assuaged and his malady not only relieved, but.

PERMANENTLY CURED!

It may be safely asserted from the results of nearly a quarter of a century's experience, that

BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA,

is beyond all comparison the

MOST WONDERFUL REMEDY ON EARTH

for the following diseases and all others proceeding from.

VITIATED BLOOD.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, Rheumatism, Obstinate Cutaneous Eruptions, Pimples or Pustules on the Face, Blotches, Boils, Chronic Sore Eyes, Ring Worm or Tetter, Scald Head, Enlargement and Pains of the Bones and Joints, Stubborn Ulcers, Syphilitic Symptoms, Sciata or Lumbago, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury.

Acites, or Dropsy

Exposure, or

Imprudence in Life, Liver Complaint, Ague and Fever, Intermitting Fever, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Plethora of Blood in the Head, Piles, Pains in the Back, Side, Breast or Loins, and all forms of Muscular, Glandular, and Skin Diseases.

It is also a sovereign specific for General Debility and the best renovator of a broken constitution. It braces and reinvigorates every organ, promotes activivity and regularity in every function, and produces that condition of the whole physical system which is the best security for ☞ LONG LIFE!

Let all who wish to purge the blood from the impurities contracted from the free indulgence of the appetite during the winter, and to prepare the system to

RESIST SUMMER EPIDEMICS,

Resort now to

BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA

the gentle aperient, the powerful tonic, the unrivalled antiseptic, and great builder up and

FORTIFIER OF THE SYSTEM!

The record which has been kept since the introduction of Bristol's Sarsaparilla, twenty odd years ago, exhibits an aggregate of known cures which established its invaluable properties. Among the recorded facts are the following, in round numbers:

Cured of Summer Complaints, 10,000.

100,000 Cured of Scrofula.

Cured of Rheumatism, 58,000

150,000 Cured of Diseases of the Skin.

Cured of Liver Complaints, 35,000.

27,000 Cured of Diarrhœa and Dysentery.

There is not space in an advertisement for a full enumeration, but the cures amount to

A GRAND TOTAL OF ONE MILLION.

The public faith in it has never wavered—never can waver: for it is founded on experience, just as their want of faith in other spurious compounds is also founded in experience. They

FLY FROM MINERAL NOSTRUMS

to seek hope, life, and vigor from this

PURELY VEGETABLE REMEDY.

And are Never Disappointed!

Therefore, however broken in health and spirits, however loathsome to himself and others, let no man despair of recovery. Let the patient only understand that Bristol's Sarsaparilla is an infallible remedy for only persuade him for his own life's sake to try it, and those who know what it has acomplished will have no hesitation in predicting his speedy rostoration to health.

A LEGION OF DISEASES,

As a means of regulating all the functions of

WOMAN'S DELICATE ORGANIZATION

it has no equal in the materia medica, and at that critical period of life, when the first stage of her decline commences, its cordial and invigorating properties will enable her to

PASS THE CRISIS SAFELY.

READ, AND SATISFY YOURSELVES:

Read the following from an eminent Physician:

The undersigned being acquainted with some of the ingredints of HUTCHINGS' VEGETABLE DYSPEPSIA BITTERS, and having used it for some time in his practice with every desired effect, here commends this medicine from the certainty of its effect and gives it a preference over all preparations in medicine for that distressing complaint, Dyspepsia.

T. HARDENBERGH, M. D., No. 1 Beach street N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half; during a greater portion of this time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself until he was recommended to try HUTCHINGS' DYSPEPSIA BITTERS; he very soon derived a benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of HUTCHINGS' BITTERS for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine. L. B. WYMAN. 23 Burling Slip.

New York, September 3. 1849.

The following certificate is from M. B. Brady, the celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness. I was advised to take Hutching's Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease, and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia.

M. B. BRADY, No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

The proprietor of this medicine has received many other certificates of cures, equally remarkable, of the various diseases for which this preparation is applicable; but the above are deemed necessary to satisfy any unprejudiced mind of its value and superiority above all other preparations.

NEW MAGNETO ELECTRIC MACHINES,

For medical application.—These instruments possesses a great superiority over all others for medical use, the shocks being obtained entirely from permanent magnets, and the mechanism is so arranged as to cause the current of induced electricity to pass always in one direction. They require no galvanic battery to put them in action and consequently there is no need of acids or other liquids, so objectionable in the other kinds now in use, and they are always ready for immediate application, and are in nowise liable to get out of order. All that is necessary to put the instrument in action is simply to turn a small handle, which could be done by a child.

They are put up in a very portable form, being secured in small neat cases, from which they do not required to be moved.

CHERRY PECTORAL:

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, ASTHMA, WHOOPING-COUGH AND CONSUMPTION.

The uniform success which has attended the use of this preparation—its salutary effect—its power to relieve and cure affections of the Lungs, have gained for it a celebrity equalled by no other medicine. We offer it to the afflicted with entire confidence in its virtues, and the full belief that it will subdue and remove the severest attacks of disease upon the throat and Lungs. These results, as they become publicly known, very naturally attract the attention of medical men and philanthropists everywhere.—What is their opinion of CHERRY PECTORAL may be seen in the following:—

VALENTINE MOTT, M. D.,

Prof. Surgery Med. College, New York, says:—

"It gives me pleasure to certify the value and efficacy of Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL, which I consider peculiarly adapted to cure diseases of the Throat and Lungs."

THE RT. REV. LORD BISHOP FIELD

writes in a letter to his friend, who was fast sinking under an affection of the Lungs:—"Try the CHERRY PECTORAL and if any medicine can give you relief, with the blessing of God that will."

CPIEF JUSTICE EUSTIS,

of Louisiana, writes "That a young daughter of his was cured of several severe attacks of Croup by the "CHERRY PECTORAL."

ASTHMA AND BRONCHITIS.

The Canadian Journal of Medical Science states, "That Asthma and Bronchitis so prevalent in this inclement climate, has yielded with surprising rapidity to Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL, and we cannot too strongly recommend this skilful preparation to the Profession and public generally."

Let the relieved sufierer speak for himself:—

HARTFORD, Jan. 26. 1847.

Dr. J. C. Ayer—Dear Sir:—Having been rescued from a painful and dangerous disease by your medicine, gratitude prompts me to send you this acknowledgment, not only in justice to you, but for the information of others in like affliction.

A slight cold upon the lungs, neglected at first became so severe that spitting of blood, a violent cough and profuse night sweats followed and fastened upon me. I became emaciated, could not sleep, was distressed by my cough, and a pain through my chest, and in short had all the alarming symptoms of quick consumption. No medicine seemed at all to reach my case, until I providentially tried your CHERRY PECTORAL, which soon relieved and now has cured me.

Yours with respect. E. A. STEWART.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 17, 1848

Dr. Ayer, Lowell—Dear Sir:—I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form: so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breath on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my Physician prescribed, as an experiment, your CHERRY PECTORAL.

At first it seemed to make me worse, but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

BLAKE'S PATENT

FIRE PROOF PAINT.

THE original and only genuine article, that can be obtained, without subjecting the purchaser to a prosecution for an infringement of my Patent. It has not yet been two year since the first counterfeit, was got up, but in that short time has proved itself, entirely worthless, as will be seen by the statement of more than twenty of the most respectable inhabitants of Sharon Ohio where mine as well as the Counterfeits are made. They say that we have examined recently, a house that was painted, with

Blake's Patent Fire Proof Paint,

SIX YEARS since (as an experiment) and now find the coating as hard as slate or stone. The action of the weather having no effect than to indurate and harden the substance. We will farther state that it has been such a complete failure in all the other kinds of stuff got up, and sold here, called Fire Proof paint (except Blakes) that his only is considered worth useing.

(Signed) Barnabus Crane and 20 others.

Hon. Daniel Webster has recently examined the patent and at the close of his report says, "I have no doubt whatever, but Mr Blake's Patent is good and valid. [104.

MARRIAGE:

WHY SO OFTEN UNHAPPY.

THE CAUSES AND THE REMEDY!

MANY and many a wife endures years of bodily suffering and of mental anguish, prostrate and helpless, embittering her life, that of her husband, and hazarding the future welfare of her children, arising from causes which, if known, would have spared the suffering, the anguish to the wife, and to the husband embarrassments and pecuniary difficulties having their origin in the mind being weighed down and harassed in consequence of the sickness of the companion of his bosom.

How important that the causes should be known to every wife, to every husband, that the dreadful and harrowing consequences to the health and happiness of both may be avoided! Life is too short and health too precious to admit any portion of the one to be spent without the full enjoyment of the other. The timely possession of a little work entitled as follows has been the means of saving the health and the life of thousands, as over copies have been sold since the first edition was issued.

The author has been induced to advertise it by the urgent and pressing request of those who have been indebted to its publication for all they hold dear (that all may have an opportunity of obtaining it), and who have favored him with thousands of letters of encomium, some of which are annexed to the advertisement.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

Twentieth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, $1.00.

THIS WORK IS INTENDED ESPECIALLY FOR THE MARRIED, or those contemplating marriage, as it discloses important secrets which should be known to them particularly.

Here, every female—the wife, the mother—the one either budding into womanhood, or the one in the decline of years, in whom nature contemplates an important change—can discover the causes, symptoms, and the most efficient remedies and most certain mode of cure, in every complaint to which her sex is subject.

The revelations contained in its pages have proved a blessing to thousands, as the innumerable letters received by the author (which he is permitted by the writers to publish) will attest.

SICKLY AND UNHAPPY WIVES.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Dayton, O.

"DAYTON, May 1, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU—My Dear Sir: 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion,' for which I enclosed one dollar to your address, came safely to hand. I would not have troubled you with these few lines, but that I am impelled by a sense of gratitude, for myself and wife, to give utterance to our sincere and heartfelt emotions.

"My wife has been perceptibly sinking for some three years or more, in consequence of her great anguish and suffering some months before and during confinement; every successive one more and more debilitated and prostrated her, putting her life in imminent danger, and which was, on the last occasion, despaired of. I supposed that this state of things was inevitable, and resigned myself to meet the worst. At this time (now about two months) I heard your book highly spoken of, as containing some matters reaching my case. On its receipt and perusal, I can not express to you the relief it afforded my distressed mind, and the joy its pages imparted to my wife, on learning that the great discovery of M. M. Desomeaux provided a remedy. It opened a prospect to me which I little conceived was possible. No pecuniary consideration can ever repay the obligations I am under to you for having been the means of imparting to us the matters contained in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' But for this, ere another year would have passed over my head, in all human probability my wife would have been in her grave, and my children left motherless."

Extract from a Letter.

Competence and Health.

"LANCASTER, PA., Oct. 24, 1847.

"MY DEAR SIR: I know you will have the kindness to bear with me in encroaching upon your time, while I acknowledge (in behalf of myself and wife) the obligations we feel ourselves under to you in having made known certain matters, contained in your most invaluable 'Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' It has been worth its weight in gold to me. If I express myself rather warmly, you will see that I can not do so too warmly, when I inform you of the extent to which I have, through it, been benefited. I will state my situation when I obtained your book through the merest curiosity I look upon it as one of the most fortunate events of my life. I had been married some ten years, and was the father of seven children. I was long struggling unceasingly, to the end that I might gain a moderate competency, but the results of my utmost exertions at the end left me about where I was at the beginning of each year; and that only, with the most stinted economy, sufficing with barely the necessaries of life. Finally, this constant effort was beginning to have its effect upon my health: I felt less capable to endure its continuance, while I felt the necessity of perseverance.

"This constant, unceasing struggle on my part was imperative, in consequence of the prostrated condition of my wife (with occasional intermission) for six years, much of the time confined to her bed, and of course incapable of taking the charge and management of household affairs. Her condition arose from causes of which I was ignorant. Oh! what would I have given had I the six years to live over again! What would my wife have given to have been spared the long days and still longer nights prostrate on a bed of sickness!—all of which would have been avoided, had I then seen a copy of 'THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION.'"

From a Physician.

DANGEROUS DELIVERIES,

OBSTRUCTIONS, IRREGULARITIES, &C.

How many are suffering from obstruction or irregularities peculiar to the female system, which undermine their health, the effects of which they are ignorant, and for which their delicacy forbids seeking medical advice! How many suffer from prolapsus uteri (falling of the womb), or from fluor-albus (weakness, debility, &c., &c)! How many are in constant agony for many months preceding confinement! How many have difficult if not dangerous deliveries, and whose lives are jeoparded during such time, will find in its pages the means of prevention, amelioration, and relief!

Extract from a Letter.

To those just Married.—"Had I known!"

"PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU: Had I known of the important matters treated of in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion' some years ago, how much misery I might have escaped! I have suffered years from causes which you point out in your book, without knowing what to do. I obtained a copy, and found my case treated of. I trust every female will avail herself of the information contained in its pages."

Letters are daily received of this character, unnecessary to present.

To those yet unmarried, but contemplating marriage, or perhaps hesitating as to the propriety of incurring the responsibilities attendant upon it, the importance of being possessed of the revelations contained in these pages, so intimately involving their future happiness, can not be appreciated.

It is, of course, impracticable to convey more fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage; neither is it necessary, since it is every one's duty to become possessed of knowledge whereby the sufferings to which a wife, a mother, or a sister, may be subject, can be obviated.

☞ CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against various catch-penies intended to be palmed off upon them initiating the title of the work as "The Married LADIES' Medical Companion," and various other titles. FOR FEMALES AND MALES

Dr. Lazetti's Juno Cordial, or Protective Elixir.

This is the only actual remedy ever discovered for impetency, Genital Debility, Nocturnal Emissions, and all diseases occasioned by certain secret habits; and many of the nostrums recently recommended for the same complaints are worthless imitations which its unrivalled excellence, fame and popularity have brought into the market. The Medical Faculty of Europe and the United States are unanimous in their recommendations of the Juno Cordial and have not given their sanction in a single instance that has been authenticated, to any compound for the same purposes. The nature of the maladies relieved by the Juno Cordial are generally such as to leave the publication of certificates of cures out of the question, or the proprietor could produce a host of the most conclusive testimony to show that the great reputation that it enjoys was not accidentally obtained, but is firmly based upon its positive, and apparently miraculous virtues. In all directions are to be found the happy parents of healthy offspring, who would not have been so, but for this extraordinary preparption. And it is equally potent in the many diseases for which it is recommended. Objection has been naturally made to the price of the Juno Cordial, because the trash that has been thrown into the market in opposition to it is sold cheaper; but the fact is, the Cordial cannot be afforded for less, and ought to be much dearer, as many of the ingredients which compose it are among the costliest things in nature; whereas the others are made up of cheap drugs, worth but little in money, and less in merit. We assure the reader that the utmost reliance may be placed on the Juno Cordial in the cure of the maladies mentioned above, and also those that follow, viz: Loss of Muscular Energy, Physical Lassitude and General Prostration, Irritability, and all Nervous Affections, Indigestion, Sluggishness of the Liver, Gleet, Lucorrhoea or Whites, and Flour Albus and every disease in any way connected with the disorder of the Procreative Functions—in all of which it will afford almost immediate relief, and, if used as directed, is almost certain to produce a positive and permanent cure. Persons about to marry, if conscious of any weakness or disability of a certain nature, should take this Cordial, as it will infallibly restore health and vigor in a brief period, and where want of offspring is a cause of regret, if recourse be had to it the most beneficial results may be anticipated with confidence. It is of priceless value to those without offspring. It has taken the precedence in Italy, and will in all other countries where it may become known.

To spread wide the blessings of this medicine, I have appointed Messrs. Judson & Co., of the City of New York, in the United States of America, my sole Agents for its sale; and none can be genuine unless it comes through them, and their signature is on the weapper.

Who is She?

BY ELLEN ASHTON.

"Mary Murray, you say—and, pray, who is she?"

These words were addressed by one young lady to another, in reference to an acquaintance to whom one of them had just bowed.

"Who? The daughter of Widow Murray. A dear, sweet, amiable girl as ever lived is Mary, too—you ought to know her."

"I'd rather not," said the first speaker, with a toss of the head. "The daughter of Widow Murray, who keeps a petty thread and needle store! Why, the next thing will be to associate with one's kitchen maids."

"But, in this country Emma, it is merit that makes the rank,' replied the other. "Here you know we have no aristocracy. Mary Murray is more beautiful, more accomplished, and more amiable, too, than half my school mates."

"Well, I can tell you one thing, if you keep up your acquaintance with her, you'll be cut by all genteel people. Do you think the Livingstons, Harrisons, and Lawrences, will come to your parties if they are to meet shop girls there?"

"They can do as they please," replied Kate Villiers, with spirit. "But one thing is certain; I shall not give up Mary for them, as I like her for herself and not her ancestors. Besides, for all I know, she may be as well born as they are; I never thought to enquire."

Just at this moment a young man, riding a beautiful horse, passed and made a bow to the young ladies. The first speaker was all blushes at this public notice from one of the richest and most fashionable men in the city.

"Dear me," said she, "how glad I am he did not see you speak to that Miss Murray! He would never have noticed either of us again."

Kate Villars curled her pretty lip in scorn, as she replied—

"Frank Hastings is too sensible to be affected by such a thing, I fancy. But, if he is not, he is only the more to be pitied." And warming with natural indignation she continund, "It vexes me beyond patience to see people in this country, talking of the gentility of their families, when out of a hundred, there is scarcely one that is not descended, and at no great distance, from some honest mechanic or respectable farmer. Take our richest families! A century ago they were poor, while the real old gentry of that day are now generally beggared. Who was Astor? A poor German lad. Who was Girard? A French cabin boy. What was Abbot Lawrence once? A Yankee wood chopper. So, too, our great statesmen, Clay, Webster, Cass and Benton, all rose from nothing. We ought to ask, not who a person's ancestors were, but what they are themselves."

A few days after, as Kate and her acquaintance were walking together, they met Miss Murray, who unconscious of offence, stopped to coverse with Kate. Emma was evidently uneasy, the more so, as her keen eye detected Frank Hastings promenading down the street towards them. Politeness kept her stationary for a moment, but as he drew nearer, the disgrace of being seen with the daughter of a "thread and needle woman," as Emma called Mrs. Mnrray, proved too strong for her courtesy, and she abruptly broke away and went into a store, pretending a wish to purchase some ribhon.

Frank Hastings, meantime, came sauntering idly down the street, and only perceived Kate when close upon her.

"Good morning," he said bowing, his eye attracted by Miss Murray's pleasing face. "Will you take pity on an idler, Miss Villars, and allow me to accompany you in your walk?"

Kate, who was already engaged, and to a friend of Frank's answered frankly, for she and Hastings were almost as intimate as brother and sister.

"I shall be pleased if you will. Only you must be very agreeacle, for my friend and I are used to having sense talked to us, and, if you don't acquit yourself creditably, we shall blackball you, as you say at the club, the next time you ask permission to walk with us."

Frank, however, needed no incentive for him to talk his best; for the sweet countenance of Mary, in which every emotion of the heart was reflected, was inspiration enough.

They stopped at last at Mrs. Murray's little store. Frank looked with some little surprise at the humble appearance of the dwelling: but this did not prevent his bow to Mary being deeply respectful, as he walked off with her friend.

"And that charming girl," he said, assists to support her mother, by standing behind the counter. Do you know Kate, I was half in love with her before, and now I am entirely so? A wife, such as she would make, is worth having, because worth a dozen of the foolish votaries of fashion—gilded, conceited butterflies like your friend Emma. You must take me to Miss Muray's some evening, and introduce me regularly."

Kate had known Frank too well to suppose he would despise Mary because her mother had been reduced to comparative poverty; but she had not dreamed for an instant of his falling in love with her. But no, as she hastily thought over the good qualities of each, she clapped her hands and cried—

"That will I, for you are just suited to each other. We will go to-morrow night." And again and again Frank went, and, after the two first interviews, always without Kate. He was noble-hearted, intellectual and refined, and Mary could not long resist the devoted suit he paid to her. Indeed, after some maidenly struggles with her heart, she yielded herself to loving him with all the depth of her pure, yet ardent nature.

Frank was too sensible to regard the mere accessories of fortune. Perhaps, indeed, he loved Mary the better for her poverty. He could never have entertained an affection for her, if she had not been amiable and intelligent; nor perhaps, even if her parents had been unworthy; but all things else he considered comparatively indifferent. Himself accustomed from his earliest years, to fashionable society, he knew its exact value; and he was accustomed to say that "worth, not wealth, was what he sought in a wife."

Mary, on her part, loved Frank for his frankness, intelligence and generous qualities, and not for his fortune. "I would rather remain single," she said, "than marry for wealth."

About three months after the day on which our story opens, Kate Villiers called on her schoolmate Emma.

"Who do you think is going to be married?" she said. "You give it up? well Frank Hastings and Mary murray."

"What!" exclaimed Emmma, pale with mortification, for she had assiduously sought Frank's notice, "not Frank Hastings and that 'thread and needle womans daughter?"

"Yes! and a happy couple they will make. Mary will now have the wealth she is so well fitted to adorn."

"I shan't visit her," said Emma, pettishly. "She's a nobody. If Mr. Hastings chooses to disgrace himself, let him; but he'll find out the 'old families won't recognise his acquaintance."

"Pshaw!" said Kate contemptuously. "You know better. Mr. Hastings is himself a member of one of the 'oldest families' we have; and being such is above all the ridiculous notions of the mere 'parvenue.' It happens, too, that Mary has 'good blood,' as you would call it. She is a grand-daughter of a signer of the Declartion, an American pattern of nobility, I take it, if we have any at all."

"Then it is on that account he marries her," was the splenetic reply.

"No, he never knew it till he asked her to have him. Her virtues and accomplishments won his heart, and they alone." In due time Frank and Mary were married, Kate being led to the altar on the same day. Emma has learnt a lesson, and since then, inquires less superciliously about a new acquaintance.

The Faithless Fair.

"A plain, ungarnished tale, without
The aid of fiction's garb."

Henry W——joined a company of volunteers during the memorable revolutionary struggle between Great Britain ind the American Colonies. His youthful bosom glowed with that patriotic fire which seemed to animate the whole continent. At the period we speak of, it became not the man to hold back—his liberty depended upon the meditated blow—a blow aimed at the greatest power in Europe, the giant of war through ages of blood. But whatever obstacles existed, they became pigmies when compared with the objects set forth in that Declaration which inspired every patriotic heart to resolve on liberty or death.

Henry rushed into battle, heedless of danger and reckless of consequences. It was at the battle of Trenton, which more than any other single battle during the war, decided its fate, that Henry, rushing into the hottest of the conflict, gained the enemy's standard, and bore it off in triumph. For this act of youthful bravery, Henry was promoted to the rank of Captain, and gained the high esteem of his superior officers. We shall not follow our horo through the many and various campaigns, suffice it is to say, that one act of heroism succeeded another, until at the termination of the war we find him returned, among a list of cotemporary heroes, as a Major.

Previous to Henry's joining the army he was betrothed to a young lady of great personal beauty and considerable property. She parted from him with many protestations of love and continuing affection, and her tears fell on the cheek of her lover to seal the words, "I am thine." Day after day succeeded his departure, and she anxiously waited the return of the post. It came: her lover's letters were filled with protestations of love and constancy. while the papers teemed with the horoic actions of the brave, and the rapid promotion of his youthful companions, there was no mention made of Henry. They all spoke of Major Drayton—the young the noble and the brave; and the sigh of disappointment often escaped the bosom of Helen, and a wish that it was her Henry. Helen was proud—the passing events of the war had created in her heart an ambitious fire; it smothered her love for Henry, and kindled another, flaming with every opposite quality. But to return to Henry. Returning, with his youthful bosom elate with hope and joy convinced that one faithful heart would sympathize with him in recounting his many sufferings and privations, during a long tedious, and bloody campaign, he determined to surprise his love by a stratagem. Others may condemn an act of this kind, as one unworthy a man, a lover—but whatever Henry's motives were, he hid them entirely from others. Under another name he entered the army—under the assumed title he gained honor, fame and renown.

Aware, with such to recommend him, there would be no doubt of a happy and joyous welcome, he therefore determined to surprise his Helen in another guise—in the garb of a poor soldier. He tapped at the door of her mother—he was admitted by a servant, and conducted into the parlor. Other officers had been there to pay their respects; the brilliant dress of many a youthful warrior had passed before her eyes, and with a beating heart she obeyed the summons. A tinge of red passed over her face as he imprinted a fond kiss on her cheek; that kiss, given in the fulness of a fond heart was not returned with that fervor his glowing fancy had pictured; 'twas cold, formal and trembling.

"And you have returned?" escaped her rather as a question than an exclamation.

"Yes, Helen, I am returned, the same in heart, the same fond lover as ever. But you see my garb denotes the sufferings I have endured—what misery, privations and toil—but what of this? We have gained our liberty, and planted on our shore the banner of 'Virtue, Liberty, and Independence.' And thy dear. sweet image was ever present to my sight; it cheered me in battle, and I could press my cold blanket with ecstatic joy, knowing that one fond heart was beating for me, and that heart was yours.'

"Alas! Henry, you—you—must not be astonished to find a change in me, My parents"——

"A change in thee, in thee, Helen! Good heavens!—what mean you? Speak?"

"——have insisted on our separation, and fate has decreed it—we must part."

"Gracious heaven Helen, is this their former kindness? their former love? But I forgive them; their motives are to me obvious; but in you Helen, this transition is beyond my belief; is this your love?"

"Daughter Helen" was now repeated by her mother without, "Captain Ellis is below"

"Captain Ellis;" muttered Heny, he my rival?"

But before she could answer, Captain Ellis rushed in, followed by Helen's mother; Ellis was in full uniform, and the contrast between the humble garb of Henry was certainly not much to his advantage. He was received with smiles, and marked attention. Helen introduced him. "Captain Ellis, permit me to introduce my friend, Henry W——, to—"

"What Major Drayton. Our Major in this garb? By my faith, you become it well Doff your beaver Major; your hard earned laurels ill become these humble habiliments. Ladies permit me to introduce in his true character the gallant Major Francis Drayton. I presume fame has already done that honor, you now see him in proper person, though, I acknowledge not in proper garb."

"Captain Ellis," exclaimed Drayton, whatever your opinions may be respecting this disguise, I presume its colors are no disgrace—'tis the plain garb of a continental soldier, and honors the wearer more, at this proud epoch of our country's glory, than the diadem on the brow of a monarch."

"And is my dear Henry that brave Major Drayton?" cried Helen, with every demonstratiou of joy.

"Captain Ellis continued Drayton, "I have used a name in battle not my own. Whatever my reasons were, they are now forever silenced. I am now Francis Drayton. By the last will and testament of a dear and loved aunt, I became heir of an immense property by the assumption of that name—my other motive was trial of affection. Miss Helen can explain to you, Captain Ellis, the effect of that trial—if her conduct would justify any future explanation I am and still will be ready to give it. 'Tis her parents' command and her wish—with such powerful reasonings opposed to my wishes, I silently obey."

"My commands, Major—my commands; I never"——

"Hold, madam, your words if allowed to explain farther, only tend to lessen Helen lower in my estimation than she is at present, and, of course will avail but little. Convinced, therefore, that ambition, not love, actuated Miss Helen, I will doff my beaver as Captain Ellis observes, and wish you all a very good morning."

So saying, he departed, leaving the Captain thunstruck, and Helen and her mother equally mute and confounded.

Nobody sees a battle. The common soldier fires away midst a smoke-mist, or hurries on to the charge in a crowd which hides everything from him. The officer is too anxious about the performance of what he is especially charged with to mind what others are doing. The commander cannot be everywhere, and see every wood, watercourse, or ravine in which his orders are carried into execution; he learns from reports how the work goes on. It is well, for a battle, one of those jobs which men do without daring to look upon. Over miles of country, at every field-fence, in every gorge of valley, or entry into a wood, there is murder committing—wholesale, continuous, reciprocal murder. The human form—God's image—is mutilated, deformed, larcerated in every possible way, and with every variety of torture. The wounded are jolted off in carts to the rear, their bared nerves crushed into maddening pain at every stone or rut; or the flight and pursuit trample over them, leaving them to writhe and roar without assistance—and fever and thirst, the most enduring of painful sensations, possess them entirely.

Thirst, too, has seized upon the yet able-bodied soldier, who, with bloodshot eye and tongue lolling out, plies his trade—blaspheming, killing with savage delight, callous when the brains of his best loved comrade are spattered over him. The battle-field is, if possible, a more painful object of contemplation than tho combatants. They are in their vocation earning their bread—what will not men do for a shilling a day? But their work is carried on amid the fields, gardens, and homesteads of men unused to war. They left their homes, with all that habit and happy associations have made precious, to bear its brunt. The poor, the aged, the sick, are left in the hurry, to be killed by shots, or beaten down as the charge and countercharge go over them. The ripening grain is trampled down, the garden is trodden into a black mud; the fruit trees' bending beneath their lucious load, are shattered by the cannon shot. Churches and private dwellings are used as fortresses and ruined in the conflict. Barns and stack-yards catch fire, and the conflagration spreads on all sides.

At night the steed is stabled beside the altar, and the weary homicides of the day complete the wrecking of houses to make their lairs for slumber. The fires of the bivouac complete what the fires kindled by the battle have left unconsumed. The surviving soldiers march on to act the same scene over again elsewhere; and the remnant of the scattered inhabitants return to find the mangled bodies of those they have loved, amid the blackened ruins of their homes; to mourn with more agonizing grief over the missing, of whose fate they are uncertain; to feel themselves bankrupt of all the world's stores, to look from their children to the desolate fields and garners, and think of famine and pestilence engendered by the rotting bodies of the half-buried myriads of slain. The soldier marches on and on, inflicting and suffering as before. War is a continuance of battles—an epidemic striding from place to place, more horrible than the typhus, pestilence, or cholera which not unfrequently follow in its train. The quiet inhabitants of the beleagured town are cooped up, and cannot fly the place of conflict. The mutual injures inflicted by assailants and assailed are aggravated; their wrath is more frenzied; then come the storm and the capture, and the lustful excesses of the victor soldiery, striving to quench the drunkenness of blood in the drukenness of wine.

The eccentric movements of war—the marching and countermarching—often repeat the blow on districts slowly recovering from the first. Between destruction and the wasteful consumption of the soldiery, poverty pervades the land. Hopeless of the future, hardened by the scenes, of which he is a daily witness, perhaps goaded by revenge, the peasant becomes a plunderer and assassin. The horrible cruelties perpetrated by Spanish and French soldiers who fell into their power, were, the necessary consequences of war. The families of the upper classes are dispersed; the discipline of the family circle is removed; a habit of living in the day for the day; of drowning the thoughts of the morrow in transcient and illicit pleasure is engendered. The waste and desolation which a battle spreads over the battle-field, are as nothing when compared with the moral which war diffuses through all ranks of society, in the country which is the scene of war.

To Seekers after Truth.

Who art though, O, man or woman, that sayest in thy heart, "Where shall I go to learn my duty to my God, myself and my fellow beings?—thou who art ignorant, bewildered by the strifes and contentions among men by the conflicting creeds and opinions held forth by the various sects, as truth;—thou who hast been following after "Lo, here!" and "Lo, there is Christ!" until thou art lost in a wildernes and knowest not which way to travel to regain a peaceful home for thy weary soul, and art nearly to despair:—thou who has found the spiritual teachers to be physicians of no value, and art now desirous to come to the knowledge of that truth, which is able to free thy spirit from its bondage to ignorance and sinful passions

Receive, O man, or woman, a word of counsel from one who has been before thee, through the same wildernes, and has at length come into a place of broad rivers and streams, of green pastures and flowery fields where the truth maketh free and love casteth out fear, and the path shineth more to the perfect day.

Turn, turn thee from all thy teachers to the "still small voice," the secret monitor in thy own bosom which pointeth out to thee good and the evil—which reproveth thee when thou doest evil, and giveth the consolation and peace when thou doeth well;—turn thee to this monitor; let it be thy daily and hourly guide in all thy thoughts words and deeds. This "still small voice" is the voice of God. it is the Savior of the world; the path in which it would lead the is the highway of holiness, and the longer thou walkest therein the brighter will it shine the stronger and the happier wilt thou be. Then turn thee to it from all outward teachers, from all outward hopes, for behold the kingdom of God is within thee; it is there and their alone thou must seek instruction, and obeying that instruction, thy panting soul will find rest.—Pleasure Boat.

Cheap Railway Fares in England.

The London and Northwestern railway company are carrying out some "extensive experiments' in the way of a reducton of fares, with a view of testing the productivenes of the local traffic. Hitherto the price of day tickets, for certain distances, has been one-third less than two fares, a further reduction upon which, to the extent of one-sixth has been made. The Midland Company have also reduced their fares, and have assimilated them to, and have adopted, the scale on the Great Norther Railway. The great problem of the age with regard to the profit of railway investments, is to determine what rate of fare will secure the largest revenue. It has been demonstrated, that on the English railways four fifths of the gross revenue comes from passengers at one penny or two cents per mile, and that, invariably, the number of passengers has fallen off, and the receipts have decreased whenever the rates have been raised. The commission formed by the British Parliament to inquire upon this and other perninent subjects, reported a mass of evidence in favor of low fares that no reasonable man could resist, and some of the English companies propose to give the low fare system a trial upon the most radical scale.—We are rather fearful they may not persevere for the length of time necessary to give the system a fair trial. The proper mean is the thing to be arrivd at.—Sci. American.

Affection.

We sometimes meet with men who seem to think that any indulgence in an affectionate feeling is a weakness. They will return from a journey and greet their families with a distant dignity, and move among their children with the cold and lofty splendor of an iceberg, surrounded by its broken fragments. There is hardly a more unnatural sight on earth, than one of those families without a heart. A father had better extinguish a boy's eyes, than take away his heart. Who that has experienced the joys of friendship, and values sympathy and affection, would not rather lose all that is beautiful in nature's scenery, than be robbed of the hidden treasure of his heart? Cherish, then, your heart's best affections. Indulge in the warm and gushing emotions of filial, parental and fraternal love.—Think it not a weakness. God is love. Love God, everybody, and everything that is lovely. Teach your children to love; to love the rose, the robin; to love their parents; to love their God. Let it be the studied object of their domestic culture to give them warm hearts, ardent affections. Bind your whole family together by these strong cords. You cannot make them too strong. Religion is love; love to God, love to man.

John Adams, expresident of the United States, being called upon for a contribution for Foreign Missions, said:—

"I have nothing to give for that purpose; but there are in this vicinity six ministers, not one of whom will preach in the other's pulpit—now I will give as much as any one else and more to civilize these clergymen.

An exchange paper says that the English have gotten up a sailing church on the Thames, with a permanent minister. We just reverse all that on this side of the water. We have permanent churches, worth $50,000 a piece, and ministers who are perpetually sailing to Europe, for the benefit of their congregations.

Appearances always take precedence of utility.—Roses and double pinks are among the least useful of all vegetables, and yet roses and pinks have always a place provided for them even in the parlor. A potato, on the contrary, is among the most useful of plants, and yet who ever saw a potato vine even on the mantlepiece of a kitchen. How is this world taken with show.

The Evils of Party and Sect.

Partisan papers, it would certainly appear, conceive it to be their duty to set forth in the strongest and most alluring colors the peculiar dogmas of the respective parties to which they severally belong. To a certain extent this may all be well; so long as they adhere to the pure principles for the public good, upon which perhaps all parties are originally organised; but the influence of party is so powerful that in its desire to promote the cause which it espouses it overlooks the fundamental principles upon which it is founded, and resorts to base motives and means for its aggrandisement; casting reproach on its opponents by resorting to falsehood and abuse, misrepresenting motives and principles. This all know is the too common practice, adopted by a vast majority of partisan and sectarian papers throughout our country.

It is a question which must naturally arise in every honest and reflecting mind, whether this course is best calculated to promote the public good, or whether a more strict adherence to truth, and a more general recognition of republican principles, in the advocacy of party measures, are not better calculated than the usual course adopted, to promote the public welfare. Believing this to be the case we have deviated somewhat from the beaten track of popular prejudice, and advocated that which we conceive to be for the best interests of the people, trusting to their discernment and independence for our patronage and support.

We trust the day has forever gone by when party dictation can any longer bow down the necks of the people to bondage, or when the anathema of a priest will be permitted to affect the best interests of the people by preventing their investigation of all and every measure affecting for weal or woe their secular or eternal happiness. Therefore we shall continue to criticise, investigate and advocate in accordance with what we conceive to be the true interests of independent freemen, to the best of our abilities, all matters pertaining to ther welfare; permitting and inviting all men, whatever their political or religious creeds, to be heard in behalf of their respective opinions. "Truth invites free discussion; error shrinks from all invest'gaiton."

We are led to make these remarks in consequence of the vile abuse with which most partisan papers are filled. It does appear to us that the scurrilious slang with which too many garmish their columns are a disgrace to a free and independent press. Indeed, how can a press be free which is a slave to such degrading habits? Is not such a course calculated to lessen, and justly lessen too their influence for good among the people? Is it expected of the people that they will take foul epithets and slanderous insinuations for arguments; is this the way to instruct, enlighten, elevate and free mankind? Surely an appeal to their better judgment is all that is wanting to induce publishers of papers to abandon so suicidal a policy; a policy which degrades and enslaves, enervates and destroys that which it should be their best interest, their highest ambition to cherish and sustain—a free, enlightened and argumentative discussion of principles, that by their correct understanding the best may be adopted while the bad are cast away.

The great mass of the people, of all political parties, and classes, are interested only in what will conduce to the general good. Farmers, artisans and laborers can have no further interest in the measures of a party than as they are calculated to promote the greatest prosperity of their country and the happines of the human race. This being the case, the importance of the subject should suggest to the mind of every man the best course to pursue to attain this important object. We contend that the course generally pursued is better calculated to defeat than to secure it; indeed that it is the main cause why the people's rights have been trodden under foot—why human bondage, oppression, degradation and misery prevail over the land. Let them therefore "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good." Let them adhere to principle, to truth, instead of parties and to sects. It is by the abandonment of the former for the aggrandisement of the latter, that error, wrong, oppression and misery are found. How important it is then that those who hold the position of teachers should teach aright—that each person for himself should be properly informed on a subject which it most concerns him to know. How else can he properly appreciate and dircharge the duties which devolve upon him as a good citizen. "Knowledge is power;" not only is this the case in regard to political influence, but throughout all the various ramifications of society, through all the multitudinous affairs of life: from the manufacture of a pin, a shoe, or a steam-engine, to that of a Constitution of a State. It needs but a single reflection to convince the most casual observer of its truth, of the truth of the premises we have laid down; let them but turn their thoughts to the varied interests and employments of man and at a single glance they must peseeive that every interest is controlled by men of enterprise, of knowledge. The history, not only of the present, but of all past time, conclusively proves that not only have men of knowledge and enterprise swayed the destinies of nations, but that in proportion to the intelligence of the people and their adherance to correct moral principles have they been free and happy. Wherever the mass of the people have been intelligent there they have not permitted their fellow men to tyranise over them, but have protected themselves from the designs of the ambitious by the safeguards of a charter, a constitution, or a representation in the government. It is not necessary to follow this point further, the simple allusion to it being sufficient to convince our readers of its truth; our object being simply to show that it is absolutely necessary for the people, the mass, to have a knowledge of and supervisionary care of these their most important interests. As above stated, reflection must covince the reader that his interests are identified with the good of the whole, therefore whatever will best promote the welfare of the whole will inevitably promote his own best good. If the reader is not fully convinced of the truth of the foregoing we trust he will reperuse and reflect on it, as what follows depends in a great measure on its correctness.

Governments, or this government especially, was instituted for the protection of man's rights, which its founders expressly and emphatically declare are to all men equal and inalienable. This being the object for which it was instituted, it can be the only object for which it should be maintained. The question therefore arises, do all men under this government enjoy equal rights? The response to this question must be NO. Each individual under the government, can for himself answer this question in the most emphatic manner, that they do not. Is this the fault of the government? If not where does it lie and what is the remedy?

These questions we have already partially answered, and shall endeavor to make it more explicit, trusting that the good sense of our readers, especially if they admit our premises and conclusions, will dictate to them the necessity of acting in accordance with the suggestions.

The great obstacle to the full enjoyment of equal rights by all the people, in our estimation, is, the lust for office and the aggrandisement of party. Politicians of every party, the better to secure their own selfish ends, organize parties, on some pretext for the public good to be sure, and make everything subservient to the advancement of that party to secure their own. The history of all parties shows conclusively that this is the grave of the people's rights, the rock on which their hopes of emancipation from tyranny has been made shipwreck. Instead of adhering to the cause for which a party is organised, to the fundamental principles of truth and justice on which it may or should have been based, they drop the principle and contend for supremacy, for power; thus success converts it into an engine for their destruction, and instead of promoting the public welfare it only serves to rivit stronger the chains of despotism.

This is especially the history of our government. Instituted on the broad ground of the equal inalienable rights of all men, which gave it so prosperous and glorious a beginning, men have lost sight of this grand and fundamental principle of true democracy in the lust for power. Political parties, like religious sects, have left the principles which was the fundamental basis of their respective cause or purpose, for the lust of power, the aggrandisement of sect, until none, no, not one, possesses the principles which they originally contended were of primary importance, vital, chief. With full power in the Constitution—if not, then with the people who established and uphold it, to amend it, so that we may act in conformity with the object for which the government was estabiished—to restore to man his lost but nevertheless inalienable rights.—to abolish Slavery not only in the Territories and in the District of Columbia, but forsooth, in every part of the United States, but the lust of power and the aggrandisement of party instead of promoting these grand objects for which the government was established, has rivited the chains of Slavery stronger and also extended its area.

So in our State governments. and especially in our own State, instead of adhering to the principles of equal rights, they are made subservient to the advancement of party, and special privileges are made the corrupting means whereby power is retained, until the the sacred principle of equal rights, which are the fundamental principles of a democratic government, are entirely forgotten.

So also with religious sects, they also have abandoned the fundamental principles of Christianity, and give us in their stead the peculiar dogmas of sects, thus making their aggrandisement the fatal rock on which it has become wrecked. With full power and authority in the Bible for us to promote the cause of God, by doing good to our fellow man, to love him as our brother, we entirely overlook this fundamental principle and endeavor in its place to establish sectarianism, to promote tho cause of the Baptists, the Methodists, the Presbyterians, the Quakers, &c., &c.; collecting tithes of mint and anise and cummin, omitting the more weightier matters of truth and justice, of love to God and love to man. "How can a man love God whom he hath not seen if he do not love his brother whom he hath seen?"

These are the causes; the remedy has undoubtedly already suggested itself to all who have attentively considered the subject. Reader, you undoubtedly perceive the remedy lies with you! Do not be frightened, the case is not so desperate as you may at first imagine; it is only to follow the dictates of that still small voice, that friendly monitor, that living witness, and the thing is accomplished; "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets," this covers the whole ground, pure religion and pure democracy, by adopting it both will prevail.

A NEW BUSINESS.—We understand that the large Paper and Oil Cloth Factory in the Fifth Ward is being altered, and that machinery and looms are being placed there for the purpose of weaving shirts and drawers. These articles have come into general use in every section of the Union, and Cohoes, a mauufacturing village in Albany county, New-York has been, for years, the only place, we believe, in the Union, where they have been manufactured by machinery. An establishment of the kind was started a few years since in Wethersfield, Conn., but it was burned together with its patterns, &c., and was never re-built. The manufactory of Messrs. Egberts & Baily, at Cohoes, in 1847, worked up about 5000 pounds of wool per day and employed 250 operatives, manufecturing 2,000 pairs or shirts and drawers per week. Since that time their operations have been materially increased by the erection of additional buildings and machinery. Articles of their manufacture are knit in such a manner as to require two seams in completing tbem. A gentleman from that vicinity has, for a number of months past, been superintending the erection of the machinery noticed here, which has been fully tested and does away with the sewing of one seam. The Factory is commodious and ere long we expect to hear that Newark Shirts and Drawers will become as noted as our other manufactures.—Newark Mercury.

Things in Europe.

By the remarkable passage of the Canada we publish this morning foreign news to the 10th inst. received in this city yesterday, just nine days after leaving London. The advices from England show an increased activity in business; the harvests are secured, and trade of all kinds seems to rejoice in more than usual prosperity. Of the same tenor are our French advices—one cheerful feature at least, in the dearth of all encouraging political signs.

The most prominent occurrence noticed in our dispatch is the fact of the Austrian Butcher, Haynau, having been mobbed in the celebrated Malt Liquor establishment of Barclay, Perkins & Co. and severely beaten by the brawny draymen and coal heavers, whose vigorous sympathies with Freedom come near exterminating the scourge of Hungary. However great may have been the outrage committed, no man will ever receive less condolence in his affliction than this same Butcher Haynau. The People's indignation—though we would not wish it manifested in the same violent manner—should make it impossible for him to breathe the air of any country, where it is no crime to hate all forms of Oppression, Cowardice and Cruelty.

From the Continent we have movements—nothing more. Prussia has shut up the gun-boats of Schleswig- Holstein in the harbor of Kiel; moreover, she refuses, in common with a Congress of all the German Princes, to attend the Austrian Diet at Frankfort. Russia wishes to convoke a Diplomatic Congress at Vienna, but neither the place nor the patron will be acceptable to the other German States.—

There are rumors, of course, of new plots in Orleans and Bourbon families, but we prefer to wait further developments before speculating on the subject. Louis Napoleon is making another harmonious tour.—Tribune.

Interesting from Washington.

CONGRESS.—Senate.—Mr. Bell, from the Indian Committee, reported a bill to preserve peace with the Indian tribes in California, which, after amendment, so as to fix the annual salaries of three Indian Agents, at $3,000, was passed.

Messrs, Gwin and Fremont introduced a number of bills for the benefit of California, relating to lands, the gold mines and placers, survey of the coast, a light house system, donation pre-emption rights, and settlement of land claims.

After the consideration of the morning buisiness, the bill for the suppression of the slave trade in the District of Columbia was taken up on motion by Mr. Clay, the pending question being upon concurring in the amendments made by the Senate in committee, providing penalties enacting slaves to, and giving the corporate authorities control over the ingress or egress of free people of color.

Mr. Hale wanted to know what would become of the free people of color if they were ejected from the District? The laws of the State of Maryland on one side, and Virginia on the other, prohibited free negroes from entering those States—where, then, was the ejected negro to exercise his natural right of breathing? Laughter.

Mr. Clay submitted a few remarks against the amendments.

The debate was continued at considerable length after which the amendments of the committe were considerably modified, on the motion of Mr. Badger in order to meet the objections urged by Mr. Clay and others.

The question being taken upon concurring in the amendments of the committee, they were severally rejected, and the original bill was then under consideration as reported from the committee of thirteen.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed, by yeas 32; nays 19,

HOUSE.—Mr. Toombs said a few weeks ago he was instructed to make a report on the tariff question—since that time a great change had been going on in the public mind, and in his own amongst the rest, and he submitted a report that, in the judgment of the committee of Ways and Means, it is inexpedient to attempt any legislation altering the existing duties on imports.

Mr. Vinton moved a substitute that the Committee on Ways and Means report on tuesday next at the hour of half-past 11 o'clock, a bill to the effect that all foreign goods, wares and merchandize shall be appraised according to the average market value in the principal ports of the United States during the year ending June 30th, 1846, under regulations prescribed by the secretary of the Treasury so as to secure a uniform valuation throughout the United States. Mr. Vinton said that as this was one of those propositions which every one understands, and as there was no time to discus it, he moved the previous question.

Mr hall moved a call of the House, which was not ordered.

The demand for the previous question was seconded—ayes 89, noes 69.

Mr Phelps moved to lay the whole subject on the table—not carrid—yeas 93, nays 94.

Mr. Vinton's amendment was rejected. Yeas 93; nays, 96.

The original resolution, declaring an alteration of the tariff inexpedient, was disagreed to. Yeas 91; nays, 93.

Mr, Brooks moved to reconsider the vote, to enable himself to offer a resolution, that a committee of seven be appointed to sit during the recess, to inquire into the operation of the existing tariff system, and all the facts relating thereto and oonnected therewith, and report the same at the ensuing sesion of the House; and that said committe have power to summon witnesses and propound such questions as may be necessary to elicit information.

Mr. Thompson, of Miss., moved to lay the motion to reconsider on the table, and it was agreed to—yeas 93, nays 92; so the whole subject was put to sleep.

The bill to Suppress the Slave Trade in the District of Columbia, was read a third time on Monday and passed. Yeas 33; Nays 19.

☞ It is stated that M'LLE LIND has appropriated the entire net results of her visit to America, however large they may be, to the establishment and endowment of Free Schools in Norway and Sweeden. What a noble example, ought not this to shame our legislators, who under a government professing to be free, neglect this most important object. We trust to see this stigma on our State speedily removed.

Accident on the Central Railroad.

Randall Clark, a laborer of this place, was ran over by the freight train near the New Market Depot, early on Monday morning last and was killed. It being yet dark he was not seen by the engineer—the fact was not known until some time afterwards. He was drunk we understand at the time of the accident.

The Essex County Institute resolved, on 23d, to award, at their coming Fair, a silver medal for the best loaf of domestic wheat and rye bread, each, and the same for the best loaf of baker's bread.

Duty of Legislators Respecting the Education of the People.

None of the States of the north have ever given this matter the attention it demands. When we legislate about public education, this is the question before us: Shall we give our posterity the greatest blessing which one generation can bestow upon another? Shall we give them a personal power which will create wealth in every form, multiply ships, and roads of earth, or of iron: subdue the forest, till the field, chain the rivers, hold the winds as its vassals, bind with an iron yoke the fire and water, and catch and tame the lightning of God? Shall we give them a personal power which will make them sober temperate, healthy and wise; which shall keep them at peace, abroad and at home, organize them so wisely that all shall be united and yet, each left free, with no tyranny of the few over the many, or the little over the great? Shall we enable them to keep, to improve, to double the manifold, the political, social, and personal, social, and personal blessings they now possess; shall we give them this power to create riches, to promote order, peace, happiness—all forms of human welfare, or shall we not? That is the question. Give us intelligent men, moral men, men well developed in mind and conscience, heart and soul, men that love man and God, and industrial prosperity, and social prosperity, are sure to follow But, without such men, all the machinery of this threefold prosperity is but a bauble in a child's hand, which he will soon break or lose, which he cannot replace when gone, nor use while kept.

Rich men, who have intelligence and goodness will educate their children at whatever cost. There are some men, even poor men's sons, born with such native power, that they will achieve an education, often a most masterly culture; men whom no poverty can degrade, or make vulgar, whom no lack of means of culture can keep from being wise and great. Such are exceptional men; the majority, nine-tenths of the people, will depend, for thir culture, on the public institutions of the land. If there had never been a free public school in New England, not one half of her mechanics and farmers would now be able to read, not a fourth part of her women. I need not stop to tell what would be the condition of her agriculture, her commerce; they would have been perhaps, even behind the agriculture, commerce and manufactures of South Carolina. I need not ask what would be the condition of her free churches, or the civil institutions which now beautify her rugged shores and sterile soil; there would be no such churches, no such institution. Take away the free schools, you take away the cause of our manifold prosperity; double their efficiency and value, you not only double and quadruple the prosperity of the people, but you will enlarge their welfare—political, social, personal—far more than I now dare to calculate.—Theodore Parker.

Truth and Honesty—to Children.

Children, did you ever see a man, woman or child who was in the habit of telling falsehoods, or so dishonest that you would not dare to trust them? I presume some of you have, and if I were to ask you whether you cold love and respect them as much as you do those who are perfectly honest and truthful, you would answer 'no.' Then you are in some degree sensible of the value of truth and honesty, and you should remember that if you do not practice these virtues yourselves you can be respected no more than others who cannot be believed,

A man came to me the other day to borrow money; he told me a pitiful story—said he had no wood and could not pay his house rent and expected to be turned into the street if he could not borrow money to pay the rent- I could not believe a word he said, for he had lied to me before; I had no money to give away nor to lose, but might have loaned him a dollar or two for a few days, if I could have been sure of receiving it again, but I knew he was dishonest and would not pay me if he could, and more than this I knew he was too lazy to work, but would saunter about the streets, and hang about the stores in idleness when he might be at work.

But after he was gone another man came in who was very poor, and wanted me to loan him two dollars a few days to pay his rent with. I knew he was honest and let him have it, and he came and paid me the very day I wanted to use it. So here you see the difference between truth and falsehood, honesty and dishonesty. The honest man or woman, or boy or girl can be believed and trusted, and will always find some to befriend them, but those wholie and cheat cannot be believed nor trusted, and can never be respected nor have friends to assist them,

Now children I hope you will always tell the truth, and always be honest. If you do wrong it would be better to own it, and take a whipping, than to tell a lie to hide it. You have read of heroes, and great men, but there is no greater hero on earth than the child, who, when hs has been guilty of a fault or committed an error, comes forward boldly and owns it instead of telling a lieto hide it.

You must remember that those who tell great lies, began fist by telling little ones. After telling a little one they were willing to tell a greater one, and so went on lying till nobody will believe them.

I hope you will ever remember how noble it is always to speak the truth and be honest, for truth and honesty are worth more than money.—Pleasure Boat.

A meeting of the New Jersey Historical Society was held at Morristown on Thursday last. A large number of distinguished gentlemen were present.

After the usual routine of business had been disposed of, a paper was read relating to the robbery of the treasury, which occurred a short time previous to the breaking out of the Revolutionary war, and which caused a great excitement at the time. The party known in those days as the Patriotic party made a great handle of it, rendering the admintration of William Franklin, the royal Governor, quite obnoxious.

A historical paper was also read on lhe early Hollanders, who first peopled the colony of New-Netherlands, now the States of New York and New Jersey. The first permanent grants of land in New Jersey were made at Hoboken and Harsimus, about the year 1630.

Many settlers from New England came to the Colony in order to enjoy a greater degree of freedom than they could obtain among their own countrymen. It is said that whilst the Puritans of New England sentenced persons to death for witchcraft, no person could be admitted to the Dutch Churches, without disclaiming all belief in such agencies.

The first Indian grant on the Raritan was dated 1681. The settlers, generally, were Hugenots in religion.

Much interest was manifested in four colonial stamps, received from the Hon. W. P. Brown, M. P. for Liverpool, through the Hon. W. B. Kinney, U. S. Charge to Sardinia. They were prepared under the famous Stamp Act for use in America, which first excited the rebellion in America, and were found in one of the departments in London, They were for two shillings and sixpence each, and were intended to be attached to deeds, grants of land, &c.

☞ Reader, every man of intelligence and reflection, every prosperous farmer or business man, will tell you that in no possible way can you more judiciously and beneficially expend ten shillings, than in paying for the Planfield Gazette. They will tell you that if you do not take a newspaper that you most sadly neglect your own interest; and if you have a family, by taken one a short time only, you will be convinced that you have sadly neglected theirs. If you do take one, you undoubtedly know their value, and we are convinced that after perusing our's, you will find yourself uneasy and be dissatisfied with yourself until you subscribe for it. As it is published every Thursday, it makes it very convenient for those who live at a distance and who visit Palinfield on that day for tailor-work, or on other business, to accommodate themselves with it. Certainly, where a newspaper can be had for the trifling sum of ten shillings a year, none will fail to avail themselves of the opportunity.

GREAT.

SPRING & SUMMER MEDICINE.

BRISTOL'S COMPOUND EXTRACT OF SARSAPRILLA. The value of this great American Specific for all diseases and disorders generated by impure blood, is universally known and appreciated.

TWENTY-FIVE PHYSICIANS,

among the most eminent in this country, have recently signed and caused to be published, a document certifying that BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA was the best preparation of the kind in existence, and that they

USED IT DAILY IN THEIR PRACTICE,

with the happiest effects. Remember that for

MORE THAN TWENTY YEARS

It has been before the public, performing in that time

MILLIONS OF CURES!

During that period multitudes of Sarsaprilla, so called, have been palmed upon the public, but no other has

STOOD THE TEST OF TIME!

Every year has added thousands upon thousands of bottles to its sales, its cures, and the

IMMENSE MASS OF CERTIFICATES

Which, if printed and bound would form a library of themselves! The victim of

HEREDITARY SCROFULA

with suppurating glands, honey-combed flesh, and caries eating into his bones, finds in BRISTOL'S SARSAPRILLA a balm for his afflictions. His horrible torments are assuaged and his malady not only relieved, but,

PERMANENTLY CURED!

It may be safely asserted from the results of nearly a quarter of a century's experience, that

BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA,

is beyond all comparison the

MOST WONDERFUL REMEDY ON EARTH

for the following diseases and all others proceeding from.

VITIATED BLOOD.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, Rheumatism, Obstinate Cutaneous Eruptions, Pimples or Pustules on the Face, Blotches, Boils, Chronic Sore Eyes, Ring Worm or Tetter, Scald Head, Enlargement and Pains of the Bones and Joints, Stubborn Ulcers, Syphilitic Symptoms, Sciata or Lumbago, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury.

Acites, or Dropsy

Exposure, or

Imprudence in Life, Liver Complaint, Ague and Fever, Intermitting Fever, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Plethora of Blood in the Head, Piles, Pains in the Back, Side, Breast or Loins, and all forms of Muscular, Glandular, and Skin Diseases.

It is also a sovereign specific for General Debility and the best renovator of a broken constitution. It braces and reinvigorates every organ, promotes activity and regularity in every function, and produces that condition of the whole physical system which is the best security for ☞ LONG LIFE!

Let all who wish to purge the blood from the impurities contracted from the free indulgence of the appetite during the winter, and to prepare the system to

RESIST SUMMER EPIDEMICS,

Resort now to

BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA

the gentle aperient, the powerful tonic, the unrivalled antiseptic, and great builder up and

FORTIFIER OF THE SYSTEM!

The record which has been kept since the introduction of Bristol's Sarsaparilla, twenty odd years ago, exhibits an aggregate of known cures which established its invaluable properties. Among the recorded facts are the following, in round numbers:

Cured of Summer Complaints, 10,000.

100,000 Cured of Scrofula.

Cured of Rheumatism, 58,000

150,000 Cured of Diseases of the Skin.

Cured of Liver Complaints, 35,000.

27,000 Cured of Diarrhœa and Dysentery.

There is not space in an advertisement for a full enumeration, but the cures amount to

A GRAND TOTAL OF ONE MILLION.

The public faith in it has never wavered—never can waver; for it is founded on experience, just as their want of faith in other spurious compounds is also founded in experience. They

FLY FROM MINERAL NOSTRUMS

to seek hope, life, and vigor from this

PURELY VEGETABLE REMEDY.

And are Never Disappointed!

Therefore, however broken in health and spirits, however loathsome to himself and others, let no man despair of recovery. Let the patient only understand that Bristol's Sarsaparilla is an infallible remedy for only persuade him for his own life's sake to try it, and those who know what it has acomplished will have no hesitation in predicting his speedy restoration to health.

A LEGION OF DISEASES,

As a means of regulating all the functions of

WOMAN'S DELICATE ORGANIZATION

it has no equal in the materia medica, and at that critical period of life, when the first stage of her decline commences, its cordial and invigorating properties will enable her to

PASS THE CRISIS SAFELY.

The reader will find, on looking TESTIMONIALS, they are not 'got up' for the occason; but that they are bona fide letters from gentlemen living in our midst, and who can be seeen daily at their places of business.

READ, AND SATISFY YOURSELVES:

Read the following from an eminent Physician:

The undersigned being acquainted with some of the ingredints of HUTCHINGS' VEGETABLE DYSPEPSIA BITTERS, and having used it for some time in his practice with every desired effect, here commends this medicine from the certainty of its effect and gives it a preference over all preparations in medicine for that distressing complaint, Dyspepsia.

T. HARDENBERGH, M. D., No. 1 Beach street N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half; during a greater portion of this time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself until he was recommended to try HUTCHINGS' DYSPEPSIA BITTERS; he very soon derived a benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of HUTCHINGS' BITTERS for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine. L B. WYMAN. 23 Burling Slip.

New York, September 3. 1849.

The following certificate is from M. B. Brady, the celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness. I was advised to take Hutching's Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease, and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia.

M. B. BRADY, No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

The proprietor of this medicine has received many other certificates of cures, equally remarkable, of the various diseases for which this preparation is applicable; but the above are deemed necessary to satisfy any unprejudiced mind of its value and superiority above all other preparations.

CHERRY PECTORAL:

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, ASTHMA, WHOOPING-COUGH AND CONSUMPTION.

The uniform success which has attended the use of this preparation—its salutary effect—its power to relieve and cure affections of the Lungs, have gained for it a celebrity equalled by no other medicine. We offer it to the afflicted with entire confidence in its virtues, and the full belief that it will subdue and remove the severest attacks of disease upon the throat and Lungs. These results, as they become publicly known, very naturally attract the attention of medical men and philanthropists everywhere.—What is their opinion of CHERRY PECTORAL may be seen in the following:—

VALENTINE MOTT, M. D.,

Prof. Surgery Med. College, New York, says:—

"It gives me pleasure to certify the value and efficacy of Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL, which I consider peculiarly adapted to cure diseases of the Throat and Lungs."

THE RT. REV. LORD BISHOP FIELD

writes in a letter to his friend, who was fast sinking under an affection of the Lungs:—"Try the CHERRY PECTORAL and if any medicine can give you relief, with the blessing of God that will."

CHIEF JUSTICE EUSTIS,

of Louisiana, writes "That a young daughter of his was cured of several severe attacks of Croup by the "CHERRY PECTORAL."

ASTHMA AND BRONCHITIS.

The Canadian Journal of Medical Science states, "That Asthma and Bronchitis so prevalent in this inclement climate, has yielded with surprising rapidity to Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL, and we cannot too strongly recommend this skilful preparation to the Profession and public generally."

Let the relieved sufierer speak for himself:—

HARTFORD, Jan. 26. 1847.

Dr. J. C. Ayer—Dear Sir:—Having been rescued from a painful and dangerous disease by your medicine, gratitude prompts me to send you this acknowledgment, not only in justice to you, but for the information of others in like affliction.

A slight cold upon the lungs, neglected at first became so severe that spitting of blood, a violent cough and profuse night sweats followed and fastened upon me. I became emaciated, could not sleep, was distressed by my cough, and a pain through my chest, and in short had all the alarming symptoms of quick consumption. No medicine seemed at all to reach my case, until I providentially tried your CHERRY PECTORAL, which soon relieved and now has cured me.

Yours with respect. E. A. STEWART.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 17, 1848

Dr. Ayer, Lowell—Dear Sir:—I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form; so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breath on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my Physician prescribed, as an experiment, your CHERRY PECTORAL.

At first it seemed to make me worse, but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

BLAKE'S PATENT

FIRE PROOF PAINT.

THE original and only genuine article, that can be obtained, without subjecting the purchaser to a prosecution for an infringement of my Patent. It has not yet been two year since the first counterfeit, was got up, but in that short time has proved itself, entirely worthless, as will be seen by the statement of more than twenty of the most respectable inhabitants of Sharon Ohio where mine as well as the Counterfeits are made. They say that we have examined recently, a house that was painted, with

Blake's Patent Fire Proof Paint,

SIX YEARS since (as an experiment) and now find the coating as hard as slate or stone. The action of the weather having no effect than to indurate and harden the substance. We will farther state that it has been such a complete failure in all the other kinds of stuff got up, and sold here, called Fire Proof paint (except Blakes) that his only is considered worth useing.

(Signed) Barnabus Crane and 20 others.

Hon. Daniel Webster has recently examined the patent and at the close of his report says, "I have no doubt whatever, but Mr Blake's Patent is good and valid. [104.

MARRIAGE:

WHY SO OFTEN UNHAPPY.

THE CAUSES AND THE REMEDY!

MANY and many a wife endures years of bodily suffering and of mental anguish, prostrate and helpless, embittering her life, that of her husband, and hazarding the future welfare of her children, arising from causes which, if known, would have spared the suffering, the anguish to the wife, and to the husband embarrassments and pecuniary difficulties having their origin in the mind being weighed down and harassed in consequence of the sickness of the companion of his bosom.

How important that the causes should be known to every wife, to every husband, that the dreadful and harrowing consequences to the health and happiness of both may be avoided! Life is too short and health too precious to admit any portion of the one to be spent without the full enjoyment of the other. The timely possession of a little work entitled as follows has been the means of saving the health and the life of thousands, as over copies have been sold since the first edition was issued.

The author has been induced to advertise it by the urgent and pressing request of those who have been indebted to its publication for all they hold dear (that all may have an opportunity of obtaining it), and who have favored him with thousands of letters of encomium, some of which are annexed to the advertisement.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

Twentieth Edition. 18*mo.*, pp. 250. Price, $1.00.

THIS WORK IS INTENDED ESPECIALLY FOR THE MARRIED, or those contemplating marriage, as it discloses important secrets which should be known to them particularly.

Here, every female—the wife, the mother—the one either budding into womanhood, or the one in the decline of years, in whom nature contemplates an important change—can discover the causes, symptoms, and the most efficient remedies and most certain mode of cure, in every complaint to which her sex is subject.

The revelations contained in its pages have proved a blessing to thousands, as the innumerable letters received by the author (which he is permitted by the writers to publish) will attest.

SICKLY AND UNHAPPY WIVES.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Dayton, O.

"DAYTON, May 1, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU—My Dear Sir: 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion,' for which I enclosed one dollar to your address, came safely to hand. I would not have troubled you with these few lines, but that I am impelled by a sense of gratitude, for myself and wife, to give utterance to our sincere and heartfelt emotions.

"My wife has been perceptibly sinking for some three years or more, in consequence of her great anguish and suffering some months before and during confinement; every successive one more and more debilitated and prostrated her, putting her life in imminent danger, and which was, on the last occasion, despaired of. I supposed that this state of things was inevitable, and resigned myself to meet the worst. At this time (now about two months) I heard your book highly spoken of, as containing some matters reaching my case. On its receipt and perusal, I can not express to you the relief it afforded my distressed mind and the joy its pages imparted to my wife, on learning that the great discovery of M. M. Desomeaux provided a remedy. It opened a prospect to me which I little conceived was possible. No pecuniary consideration can ever repay the obligations I am under to you for having been the means of imparting to us the matters contained in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' But for this, ere another year would have passed over my head, in all human probability my wife would have been in her grave, and my children left motherless."

Extract from a Letter.

Competence and Health.

"LANCASTER, PA., Oct. 24, 1847.

"MY DEAR SIR: I know you will have the kindness to bear with me in encroaching upon your time, while I acknowledge (in behalf of myself and wife) the obligations we feel ourselves under to you in having made known certain matters, contained in your most invaluable 'Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' It has been worth its weight in gold to me. If I express myself rather warmly, you will see that I can not do so too warmly, when I inform you of the extent to which I have, through it, been benefited. I will state my situation when I obtained your book through the merest curiosity I look upon it as one of the most fortunate events of my life. I had been married some ten years, and was the father of seven children. I was long struggling unceasingly, to the end that I might gain a moderate competency, but the results of my utmost exertions at the end left me about where I was at the beginning of each year; and that only, with the most stinted economy, sufficing with barely the necessaries of life. Finally, this constant effort was beginning to have its effect upon my health: I felt less capable to endure its continuance, while I felt the necessity of perseverance.

"This constant, unceasing struggle on my part was imperative, in consequence of the prostrated condition of my wife (with occasional intermission) for six years, much of the time confined to her bed, and of course incapable of taking the charge and management of household affairs. Her condition arose from causes of which I was ignorant. Oh! what would I have given had I the six years to live over again! What would my wife have given to have been spared the long days and still longer nights prostrate on a bed of sickness!—all of which would have been avoided, had I then seen a copy of 'THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION.'"

From a Physician.

DANGEROUS DELIVERIES,

OBSTRUCTIONS, IRREGULARITIES, &C.

How many are suffering from obstruction or irregularities peculiar to the female system, which undermine their health, the effects of which they are ignorant, and for which their delicacy forbids seeking medical advice! How many suffer from prolapsus uteri (falling of the womb), or from fluor-albus (weakness, debility, &c., &c)! How many are in constant agony for many months preceding confinement! How many have difficult if not dangerous deliveries, and whose lives are jeoparded during such time, will find in its pages the means of prevention, amelioration, and relief!

Extract from a Letter.

To those just Married.—"Had I known!"

"PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU: Had I known of the important matters treated of in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion' some years ago, how much misery I might have escaped! I have suffered years from causes which you point out in your book, without knowing what to do. I obtained a copy, and found my case treated of. I trust every female will avail herself of the information contained in its pages."

Letters are daily received of this character, unnecessary to present.

To those yet unmarried, but contemplating marriage, or perhaps hesitating as to the propriety of incurring the responsibilities attendant upon it, the importance of being possessed of the revelations contained in these pages, so intimately involving their future happiness, can not be appreciated.

It is, of course, impracticable to convey more fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage; neither is it necessary, since it is every one's duty to become possessed of knowledge whereby the sufferings to which a wife, a mother, or a sister, may be subject, can be obviated.

☞ CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against various catch-penies intended to be palmed off upon them initiating the title of the work as "The Married LADIES' Medical Companion," and various other titles. FOR FEMALES AND MALES

Dr. Lazetti's Juno Cordial, or Protective Elixir.

This is the only actual remedy ever discovered for impetency, Genital Debility, Nocturnal Emissions, and all diseases occasioned by certain secret habits; and many of the nostrums recently recommended for the same complaints are worthless imitations which its unrivalled excellence, fame and popularity have brought into the market. The Medical Faculty of Europe and the United States are unanimous in their recommendations of the Juno Cordial and have not given their sanction in a single instance that has been authenticated, to any compound for the same purposes. The nature of the maladies relieved by the Juno Cordial are generally such as to leave the publication of certificates of cures out of the question, or the proprietor could produce a host of the most conclusive testimony to show that the great reputation that it enjoys was not accidentally obtained, but is firmly based upon its positive, and apparently miraculous virtues. In all directions are to be found the happy pareuts of healthy offspring, who would not have been so, but for this extraordinary preparption. And it is equally potent in the many diseases for which it is recommended. Objection has been naturally made to the price of the Juno Cordial, because the trash that has been thrown into the market in opposition to it is sold cheaper; but the fact is, the Cerdial cannot be afforded for less, and ought to be much dearer, as many of the ingredients which compose it are among the costliest things in nature; whereas the others are made up of cheap drugs, worth but little in money, and less in merit. We assure the reader that the utmost reliance may be placed on the Juno Cordial in the cure of the maladies mentioned above, and also those that follow, viz: Loss of Muscular Energy, Physical Lassitude and General Prostration, Irrifability, and all Nervous Affections, Indigestion, Sluggishness of the Liver, Gleet, Lucorrhoea or Whites, and Flour Albus and every disease in any way connected with the disorder of the Procreative Functions—in all of which it will afford almost immediate relief, and, if used as directed, is almost certain to produce a positive and permanent cure. Persons about to marry, if conscious of any weakness or disability of a certain nature, should take this Cordial, as it will infallibly restore health and vigor in a brief period, and where want of offspring is a cause of regret, if recourse be had to it the most beneficial results may be anticipated with confidence. It is of priceless value to those without offspring. It has taken the precedence in Italy, and will in all other countries where it may become known.

To spread wide the blessings of this medicine, I have appointed Messrs. Judson & Co., of the City of New York, in the United States of America, my sole Agents for its sale; and none can be genuine unless it comes through them, and their signature is on the weapper.

The Old Well in Languedoc.

The proof of the truth of the following statement, taken from the Courier de l'Europe, rests not only upon the known veracity of the narrator, but upon the fact that the whole occurrence is registered in the judicial records of the criminal trials of the province of Languedoc. We give it as we heard it from the lips of the dreamer, as nearly as possible in his own words:

As the junior partner in a commercial house at Lyons, I had been travelling some time on the business of the firm, when one evening in the month of June, I arrived at a town in Languedoc, where I had never before been. I put up at a quiet inn in the suburbs, and, being very much fatigued, ordered dinner at once; and went to bed almost immediately after, determined to begin very early in the morning my visits to the different merchants.

I was no sooner in bed than I fell into a deep sleep, and had a dream that made the strongest impression upon me.

I thought that I arrived at the same town, but in the middle of the day, instead of the evening, as was really the case; but I had stopped at the very same inn, and gone out immediately, as an unoccupied stranger would do, to see whatever was worthy of observation in the place. I walked down the main street, into another street, crossing at right angles, and apparently leading into the country. I had not gone very far, when I came to a church, the gothic portico of which I stopped to examine. When I had satisfied my curiosity, I advanced to a by-path which branched off from the main street. Obeying an impulse which I could neither account for nor control, I struck into the path, though it was winding, rugged, and unfrequented, and presently reached a miserable cottage, in front of which was a garden covered with weeds. I had no difficulty in getting into the garden, for the hedge had several gaps in it, wide enough to admit four carts abreast. I approached an old well, which stood solitary and gloomy in a distant corner; and looking down into it, I beheld distinctly, without any possibility of mistake, a corpse which had been stabbed in several places I counted the deep wounds and the wide gashes whence the blood was flowing.

I would have cried out, but my tongue clove to the roof of my mouth. At this moment I awoke, with my hair on end, trembling in every limb, and cold drops of perspiration bedewing my forehead—awoke to find myself comfortably in bed, my truuk standing beside me, birds warbling cheerfully around my window, while a young, clear voice was singing a provincial air in the next room, and the morning sun was shining brightly through the curtains.

I sprung from my bed, dressed myself, and as it was yet very early, I thought I would seek an appetite for breakfast by a morning stroll. I accordingly entered the main street, and went along. The farther I walked the stronger became the confused recollection of the objects that present themselves to my view.

"It is very strange," I thought; "I have never been here before; and I could swear that I have seen this house, and the next, and that other on the left."

On I went, till I came to the corner of a street, crossing the one down which I had come. For the first time, I remembered my dream, but put away the thought as too absurd; still, at every step, some fresh point of resemblance struck me.

"I am still dreaming!" I exclaimed, not without a momentary thrill through my whole frame. "Is the agreement to be perfect to the very end?"

Before long, I reached the church, with the same architectural features that had attracted my notice in the drama; and then the high-road, along which I pursued my way, coming at length to the same by-path that had presented itself to my imagination a few hours before. There was no possibility of doubt or mistake. Every tree, every turn, was familiar to me. I was not at all of a superstious turn, and was wholly engrossed in the practical details of commercial business. My mind had never dwelt upon the hallucinations, the presentiments, that science either denies, or is unable to explain; but I must confess, that I now felt myself spell-bouud, as by some enchantment; and, with Pascal's words on my lips, "A continued dream would be equal to reality," I hurried forward, no longer doubting that the next moment would bring me to the cottage: and this really was the case. In all its outward circumstances, it corresponded to what I had seen in my dream. Who, then, could wonder that I determined to ascertain whether the coincidence would hold good in every other point? I entered the garden, and went direct to the spot on which I had seen the well; but here the resemblance failed—well, there was none. I looked in every direction; examined the whole garden, went round the cottage, which appeared to be inhabited, although there was no person visible; but nowhere could I find any vestige of a well.

I made no attempt to enter the cottage, but hastened back to the hotel, in a state of agitation difficult to describe. I could not make up my mind to pass unnoticed such extraordinary coincidences; but how was any clew to be obtained to the terrible mystery?

I went to the landlord, and after chatting with him for some time on different subjects, I came to the point, and asked him directly to whom the cottage belonged that was on a by-road which I described to him.

"I wonder, sir," said he, "what made you take such particular notice of such a wretched little hovel. It is inhabited by an old man with his wife. who have the character of being very morose and unsociable. They rarely leave the house—see nobody, and nobody goes to see them; but they are quiet enough, and I never heard any thing against them beyond this. Of late, their very existenee seems to have been forgotten; and I believe, sir that you are the first who for years has turned his steps to the deserted spot."

These details, far from satisfying my curiosity, did but provoke it the more. Breakfast was served, but I could not touch it; and I felt that if I presented myself to the merchants in such a state of excitement, they would think me mad; and, indeed, I felt very much excited. I paced up and down the room, looked out at the window, trying to fix my attention on some external object, but in vain. I endeavored to interest myself in a quarrel between two men in the street; but the garden and the cottage pre-occupied my mind; and at last, snatching up my hat, I cried—

"I will go, come what may."

I repaired to the nearest magistrate, told him the object of my visit, and related the whole circumstance briefly and clearly. I saw directly that he was much impressed by the statement.

"It is, indeed, very strange," said he, "and after what has happened, I do not think I am at liberty to leave the matter without further inquiry. Important business will prevent my accompanying you in a search, but I will place two of the poliece at your command. Go once more to the hovel, see its inhabitants, and search every part of it. You may perhaps make some impartant discovery."

I suffered but a very few moments to elapse before I was on the way, accompanied by two officers, and after waiting some time, an old man opened the door. He received us somewhat uncivilly, but showed no mark of suspicion, nor indeed, of any other emotion, when we told him that we wished to search the house.

"Very well, gentlemen; as fast, and as soon as you please," he replied.

"Have you a well here?" I inquired.

"No, sir; we are obliged to go for water to a spring at a considerable distance."

We searched the house, which I did, I confess, with a kind of feverish excitement, expecting, every moment to bring some fatal secret to light. Meantime, the man gazed upon us with an impenetrable vacancy of look, and we at last left the cottage without seeing anything that could confirm my suspicions. I resolved to inspect the garden once more; and a number of idlers having been by this time collected, drawn to the spot by the sight of a stranger with two armed men engaged in searching the premises, I made inquiries of some of them whether they knew any thing aboue a well in that place. I could get no information at first, but at length an old woman came slowly forward, leaning on a crutch.

"A well!" cried she; "is it the well you are looking after? That has been gone these thirty years. I remember, as if it were only yesterday, many a time when I was a young girl, how I used to amuse myself by throwing stones into it, and hearing the splash they used to make in the water."

"And do you think you could tell where that well used to be?" I asked, almost breathless with excitement.

"As near as I can remember, on the very spot on which your honor is standing;" said the old woman.

"I could have sworn it!" thought I, springing from the place as if I had trod upon a scorpion.

Need I say that we set to work to dig up the ground. At about eighteen inches deep we came to a layer of bricks, which, on being broken up, gave view to some boards, which were removed without much difficulty; after which we beheld the mouth of the well

"I was quite sure it was here," said the woman. "What a fool the old fellow was to stop it up, and then have so far to go for water!"

A sounding-line furnished with hooks, was let down into the well; the crowd pressing around us, and breathlessly bending over the dark and fœtid hole, the secrets of which seemed hidden in impenetrable obscurity. This was repeated several times without any result. At length, penetrating below the mud, the hooks caught an old chest, upon top of which had been thrown a great many stones; and after much effort and time, we succeeded in raising it to daylight. The sides and lid were decayed and rotten; it needed no locksmith to open it; and we found within, what I was certan we should, and which paralyzed with horror all the spectators, who had not my pre-convictions—we found the remains of a human body.

The police-officers who had accompanied me now rushed into the house, and secured the person of the old man. As to his wife, no one could at first tell what had become of her. After some search, however, she was found hidden behind a bundle of fagots.

By this time, nearly the whole town had gathered around the spot; and now that this horrible fact had come to light, everybody had some crime to tell, which had been laid to the charge of the old couple. The people who predict after an event are very numerous.

The old couple were brought before the proper authorities, and privately and seperately examined The old man persisted in his denial, most pertinaciously; but his wife at length confessed, that, in concert with her husband, she had once—a very long time ago—murdered a peddler, whom they had met one night on the high-road, and who had been incautious enough to tell them of a considerable sum of money which he had about him, and whom, in consequence, they induced to pass the night at their house. They had taken advantage of the heavy sleep induced by fatigue to strangle him; his body had been put into the chest, the chest thrown into the well, and the well stopped up.

The peddler being from another country, his disappearance had occasioned no inquiry; there was no witness of the crime, and as its traces had been carefully concealed from every eye, the two criminals had good reason to believe themselves secure from detection. They had not, however, been able to silence the voice of conscience; they fled from the sight of their fellow men; they trembled at the slightest noise and silence thrilled them with terror. They had often formed a determination to leave the scene of their crime—to fly to some distant land; still some undefinable fascination kept them near the remains of their victim.

Terrified by the deposition of his wife, and unable to resist the overwhelming proofs against him, the man at length made a similar confession; and six weeks after the unhappy criminals died on the scaffold, in accordance with the sentence of the Parliament of Tolouse. They died penitent.

The well was once more shut up, and the cottage levelled to the ground. It was not however, until fifty years had in some measure deadened the memory of the terribly transaction, that the ground was cultivated. It is now a fine field of corn.

Such was the dream and its result.

I never had the courage to revisit the town where I had been an actor in such a tragedy.

The Power of Lightning, Steam, and the Press.

The power of steam and the power of a free press, are two mighty engines for spreading and advancing civilization. Yoked to steam, newspapers and periodicals are chariots loaded with information, which convey to hamlet and hall the news of passing events, and the deductions of powerful and reflecting minds; and these, like the strokes of the well-tempered steel on flinty stones, elicit dazzling sparks, and kindle up ten thousand fires, which otherwise would have remained nothing more than cold and torpid masses of humanity. Since the invention of printing, discovery after discovery has succeeded one another so rapidly, that it is impossible to present the shadows of their outlines—we will not attempt it. And since steam and printing were united together, unobserving must that man be, who cannot perceive an increased and vivid activity in the general human mind. To-day an important event has occurred some thousands of miles distant (once far away), and within a few minutes after the occurrence, it is fleeting on the lightning's wing, over the attenuated wires of the telegraph,—soon the flying fingers of the compositor arranges it for the printer, and anon ten thousan copies, in one hour, are off and away on the back of the iron horse, to spread before the eyes of ten thousand readers a knowledge of the important event. Are not such things effectual in increasing the mental activity of all the readers? Yes, they are; and assuredly those who patronize the press, receive a ten-fold benefit themselves, and always rank above their fellows in respect to that particular kind of information they receive—by the kind of paper they patronize. It cannot be otherwise; and those who read scientific papers—and the more often they read them the better—will assuredly be the best posted up in reference to the advancement of science and discovery. The increase of mental activity in the world of invention, seems to strike no little amount of stupidity out of a number of foggy periodicals themselves. They wonder why so many new discoveries and inventions are bursting so rapidly upon the world; they have not the gumption (but they will soon have it) to perceive the general increase of mental activity, hence they are somewhat skeptical, and indulge in not a little of that lowest kind of talent—"low wit"—when they speak upon such subjects. Seven years ago there was only one line of telegraph in America; and it is scarcely as many years more, since Daguerre first seized the solar beam for his pencil, and immortalized himself as limer of the sun.

What the future may realize in discovery, no one can tell, but, if the past is any guide, we may well say, "grand things are yet in nature's hidden treasury, to be revealed for the benefit of man."

Tough.

The Minerva, a smart, wide awake paper, published in Thibodauxville, La., throws Munchausen into the shade, and leaves Sam Hide "no whar," by the following tough story about a down-east cow. The editor—who with all his waggery, has no less cuteness and sagacity—declines to stake his character for veracity on the truth of the yarn, and throws the responsibility upon a nothern acquaintance, who says the fact came to him from the lips of an uncle in Maine:

Uncle Seth, who resided away down in the State of Maine, had a most splendid milch cow. She was the prize of the farm, and the admiration of the neighborhood; she was more gentle, better disposed gave more milk, and richer milk than any other cow ever known; in fact, her equal could not be produced by any one. The chagrin of the owner may be imagined, when one day it was discoved that this paragon of a cow had got her foot terribly mangled by some unlucky mischance. As there was no hope of saving the foot, it was thought advisable to have it amputated, and its place supplied with an artificial one, which was ingeniously carved out of a large pine knot. This succeded to admiration and in a few weeks the favorite cow was enjoying excellent health, and to all apperance, none the worse for her mishap. "She gave just as much milk," said uncle. "It was just as rich as before, but, would you believe it, the darn'd stuff wan't fit for any thing." "How was that, uncle Seth?" "Why, ever after the foot was put on, the milk tasted so all-fired strong of PINE that we couldn't use it."

Boy.—Ma, isn't Miss Lovelocke a nice lady! is'nt she though?

Mother—Yes, love, she is, indeed, a very fine lady.

B.—And don't father think a heap of her? dont he though?

M.—Yes father, as well as myself, thinks very highly of Miss Lovelocke.

That's what I thought to-day, when I see father hugging and kissing her in the front parlor.

M. (springing to her feet with all the agility of having pressed her bare foot on a hot smoothing iron.)—Your father hugging and kissing Miss Lovelocke?

B. (in a tone of high glee.)—My eye! was'nt he though?

M. (distractedly.)—And did she suffer him to do such a thing without raising an alarm?

B. (winking his left eye in a remarkably cute style.)—She didn't suffer any at all; she just hugged and kissed back again, as if she liked it better nor apple dumpling, covered with 'lasses dip.

M. (wildly hysterical, and histerically wild.)—Oh! the mean rat-eyed, pug nosed, red headed fright. The scandlous, howdacious hussy! I'll tear out her eyes, I will.

The Sultan and the Dervise.

"An incident which occurred soon after the accession of the present sultan, shows that, in some respects at least, he is not indisposed to follow up the strong traditions of his race. At the beginning of his regin the Ulema was resolved, if possible, to provet the new sultan from carrying on those reforms which had ever been so distasteful to the Turks, grating at once against their religious associations and their pride of race, and which recent events had certainly proved not to be productive of those good results anticipated by Sultan Mahmoud. To attain this object the muftis adopted the expedient of working on the religious fears of the youthful prince. One day as he was praying, according to his custom at his father's tomb, he heard a voice from beneath reiterating in a stifled tone the words 'I burn.' The next time that he prayed there the same words assailed his ears. 'I burn,' was repeatd again and again, and no word beside. He applied to the chief of the imans to know what this prodigity might mean, and was informed in reply that his father, though a great man had also been, unfortunately, a great reformer, and that such it was too much to be feared that he had a terrible penance to undergo in the other world. The sultan sent his brother-in-law to pray at the same place, and afterwards several others of his household; and on each occasion the same portentions words were heard.

"One day he announced his intention of going in state to his father's tomb, and was attended thither by a splendid retinue, including the chief doctors of the Mahometan law. Again, during his devotions. we heard the words, 'I burn,' and all except the sultan trembled. Rising from his prayer-carpet, he called in his guards, and commanded them to dig up the pavement and remove the tomb. It was in vain that the muftis interposed, reprobating so great a profanation, and uttering dreadful warnings as to its consequences. The sultan persisted. The foundations of the tomb were laid bare, and in a cavity skilfully left among them was found—not a burning sultan, but a dervise. The young monarch regarded him for a time fixedly and in silence, and then said, without any further remark, or the slightest expression of anger, 'You burn? We must cool you in the Bosphorus.' In a few minutes more the dervise was in a bag, and the bag immediately after, was in the bosphorus; while the sultan rode back to his palace, accompanied by his household and ministers, who ceased not all the way to ejaculate, Mashaliah. Allah is great; there is no God but God, and Mahomet is his prophet.'"

A Yankee Trader.

"I kalkilate I couldn't drive a trade with you to day?" said a true specimen of a Yankee pedlar, as he stood at the door of a merchant of St. Louis.

"I calculate you calculate about right, for you cannot," was the sneering reply.

"Wal, I guess you needn't get huffy about it. Now here's a dozen jenuine razor strops, worth two dollars and a half—you may have 'em for two dollars."

"I tell you I don't want any of your trash' so you had better be going."

"Wal, now, I declare! I'll bet you five dollars if you made me an offer for them ere strops, we'll have a trade yet."

"Done," replied the merchant, placing the money in the hands of a bystander.

The yankee deposited the like sum—when the merchant offered him a picayune forthe strops.

"They're your'n," said the Yankee, as he quietly fobbed the stakes. "But," he added with great apparent honesty. "I calculate a joke's a joke, and if you don't want these strops I'll trade back!"

The merchant's countenance brightened.

"You are not so bad a chap, after all; here are your strops—give me the money."

"There it is," said the Yankee, as he received the strops and passed over the picayune. "A trade's a trade—and now you're wide awake in airnest. I guess the next time you trade with that ere pic, you'll do a little better than to buy razor strops."

Away walked the pedlar with his strops, and his wager, amid the shouts of the laughing crewd.

Eight Wheel Cars for Railroads.

No other cars but those having eight wheels should be used on railroads. With our long cars it is impossible to insure any safety with only four wheels, when running at a high speed; for if an axle breaks, there is certain destruction, as happened on the Western Railroad near Washington summit.—The forward axle of the second passenger train broke, when going at the rate of 26 miles per hour, and the car came down on the track, tearing it along for 300 yards: Col. Mountford, af New York, a young lady named Miss Rosele, of Albany, and Mr. Whittemore, of Leicester, Mass., were killed, and some others were severely wounded. The scene was a terrible one, for the car was crowded, and the bodies of the killed were mangled and mixed up with the wreck of the car, in a most horrible manner. On an eight wheeled car there is but a bare possibility of two axles breaking at one end. No other cars, we say again, should be employed on our railroads. —Sci. American.

Butternut Sugar.

We se it stated in the Ameican Agriculturist, that the sap of the butternut tree yields a fine sugar, which has a peculiar flavor, something like honey. The tree is tapped and worked like the maple, but it has a tendency to form like a jelly, hence it has to be strained and clarified, when very weak. This tree is tapped, like the maple, in the spring.—As in many places there are plenty of butternut and walnut trees, experiments to make this kind of sugar should not be overlooked.

CONSTANT SUHPLY OF EGGS.—The South Carolinian says:—

A neighbor says that hog's lard is the best thing he can find to mix with the dough he gives to his hens. He says that once cut of this fat as large as a walnut, will set a hen to laying immediately after she has been broken up from setting, and that by feeding them with the fat occasionally, his hens continue to lay through the whole winter.

Principles.

Principles are our motto, Democratic principles; we care not by whom advocated, so that they are but advocated until they universally prevail. Men and parties are nothing without principles; when men go for party for the sake of party—merely for the spoils of office, we trust while it is our privilege to publish a public journal that we shall be found their opposer. The people, the mass of intelligent working men of New Jersey, of all and every denomination, are interested solely in the advancement of principles whose fundamental basis is equal rights, guarantied to every man by just and equal laws. Shall such prevail or shall we submit as in times past to onerous and unequal burdens, imposed upon us by special enactments, for the benefit of the enactors; or will the people arise in their majesty and govern themselves? Never, so long as they submit to be governed by cliques and parties whose sole principles are power and the perquisites of office, can they expect to enjoy their just and equal privileges. Let every man therefore put his shoulder to the wheel and his hand to the plow and never let go his hold until the work is accomplished. With these few words of advice we recommend them to peruse, candidly, the selections we have made from the columns of our cotemporaries, trusting the principles they there find advocated will find a reciprocating chord in their bosoms.

To the young men we would commend an excellent article from the Newark Mercury, on the advantages of reading; although addressed more particularly to the young men of Newark, it is equally applicable to those of Plainfield We trust they will read and heed its admonitions.

From the Sussex Herald.

The people of New Jersey, Whigs and Democrats have a common interest in various questions of great moment that have agitated the public mind for some years past, such as Free Schools, Household and Homestead Exemption, abolition of property qualification, a limitation of the hours of labor, Freedom of the public lands to actual settlers, Equal Taxation, General Laws for Railroads Banks and other purposes, and other subjects of common interest: laws operate alike on both parties, and both parties have the same interest and are alike affected by these questions: every citizen in the State is more or less interested in them, while not one in a thousand has the least interest in the offices which will be in the gift of the Governor to be elected this fall.

The people of both parties are intelligent, they understand their true interests, they care but very little about who shall fill the offices in the gift of the Governor, but they feel a deep interest in these questions which we have named, and they will elect such a Governor and such members of the legislature as are most favorable to their wishes respecting them. It would be strange indeed if such of our intelligent people, as are not office seekers, should work and strive and exert every nerve in the election merely to provide a fat office for this that or the other man, without a copper's benefit to themselves, at the sacrifice of their own true interest upon questions of great importance to themselves and families. We think better of them.

On the subjects we have named the opinions of the Democrats of New Jersey are well known: since they were first agitated, the Democrats at all times and places, and on all occasions, have been their zealous ardent advocates: the leaders of the Whig party have as strenuously opposed them: having for years past the power in the Legislaturre they have steadily and uniformly refused the petitions of the people asking for a passage of these laws.

At their late Convention they passed a vartiety of resolutions on National Politics that have no more to do with our state election than that of New York and we ask why did they not pass any on these State affairs upon which the Election has a direct bearing and influence? Why pass any, unless while about it you expressed your opinions on subjects of immediate pressing interest?

The Junior Editor of the Sussex Register was one of the Committee of five that reported the Resolutions, and we ask him the reason of this studied silence. The reason is obvious: the Whig leaders are opposed to these reforms; the past history of the State shows it: the doings of the Legislature prove it: some of their own papers admit it as we showed last week: yet they dare not in their Resolutions take open ground against them because they well know a large majority of the people of the state are in favor of them. They try the other plan, the mum game; they keep silent, that in the different papers, elenctioneerers and County Conventions may sing such tunes as will suit the different Counties; in some they will say one thing, in some another, all things to all men to get the offices and the spoils. After the election is over, if successful, they will clutch the offices and let the people shift for themselves as in times past.

In the Govereor's election of 1847 the Sussex Register said the Whigs were as much in favor of Equal Taxation as the Democrats, and would go as far to bring it about. Has the result proved it? Three Legislatures have met since then and they have done nothing.

Their professions and promises are hyocritical rotten and worthless; they have professed and promised until the people will trust them no longer. Had they been sincere advocates of these reforms they would have come out at their late Convention and said so: both parties would then have been openly committed to them, and before another year the laws would be passed.

☞ Mr. Stephen Meeker, an old gentleman of this town, met with a severe accident while crossing the track of the New-Jersey railroad yesterday afternoon. The wagon in which he was riding was dashed to pieces by a train of cars, and he was thrown with great violence on the ground, injuring his head and back very severely. He was conveyed to his residence immediately, and a physician was soon in attendance; but we believe very little hopes are entertained of his recovery.

We are sorry to learn, as we go to press, that he is considered to be much more dangerously injured than was at first reported.—E. Town Standard.

The Signs of the Times.

The indications of victory are indeed most cheering to the friends of equal laws; they betoken the progress of justice the advancement of Democratic principles.

The signs of the times are encouraging; the clouds that have overshadowed the prospect of the Democratic party are passing rapidly away, and the victories of truth already achieved, are the precursors of those that are yet to follow. But these victories are not to be won without a struggle, no more than "the harvest can be gathered without the seed is sown." Our political brethren must not be unmindful of this; they must not wait until the day of contest arrives, but prepare in season to encounter the enemy and defeat him. The mission of the Democratic party is holy and noble in its character; it is to secure just and equal legislation—to protect industry—to elevate labor—to restrain extravagance in the administration of government—to preserve inviolate our glorious constitution and the institutions of our country. An adherence to the cardinal principles of this political creed is the first duty of the Democrat, and never was there a period in our history, when every man professing that creed were more imperiously called open to discharge his duty with strict fidelity. Since the "Whigs" have assumed the management of our National and State government, their course has been of a character to digust the right thinking and intelligent people, the evidence is apparent in the results of the recent elections, and will be further manifested in this State, in the successful issue of the approaching struggle The reign of Whig misrule in the State must be terminated; the Democracy must and will decide in favor of sustaining the honest and enobling principles which constitute the platform of their political faith. Again, and again, we repeat, that industry, activity and energy, are essential to success. The work of redemption is only to be accomplished by unceasing and untiring exertion. The truths of the Democratic creed must be widely and faithfully disseminated among the people. They must be made familiar with the evidences that prove the inefficiency and incompetency of the present National and State administrations. They must be taught (if they have not already realized the fact,) that the Whigs have done nothing, either in the councils of the Nation of the State, to redeem the promises which, previous to the last Presidential Election

"roared so loud
And thunder'd in the index."

They must see how these promises have been violated, and be shown in the disturbed state of feeling threatening our country's peace, the Galphin iniquity, the violation of the Constitution, the withering evidences of the corrupt and reckless party, to whom, in an unhappy season, the destinies and interests of the Republic and the State, have been entrusted.

They have already perceived and felt the bitter force of the truths, we have stated. In every State of our confederacy, we perceive evidences that the people are aroused, and the Administration hears in "trumpet tones" the voice of condemnation and rebuke.

In a few weeks the issue will be decided—Shall Demoratic principles be triumphant, or shall the power of the Whig party be perpetuated? Stand firm Democrats! We have said, and repeat, that the signs of the times are most auspicious. Adhere to your principles—support the regular nominations—be true to your faith, your country, and yourselves, and a glorious victory will reward your fidelity to the great cause, in the success of which Truth, Justice, and honor are triumphant!

The Advantages of Reading.

It is not all readers of a public journal, that are interested in the discussion of political questions, or feel the importance of polical duties. A large number pass carelessly over the choicest extracts from the productions of our literary men, and yawn over the description of the most wonderful works of nature or art. Many indeed avoid entirely that class of articles, and seek out only those which afford a moment's amusement without any real benefit. Minds thus constituted are incapable of appreciating whatever is refined or powerful in literature; and become the mere receptacle of petty jokes and funny incidents. Not of such material are made the men who will stand up in the halls of legislation, who will occupy stations of trust and honor, or add to the common fame of a great nation. If our young men would really desire to enter the lists where mind battles with mind, they must cultivate habits of reading, study, and reflection. They must turn aside from mere amusement to the real duties of life, and enter into its stern realities with that vigor of mind, which is produced by communion with writings of the great and good.

We are not however of the opinion that the advantages of reading are confined to the perusal of practical works. We are not among those who condemn generally the works of fiction with which we are flooded; but it certainly needs great judgment to winnow properly where there are two bushel of chaff to a kernal of wheat. Still he who would strike from the world the name of Cervants or Le Sage; who would destroy the memorials of the genius of Scott, or wish Bulwer or Dickens forgotten, would be regarded, and that justly, as an enemy to the race. The man of truly cultivated mind turns from the history of his own country, and the study of her institutions, to the history of other countries, and marks the causes of their prosperity and greatness. While cherishing with pride the literature of his own country, he turns to the productions of genius in every land and pays it the tribute of admiration. His delight is controlled by no school, and in whatever realmn of imagination or fancy genius has wandered he follows its erratic flight and derives pleasure from his pursuit. From this we derive the true advantages of reading, for he simply confines himself to one clas of subjects loses that general scope, the pecular property of superior men.

We have almost insensibly wandered from the original intention of our article, which was to impress the young men engaged in our factories and shops with the advantages which habits of reading confer. A great part of our increase of population is made up by the young men, which flood upon us from the country towns to acquire a trade or education in business pursuits. Torn from early, associations, cast into the dissipations and dangers of a populous manfacturing city, they are apt speedily to form the worst habits of life. If however they will early cultivate the habit of reading, independent of the advantages which knowledge always confers, they will find it a shield, against a thousand dangers. By slow and sure progress the information thus acquired will result not only in riches of the mind but in that worldly succes to which superior knowledge inevitably leads. They will thus find themselves fitted for the duties of citizens, and become the men upon whom the State rests her safety.—Newark Mercury.

FIFTEEN DAYS

LATER FROM CALIFORNIA.

The steamship Philadelphia arrived at New York on Friday, from Chagres, via Kingston, Jamaica, bringing two weeks later intelligence from California.

The Philadelphia brings $800,000 in gold dust on freight, and from $200,000 to $300,000 in the hands of passengers.

The mails from San Francisco, brought down by the Carolina, had not arrived at Chagres when the Philadelphia left.

From the Alta California, Augst 15.

Terrible Riot at Sacramento!

The City in Ashes!

The news which the Senator brings from Sacramento is exciting in the extreme. Riot and death rule the hour! the long-expected collision between the land-holders and squatters has at last taken place. The battle has begun—God knows where and when it will end!

Capt. Van Pelt, of the Senator, has furnished us with the following information: An armed body of the squatters proceeded through the streets about one o'clock, yesterday, and were interrupted by the authorities and opposed by portions of the citizens. An affray soon commenced, and the city was aroused to arms. Mayor Bigelow was shot in three places, and died in fifteen minutes after. J. W. Woodland, city assessor, was shot dead, and several citizens killed and wounded.

Our correspondent informs us that Dr. Robinson, the leader of the squatters, was shot through the head. His horse was first killed under him. Several of the squatters were killed and wounded.—Their ranks were swollen from 60 first engaged in the affray to a body of armed men, numbering between 700 and 800 before the Senator left. The keepers of gaming houses and sporting men generally sided with the real estate owners, or citizens proper. A tremendous force was fast accumulating.

The war continued to rage as the Senator left.—The discharge of fire arms was heard in every part of the city. Martial law has been proclaimed, and the excitement is intense throughout Sacramento.

The Gold Hunter, having on board lieut. governor McDougal, came down to Bencia last evening, and was to return immediately with troops and arms.

Couriers have been started to San Jose, and the governor will probably repair at once to the scene of riot.

Our military citizen companies in the state will probably be required to march under arms to Sacramento.

It appears the squatters were proceeding to liberate two of the party confined on board the prison ship, where they had been comitted the day previous, when they were confronted by mayor Bigelow and members of the corporation. A little girl was wounded in the street by a chance ball. The squatters were assembled at the corner of J and Ninth streets, in deliberation, and it was feared an attempt would be made to destroy the city by fire. Sheriff McKinney was shot through the arm.

Just as the steamer Carolina was getting under way, (about 4 P. M.) a dispatch was received on board from the Pacific News office, stating that an express had just arrived, bringing the intelligence that sacramento city had been reduced to ashes, and the squatters were receiving reinforcements of men from the mines.

The dispatch referred to was received by Mr. Norcross, assistant editor of the Pacific News, who reached New-York last night in the Philadelphia.—He considered it, we understand, entirely reliable.

At the time the Carolina left fifty U. S. soldiers had left Benica for the scene of battle, and two volunteer companies in San Francisco had also offered their services to maintain order.

From Havana.

The U. S. Mail steamship Ohio, arrived at New York on Sunday, from New Orleans via Havana.—The steamer Falcon, from Chagres, arrived on the 17th with 400 passengers and a large amount of gold dust in freight. There were a number of cases of Cholera on board the Falcon, from which a few of the passengers died on the voyage.

The news from Havana is of little interest; 300 troops arrived from Spain on the 14th inst. and it is reported that 3,000 are on their way to the Island.

The officers of the Georgiana and Susan Loud have been condemned to eight years confinement and hard labor in chains. They are to be transported to Spain in a few days.

The Ohio left Havana on the 18th. She brings 300 passenaers the California mails of August 15, and about half a million of gold dust on freight and in the hands of passengers.

Later from Europe.

The U. S. Mail steamship Pacific, Capt. Ezra Naye, arrived at New York on Saturday, having made the passage from wharf to wharf in ten days, four hours and three-quarters! This beats the late passage of the Asia—the quickest ever made between Liverpool and New York by a Cunard steamer—thirteen hours, after making a proper allowance for the detention of the latter at Halifax. It also surpasses, relatively, the quickest trips made by the Cunarders between Liverpool and Boston.

The Pacific brings sixty-seven passengers.

The news is interesting, though it chronicles no event of importance. Louis Napoleon has been sporting his Presidentship at a grand naval review in the harbor of Cherbourg. Butcher Haynau has slipped out of England by night, his design having been kept carefully concealed till it was consumated. The English papers are still discussing the drubbing he received, the Times standing almost alone in his defense. In Germany the ghost of Unity—so long practically a non-entity—seemed about to be annihilated, through the work of Austria.—An open rupture between the latter country and Prussia seems close at hand. From Denmark we have nothing further, than that the theater of war is inundated and the armies swamped; taking advantage of which, a Committee from the Peace Congress is about trying the practice of its theory.

The Potato Rot in New Jersey.—The disease which has heretofore done so much mischief among the potatoes, has again made its appearance in New Jersey and in Massachusetts. The Boston Traveller says that it is more virulent in its character and in its effects than in former years; for now, in large fields, scarcely a potato can be found that is sound. One man in Newton lately offered a field of three acres for $5, and could not find a purchaser. In several towns of Middlesex county, there is not a field where the potatoes are untainted. In Essex county, and in the western part of the state, the potato is found to be generally rotten; so much so as to threaten its almost entire destruction, unless the disease is soon arrested.—Sussex Herald.

From the Rahway Republican.

The Party Lash.—It is rather amusing, in these days, to see the facility with which a number of the Whig reform journals, swallow the nominee of a Convention which neglected to say one solitary word about the measures they have been so trumpet-tounged in demanding. The Jersey City Telegraph, the Elizabethtown Journal, and the Newark Mercury, have in times past nobly fought for reform, and used column after column of sage argument to prove the whig party to be, the only party to trust in the great work. A few hours work of the late Whig Convention, has done effectually and at once, what the Democratic press have been endeavoring to do for years, viz: convinced the real and true reformers, that they are resting on frail hopes in depending longer on the Whig party.

Some of the Whig reform journals have used very plain language in speaking of these important and interesting subjects, and have even effected to read others who were not quite willing to subscribe to all their tenets out of the party. They must feel particularly consistent in running up the name of John Runk, without any confession of faith on his part, and that too when the Convention that nominated him refused or neglected to endorse principles, which they no doubt considered agrarian or socialist. What were they to do? Stay in the party that "stand where they always stood," or come out from the party, true and genuine disciples of progress. They must either strike the flag which was emblazoned with their principles, or else strike the flag of party. Party ties have proven stronger than principles glibely uttered, and we now look upon all their previous professions, as so much Chinese hieroglyphics. without sense or meaning.

HERNIA.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.—This disorder, of very frequent occurrence, may be considered as arising through weakness of the abdominal walls, inducing an enlargement in the natural openings formed therein for the transmission of blood and other vessels; such openings being enlarged, permit the escape of bowels or other viscera of the abdomen, devolving hernial swellings or rupture, which most generally occur outwardly, as at the navel, groins and thighs.

The complaint is likely to happen at birth, and therefore should be carefully looked for by those having the charge of children, that it may be arrested and cured promptly. It also occurs at any period of life, to either sex, without regard to the condition or mode of living, and when found, should be attended to without delay—the final penalty being death, and that may be induced through strangulation at any momennt.

RUPTURES, are always to be treated with the surgical instruments known as Trusses and Supporters, and these require to be skillfully applied. With this view, the HULL'S TRUSS OFFICE, now established some thirty years, has under the various managers, presented to the public both male and female attendants to apply its instruments directly to the persons, which is preferable in all cases, and has also made improvement at different times, showing that advancement which study and practice only yield toward the relief of this malady.

With much pleasure the fact is now published, that recent improvements BUTLER'S TRUSS PADS have been made, and sufficiently tested upon numerous cases to warrant, through the cures already affected, their submission to the public, as being in adaptation and efficiency superior to any heretofore made known.

These improvements, recently patented, are now being applied at this office, 4 Vesey street, in cases of rupture, gravitation of the bowels, prolapsus uteri, prolapsus ani and piles.

The public may rely upon that care being made in their application, which will most likely tend to the final cure of the several complaints.

Hull's Truss Office, 4 Vesey street, Astor House, opposite St. Paul's Church, New-York.

FRED'K M BUTLER, Proprietor.

N. B.—The ladies' department is attended by a female qualified to fit the instruments, having so attended this office for many years.

TO MECHANICS, INVENTORS and Manufacturers.

The publishers of the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN respectfully give notice that the VIth Volume of this valuable journal will be commenced on the Twenty first of September next, offering a favorable opportunity for all to subscribe who take an interest in the progress and development of the Mechanics, Arts, and Manufactures of our country. The character of the Scientific American is too well known throughout the country to require a detailed account of the various subjects discussed through its columns.

The aim of the publishers has always been to render it the most thorough and useful scientific journal in the country; and to judge of this, by comparing its circulation and influence with other publications of the same class, they have the unequivocal evidence of its value as the leading exponent of the Arts and Sciencies.

It will be published WEEKLY as heretofore, IN QUARTO FORM on fine paper, affording at the end of the year an ILLUSTRATED ENCYCLOPÆDIA of over FOUR HUNDRED PAGES, with an index, and from FIVE TO SIX HUNDRED ORIGINAL ENGRAVINGS described by letters of reference, bes des a vast amount of practical information concerning the progress of SCIENTIFIC and MECHANICAL IMPROVEMENTS CHEMISTRY, CIVIL ENGINEERING, MANUFACTURING in its various branches, ARCHITECTURE, MASONRY, BOTANY—in short it embraces the entire range of the Arts and Sciences.

It also possesses an original feature not found in any other weekly journal in the country, viz: an OFFICIAL LIST of PATENT CLAIMS, prepared expressly for its columns at the Patent Office, thus constituting it the "AMERICAN REPERTORY of INVETIONS."

In connection with the publishing department the proprietors transact the most extensive Home and Foreign Patent business done in this country; consequently their facilities must be correspondingly superior.

GREAT.

SPRING & SUMMER MEDICINE.

BRISTOL'S COMPOUND EXTRACT OF SARSAPRILLA. The value of this great American Specific for all diseases and disorders generated by impure blood, is universally known and appreciated.

TWENTY-FIVE PHYSICIANS,

among the most eminent in this country, have recently signed and caused to be published, a document certifying that BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA was the best preparation of the kind in existence, and that they

USED IT DAILY IN THEIR PRACTICE,

with the happiest effects. Remember that for

MORE THAN TWENTY YEARS

it has been before the public, performing in that time

MILLIONS OF CURES!

During that period multitudes of Sarsaprilla, so called, have been palmed upon the public, but no other has

STOOD THE TEST OF TIME!

Every year has added thousands upon thousands of bottles to its sales, its cures, and the

IMMENSE MASS OF CERTIFICATES

Which, if printed and bound would form a library of themselves! The victim of

HEREDITARY SCROFULA

with suppurating glands, honey-combed flesh, and caries eating into his bones, finds in BRISTOL'S SARSAPRILLA a balm for his afflictions. His horrible torments are assuaged and his malady not only relieved, but.

PERMANENTLY CURED!

It may be safely asserted from the results of nearly a quarter of a century's experience, that

BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA,

is beyond all comparison the

MOST WONDERFUL REMEDY ON EARTH

for the following diseases and all others proceeding from.

VITIATED BLOOD.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, Rheumatism, Obstinate Cutaneous Eruptions, Pimples or Pustules on the Face, Blotches, Boils, Chronic Sore Eyes, Ring Worm or Tetter, Scald Head, Enlargement and Pains of the Bones and Joints, Stubborn Ulcers, Syphilitic Symptoms, Sciata or Lumbago, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury.

Acites, or Dropsy

Exposure, or

Imprudence in Life, Liver Complaint, Ague and Fever, Intermitting Fever, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Plethora of Blood in the Head, Piles, Pains in the Back, Side, Breast or Loins, and all forms of Muscular, Glandular, and Skin Diseases.

It is also a sovereign specific for General Debility and the best renovator of a broken constitution. It braces and reinvigorates every organ, promotes activity and regularity in every function, and produces that condition of the whole physical system which is the best security for ☞ LONG LIFE!

Let all who wish to purge the blood from the impurities contracted from the free indulgence of the appetite during the winter, and to prepare the system to

RESIST SUMMER EPIDEMICS,

Resort now to

BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA

the gentle aperient, the powerful tonic, the unrivalled antiseptic, and great builder up and

FORTIFIER OF THE SYSTEM!

The record which has been kept since the introduction of Bristol's Sarsaparilla, twenty odd years ago, exhibits an aggregate of known cures which established its invaluable properties. Among the recorded facts are the following, in round tumbers:

Cured of Summer Complaints, 10,000.

100,000 Cured of Scrofula.

Cured of Rheumatism, 58,000

150,000 Cured of Diseases of the Skin.

Cured of Liver Complaints, 35,000.

27,000 Cured of Diarrhœa and Dysentery.

There is not space in an advertisement for a full enumeration, but the cures amount to

A GRAND TOTAL OF ONE MILLION.

The public faith in it has never wavered—never can waver: for it is founded on experience, just as their want of faith in other spurious compounds is also founded in experience. They

FLY FROM MINERAL NOSTRUMS

to seek hope, life, and vigor from this

PURELY VEGETABLE REMEDY.

And are Never Disappointed!

Therefore, however broken in health and spirits, however loathsome to himself and others, let no man despair of recovery. Let the patient only understand that Bristol's Sarsaparilla is an infallible remedy for only persuade him for his own life's sake to try it, and those who know what it has acomplished will have no hesitation in predicting his speedy rostoration to health.

A LEGION OF DISEASES,

As a means of regulating all the functions of

WOMAN'S DELICATE ORGANIZATION

it has no equal in the materia medica, and at that critical period of life, when the first stage of her decline commences, its cordial and invigorating properties will enable her to

PASS THE CRISIS SAFELY.

INESTIMABLE VALUE.

In ALL CASES of General Debility, this Medicine Acts like a charm!

THOUSANDS

Have tested its efficacy, and thousands more are now under treatment; and not one solitary case of failure has yet been reported. Volumes could be filled with certificates of those who have been permanently cured; but it is considered that the testimony of a few well known citizens will answer every purpose. The reader will find, on looking TESTIMONIALS, they are not 'got up' for the occason; but that they are bona fide letters from gentlemen living in our midst, and who can be seeen daily at their places of business.

READ, AND SATISFY YOURSELVES:

Read the following from an eminent Physician:

The undersigned being acquainted with some of the ingredints of HUTCHINGS' VEGETABLE DYSPEPSIA BITTERS, and having used it for some time in his practice with every desired effect, here commends this medicine from the certainty of its effect and gives it a preference over all preparations in medicine for that distressing complaint, Dyspepsia.

T. HARDENBERGH, M. D., No. 1 Beach street N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half; during a greater portion of this time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself until he was recommended to try HUTCHINGS' DYSPEPSIA BITTERS; he very soon derived a benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of HUTCHINGS' BITTERS for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine. L B. WYMAN. 23 Burling Slip.

New York, September 3. 1849.

The following certificate is from M. B. Brady, the celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness. I was advised to take Hutching's Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease, and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia.

M. B. BRADY, No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

The proprietor of this medicine has received many other certificates of cures, equally remarkable, of the various diseases for which this preparation is applicable; but the above are deemed necessary to satisfy any unprejudiced mind of its value and superiority above all other preparations.

CHERRY PECTORAL:

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, ASTHMA, WHOOPING-COUGH AND CONSUMPTION.

The uniform success which has attended the use of this preparation—its salutary effect—its power to relieve and cure affections of the Lungs, have gained for it a celebrity equalled by no other medicine. We offer it to the afflicted with entire confidence in its virtues, and the full belief that it will subdue and remove the severest attacks of disease upon the throat and Lungs. These results, as they become publicly known, very naturally attract the attention of medical men and philanthropists everywhere.—What is their opinion of CHERRY PECTORAL may be seen in the following:—

VALENTINE MOTT, M. D.,

Prof. Surgery Med. College, New York, says:—

"It gives me pleasure to certify the value and efficacy of Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL, which I consider peculiarly adapted to cure diseases of the Throat and Lungs."

THE RT. REV. LORD BISHOP FIELD

writes in a letter to his friend, who was fast sinking under an affection of the Lungs:—"Try the CHERRY PECTORAL and if any medicine can give you relief, with the blessing of God that will."

CPIEF JUSTICE EUSTIS,

of Louisiana, writes "That a young daughter of his was cured of several severe attacks of Croup by the "CHERRY PECTORAL."

ASTHMA AND BRONCHITIS.

The Canadian Journal of Medical Science states, "That Asthma and Bronchitis so prevalent in this inclement climate, has yielded with surprising rapidity to Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL, and we cannot too strongly recommend this skilful preparation to the Profession and public generally."

Let the relieved sufierer speak for himself:—

HARTFORD, Jan. 26. 1847.

Dr. J. C. Ayer—Dear Sir:—Having been rescued from a painful and dangerous disease by your medicine, gratitude prompts me to send you this acknowledgment, not only in justice to you, but for the information of others in like affliction.

A slight cold upon the lungs, neglected at first became so severe that spitting of blood, a violent cough and profuse night sweats followed and fastened upon me. I became emaciated, could not sleep, was distressed by my cough, and a pain through my chest, and in short had all the alarming symptoms of quick consumption. No medicine seemed at all to reach my case, until I providentially tried your CHERRY PECTORAL, which soon relieved and now has cured me.

Yours with respect. E. A. STEWART.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 17, 1848

Dr. Ayer, Lowell—Dear Sir:—I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form; so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breath on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my Physician prescribed, as an experiment, your CHERRY PECTORAL.

At first it seemed to make me worse, but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

BLAKE'S PATENT

FIRE PROOF PAINT.

THE original and only genuine article, that can be obtained, without subjecting the purchaser to a prosecution for an infringement of my Patent. It has not yet been two year since the first counterfeit, was got up, but in that short time has proved itself, entirely worthless, as will be seen by the statement of more than twenty of the most respectable inhabitants of Sharon Ohio where mine as well as the Counterfeits are made. They say that we have examined recently, a house that was painted, with

Blake's Patent Fire Proof Paint,

SIX YEARS since (as an experiment) and now find the coating as hard as slate or stone. The action of the weather having no effect than to indurate and harden the substance. We will farther state that it has been such a complete failure in all the other kinds of stuff got up, and sold here, called Fire Proof paint (except Blakes) that his only is considered worth useing.

(Signed) Barnabus Crane and 20 others.

Hon. Daniel Webster has recently examined the patent and at the close of his report says, "I have no doubt whatever, but Mr Blake's Patent is good and valid. [104.

The genuine kept constantly on hand of different colors ground in oil or dry powder at the general depot No 84 Pearl-st. N Y.

MARRIAGE:

WHY SO OFTEN UNHAPPY.

THE CAUSES AND THE REMEDY!

MANY and many a wife endures years of bodily suffering and of mental anguish, prostrate and helpless, embittering her life, that of her husband, and hazarding the future welfare of her children, arising from causes which, if known, would have spared the suffering, the anguish to the wife, and to the husband embarrassments and pecuniary difficulties having their origin in the mind being weighed down and harassed in consequence of the sickness of the companion of his bosom.

How important that the causes should be known to every wife, to every husband, that the dreadful and harrowing consequences to the health and happiness of both may be avoided! Life is too short and health too precious to admit any portion of the one to be spent without the full enjoyment of the other. The timely possession of a little work entitled as follows has been the means of saving the health and the life of thousands, as over copies have been sold since the first edition was issued.

The author has been induced to advertise it by the urgent and pressing request of those who have been indebted to its publication for all they hold dear (that all may have an opportunity of obtaining it), and who have favored him with thousands of letters of encomium, some of which are annexed to the advertisement.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

Twentieth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, $1.00.

THIS WORK IS INTENDED ESPECIALLY FOR THE MARRIED, or those contemplating marriage, as it discloses important secrets which should be known to them particularly.

Here, every female—the wife, the mother—the one either budding into womanhood, or the one in the decline of years, in whom nature contemplates an important change—can discover the causes, symptoms, and the most efficient remedies and most certain mode of cure, in every complaint to which her sex is subject.

The revelations contained in its pages have proved a blessing to thousands, as the innumerable letters received by the author (which he is permitted by the writers to publish) will attest.

SICKLY AND UNHAPPY WIVES.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Dayton, O.

"DAYTON, May 1, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU—My Dear Sir: 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion,' for which I enclosed one dollar to your address, came safely to hand. I would not have troubled you with these few lines, but that I am impelled by a sense of gratitude, for myself and wife, to give utterance to our sincere and heartfelt emotions.

"My wife has been perceptibly sinking for some three years or more, in consequence of her great anguish and suffering some months before and during confinement; every successive one more and more debilitated and prostrated her, putting her life in imminent danger, and which was, on the last occasion, despaired of. I supposed that this state of things was inevitable, and resigned myself to meet the worst. At this time (now about two months) I heard your book highly spoken of, as containing some matters reaching my case. On its receipt and perusal, I can not express to you the relief it afforded my distressed mind and the joy its pages imparted to my wife, on learning that the great discovery of M. M. Desomeaux provided a remedy. It opened a prospect to me which I little conceived was possible. No pecuniary consideration can ever repay the obligations I am under to you for having been the means of imparting to us the matters contained in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' But for this, ere another year would have passed over my head, in all human probability my wife would have been in her grave, and my children left motherless."

Extract from a Letter.

Competence and Health.

"LANCASTER, PA., Oct. 24, 1847.

"MY DEAR SIR: I know you will have the kindness to bear with me in encroaching upon your time, while I acknowledge (in behalf of myself and wife) the obligations we feel ourselves under to you in having made known certain matters, contained in your most invaluable 'Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' It has been worth its weight in gold to me. If I express myself rather warmly, you will see that I can not do so too warmly, when I inform you of the extent to which I have, through it, been benefited. I will state my situation when I obtained your book through the merest curiosity I look upon it as one of the most fortunate events of my life. I had been married some ten years, and was the father of seven children. I was long struggling unceasingly, to the end that I might gain a moderate competency, but the results of my utmost exertions at the end left me about where I was at the beginning of each year; and that only, with the most stinted economy, sufficing with barely the necessaries of life. Finally, this constant effort was beginning to have its effect upon my health: I felt less capable to endure its continuance, while I felt the necessity of perseverance.

"This constant, unceasing struggle on my part was imperative, in consequence of the prostrated condition of my wife (with occasional intermission) for six years, much of the time confined to her bed, and of course incapable of taking the charge and management of household affairs. Her condition arose from causes of which I was ignorant. Oh! what would I have given had I the six years to live over again! What would my wife have given to have been spared the long days and still longer nights prostrate on a bed of sickness!—all of which would have been avoided, had I then seen a copy of 'THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION.'"

From a Physician.

DANGEROUS DELIVERIES,

OBSTRUCTIONS, IRREGULARITIES, &C.

How many are suffering from obstruction or irregularities peculiar to the female system, which undermine their health, the effects of which they are ignorant, and for which their delicacy forbids seeking medical advice! How many suffer from prolapsus uteri (falling of the womb), or from fluor-albus (weakness, debility, &c., &c)! How many are in constant agony for many months preceding confinement! How many have difficult if not dangerous deliveries, and whose lives are jeoparded during such time, will find in its pages the means of prevention, amelioration, and relief!

Extract from a Letter.

To those just Married.—"Had I known!"

"PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU: Had I known of the important matters treated of in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion' some years ago, how much misery I might have escaped! I have suffered years from causes which you point out in your book, without knowing what to do. I obtained a copy, and found my case treated of. I trust every female will avail herself of the information contained in its pages."

Letters are daily received of this character, unnecessary to present.

To those yet unmarried, but contemplating marriage, or perhaps hesitating as to the propriety of incurring the responsibilities attendant upon it, the importance of being possessed of the revelations contained in these pages, so intimately involving their future happiness, can not be appreciated.

It is, of course, impracticable to convey more fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage; neither is it necessary, since it is every one's duty to become possessed of knowledge whereby the sufferings to which a wife, a mother, or a sister, may be subject, can be obviated.

☞ Copies will be sent by Mail free of Postage to the Purchaser.

☞ CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against various catch-penies intended to be palmed off upon them initiating the title of the work as "The Married LADIES' Medical Companion," and various other titles. FOR FEMALES AND MALES

Dr. Lazetti's Juno Cordial, or Protective Elixir.

This is the only actual remedy ever discovered for impetency, Genital Debility, Nocturnal Emissions, and all diseases occasioned by certain secret habits; and many of the nostrums recently recommended for the same complaints are worthless imitations which its unrivalled excellence, fame and popularity have brought into the market. The Medical Faculty of Europe and the United States are unanimous in their recommendations of the Juno Cordial and have not given their sanction in a single instance that has been authenticated, to any compound for the same purposes. The nature of the maladies relieved by the Juno Cordial are generally such as to leave the publication of certificates of cures out of the question, or the proprietor could produce a host of the most conclusive testimony to show that the great reputation that it enjoys was not accidentally obtained, but is firmly based upon its positive, and apparently miraculous virtues. In all directions are to be found the happy parents of healthy offspring, who would not have been so, but for this extraordinary preparption. And it is equally potent in the many diseases for which it is recommended. Objection has been naturally made to the price of the Juno Cordial, because the trash that has been thrown into the market in opposition to it is sold cheaper; but the fact is, the Cerdial cannot be afforded for less, and ought to be much dearer, as many of the ingredients which compose it are among the costliest things in nature; whereas the others are made up of cheap drugs, worth but little in money, and less in merit. We assure the reader that the utmost reliance may be placed on the Juno Cordial in the cure of the maladies mentioned above, and also those that follow, viz: Loss of Muscular Energy, Physical Lassitude and General Prostration, Irritability, and all Nervous Affections, Indigestion, Sluggishness of the Liver, Gleet, Lucorrhoea or Whites, and Flour Albus and every disease in any way connected with the disorder of the Procreative Functions—in all of which it will afford almost immediate relief, and, if used as directed, is almost certain to produce a positive and permanent cure. Persons about to marry, if conscious of any weakness or disability of a certain nature, should take this Cordial, as it will infallibly restore health and vigor in a brief period, and where want of offspring is a cause of regret, if recourse be had to it the most beneficial results may be anticipated with confidence. It is of priceless value to those without offspring. It has taken the precedence in Italy, and will in all other countries where it may become known.

To spread wide the blessings of this medicine, I have appointed Messrs. Judson & Co., of the City of New York, in the United States of America, my sole Agents for its sale; and none can be genuine unless it comes through them, and their signature is on the weapper.

A Shooting Exploit of Sheridan.

Tom Sheridan used to tell a story for and against himself, which we shall take leave to relate.

He was staying at Lord Craven's, at Benham, (or rather Hamstead), and one day proceeded on a shooting excursion, like Hawthorn, with only "his dog and gun," on foot, and unattended by companion or keeper; the sport was bad—the birds few and shy—and he walked and in search of game, until unconsciously he entered the domain of some neighboring squire. A very short time after, he perceived advancing towards him, at the top of his speed, a jolly, comfortable-looking gentleman, followed by a servant, armed, as it appeared, for conflict. Tom took up a position, and waited the approach of the enemy.

"Hallo! you sir," said the squire, when within half-earshot,, "what are you doing here, sir, eh?"

"I'm shooting, sir," said Tom.

"Do you know where you are, sir?" said the squire.

"I'm here, sir," said Tom.

"Here, sir!" said the squire, growing angry, "and do you know where here is, sir?—these, sir, are my manors; what d'ye think of that, sir, eh?"

"Why, sir, as to your manners," said Tom, "I can't say they seem over agreeable."

"I don't want any jokes, sir," said the squire, "I hate jokes. Who are you, sir—what are you?"

"Why, sir," said Tom, "my name is Sheridan—I am staying at Lord Craven's—I have come out for some sport—I have not had any, and am not aware that I am trespassing."

"Sheridan!" said the squire, cooling a little, "oh, from Lord Craven's, eh? Well, sir, I could not know that, sir—I—"

"No, sir," said Tom, "but you need not have been in a passion."

"Not in a passion, Mr. Sheridan!" said the squire; "you don't know, sir, what these preserves have cost me, and the pains and trouble I have been at with them; it's all very well for you to talk, but if you were in my place, I should like to know what you would say upon such an occasion."

"Why, sir," said Tom, "if I were in your place, under all the circumstances, I should say—I am convinced, Mr. Sheridan, you did not mean to annoy me; and as you look a good deal tired, perhaps you'll come up to my house and take some refreshment."

The squire was hit hard by this nonchalence, and (as the newspapers say) "it is needlees to add," acted upon Sheridan's suggestion.

"So far," said poor Tom, "the story tells for me—now you shall hear the sequel."

After having regaled himself at the squire's house and having said five hundred more good things than he swallowed; having delighted his host, and more than half won the hearts of his wife and daughters, the sportsman proceeded on his return homewards.

In the course of his walk he passed through a farm yard; in the front of the farm-house was a green, in the centre of which was a pond—in the pond were ducks innumerable, swimming and diving; on its verdant banks a motley group of gallant cocks and pert partlets, picking and feeding—the farmer was leaning over the hatch of the barn, which stood near two cottages on the side of the green.

Tom hated to go back with an empty bag; and having failed in his attempts at higher game, it struck him as a good joke to ridicule the exploits of the day himself, in order to prevent any one else from doing it for him; and he thought that to carry home a certain number of the domestic inhabitants of the pond and its vicinity, would serve the purpose admirably. Accordingly, up he goes to the farmer, and accosts him very civilly—

"My good friend," says Tom, "I'll make you an offer."

"Of what, sir?" says the farmer.

"Why," replies Tom, "I have been out all day fagging after birds, and haven't had a shot; now both my barrels are loaded, I should like to take home something; what shall I give you to let me have a shot with each barrel at those ducks and fowls—I standing here, and to have whatever I kill?"

"What sort of a shot are you?" said the farmer.

"Fairish," said Tom, "fairish."

"And to have all you kill?" said the farmer—"eh?"

"Exactly so," said Tom.

"Half a guinea," said the farmer.

"That's too much," said Tom. "I'll tell you what I'll do—I'll give you a seven shilling piece, which happens to be all the money I have in my pocket."

'Well," said the man, "hand it over."

The payment was made—Tom, true to his bargain, took up his post by the barn door, and let fly with one barrel, and then with the other; and such quacking, and splashing, and screaming, and fluttering, had never been seen in that place before.

Away ran Tom, and, delighted at his success, picked up first a hen, then a chicken, then fished out a dying duck or two, and so on, until he numbered eight head of domestic game, with which his bag was nobly distended.

"Those were right good shots, sir," said the farmer.

"Yes," said Tom; "eight ducks and fowls are worth more than you bargained for, old fellow—worth rather more, I suspect, than seven shillings—eh?"

"Why, yes," said the man, scratching his head "I think they be, but what do I care for that—they are none of mine!"

"Here," said Tom, "I was for once in my life beaten, and made off as fast as I could, for fear the right owner of my game might make his appearance—not but that I could have given the fellow who took me in seven times as much as I did, for his cunning and coolness.

☞ It is said that there is a gentleman out west who is so tender hearted that he refuses to take milk because it would be depriving the innocent calves of it.

☞ We should ever carefully avoid putting our interest in competion with our duty.

☞ He is a good man who provideth for the wants of his family, and who layeth up a store for the hour of need.

Matrimony and Salvation.

Matrimony is the most important step a man can take, whether in regard to his health, credit or salvation. In our opinion, the man that does not share a woman's bosom, will never lodge in Abraham's; for celibacy and sin are as nearly connected as scratching and the itch. But a man should not only be married, but well married; for while a happy marriage is the source of every felicity and all kind of fun, an unhappy marriage is of all others the greatest misfortune—losing both legs while running a brogan express, not excepted. A man who lives cheerfully in his family, who loves and is beloved by his wife, who sees his children with the fondness of a parent, and conducts his domestic affairs with the wisdom of a legislator, beholds a well regulated state in his own house, of which himself is the head. But where discord and dissension reign, where economy is wanting, and union is no more, the husband and the wife are alike unhappy; their private follies soon become public, their errors are the battle of the day, and their miscarriages the topic of every conversation. An evil more grievous than this neither is in the power of chance, nor can be feigned by imagination.

In the choice of a wife, a man ought to consult his reason always, and never his passions; not that we mean to exclude love, or more properly affection, without which it is impossible that any marriage should be happy; but we would have this tenderness arise from reflection, and not from accident; for beauty, that commonly gives rise to hasty inclination, is a very small ingredient among the numerous qualities that enter into the composition of a good wife. Among these we reckon modesty in countenance and carriage, a great fund of good sense, a sweetness of temper equally removed from giddiness and languor, a sincere disposition to make the happiness of her husband her principal study, the management of her family her constant business, and the education of her children her constant delight.

A young woman of a good family, commonly speaking, appears what she ought to be; and therefore to know what she really is, is an affair that requires time and attention; everything is to be considered, her looks, her constitution, her dress—in a word, the most trival of her actions are to be scanned. in order to form a right idea of her mind To faciliatate this discovery, two points are to be observed; the first is, the character of the parents, and the next, the lady's education. Example of every kind is a powerful thing, but that of parents is much more so; if a father or mother are full of pride, vanity or fondness for pleasure, if they are remarkable for inconstancy of mind or corruption of manners, it must be an admirable genius indeed that can enable a young woman to escape the infection. Education is also a thing of very great consequence, and what cannot be looked after with too much caution. To read, to write, to sing, to dance and to work with the needle a lemon-colored dog, or a salmon-colored hill, is very well while you are courting; but when you come to turn the sober corner of matrimony and face the realities connected with housekeeping and rocking-chairs, you will, soon discover that to know what is good for the croup, and how meat should be roasted, are attainments much more to be desired than a knowledge of wollen yarn, or how a brigand's nose may be worked with blue beads "without spoiling its expression."

EAT ANYTHING.—Lake Mahopack has been crowded so this summer that, the farm-houses about it are filled with visitors. One of the worthy farmers in the vicinity had been worried to death by his visitors. They found fault with the food. This was bad, and that was bad; there was no way of pleasing them.

"Darn it, what a fuss; I can eat anything," said Isaac.

"Can you eat crow," said one of his young boarders.

"Yes, I kin eat crow."

"Bet you a hat," said his guest.

The bet was made, a crow was caught and nicely roasted but pefore serving up, they contrived to season it with a good dose of Scotch snuff.

Isaac sat dow to the crow. He took a good bite and began to chew away. "Yes, he said, "I kin eat crow (another bite, an awful face), I kin eat crow (symptons of nausea) I kin eat crow, but I'll be darned if I hanker arter it." Isaac bolted.

SUPPRESSING A BEER SHOP.—An enterprising Dutchman, who kept a beer and porter House in Houseton street N. York, gave the following account at the Poliece Office, of an assault on his premises; speaking of the person who commenced the row, he said—

"He coombed in and axed to sell him some beer; I told him he had more as would do him goot—he called me a Dutch liar and pegin to broke two tumblers, ven me and Hans Speigler, and my wife and torter Petsey, and all de todder men about my place begin to put him out—and presently he coom back wit twenty moor shest like him, and say, "I will fix this beer concern and preak him up, and de shentlemans as want to git drunk like shentlemans, on gin and prandy, and not on dis dam Dutch pisen." Den dey kick Hans Speigler behind his pack, and kiss'd my torter Petsy pefore her face, and preak all der glas bottles, expect der big stone pitcher, and spilt my wife and me and toder parrels of peer, all over der cellar. Hans runne'd out ter door and called for der watch house, and my wife cried "murter" like ter teifil, but before der watch house come, der tam rowdies proke us all up to pieces—me and my wife and torter Petsy and Hans Speigler, and der bottles and dumblers, and plates and tishes, all smashed up togedder!"

From the Pleasure Boat.

The Power of Woman.

In the steamboats they have Ladies' Cabins, and in cars hotels, &c., they have Ladies' Saloons; but in our little craft we have never yet had any department for Ladies; and the reason is, we do not think their company worth so much as their room, unless we can teach or in some way benefit them, and they carry their heads so high there is but little hopes of their stooping to listen to our homely truths. But women we like; they are very different animals.

The word Lady now-a-days means a miserable helpless thing, done up in silks and satins, a sort of walking sign post on which milliners and mantuamakers display their latest fashions. They may know something, it is true, about the latest novell and may be judges of sweetmeats and confectionary; they may also be pretty well versed in the latest tea-table twattle and street scandal but are utterly ignorant of all that is good, praisworthy or useful, and would starve were it not for their friends.

But the word Woman has a very different sound and awakens ideas of everything pure and good, and lovely and useful; so we are fond of their company, the whole crew of us, from skipper to cook, and must have a woman's cabin, but at the same time we regret our incapacity to treat them as they deserve.

The hopes of the world are centered in women; ladies are useless but woman have power to move the universe. The mother as she listens to the accents of the infant voice and forms its first ideas is placing a lever where it will move the world, for

She has power to form the infant mind
And "as the twig is bent the tree's inclined."

Very few if any men were ever distinguished for anything great or good, who did not credit their mothers for laying the foundation of their goodness or greatness; and very few have come to an evil end who have not cause to charge their mothers with derelection of duty.

Yet notwithstanding woman possess so much power, few of them are aware of it—few of them consider that the weal or woe of a son or daughter or a whole family, or it may be of a whole nation is done up in some little word spoken to a child, or in some little example of the parent even in a silent look. Many a mother has spoken a hasty word to her child which she herself thought little of at the time, but which took root and brought forth fruit and hundred fold for good or for evil, long after the mother bade adieu to the scenes of earth.

A Lady—as the term is used now—cares little about their virtue or salvation of the world, and has other engagements which appear to her of more importance than giving the infant or youthful mind the impress of eternal purity and pleasure; but the real woman, knows that when she is training the infant mind she is performing the highest, holiest office ever assigned to mortal's care.

And it is not only over infancy, childhood and youth that woman has power;—if she did but know it, she has power to tame the tiger mind of the warring world of men; she has power if she would but use it, to speak peace to the troubled world; to make men love like brothers; to burst the bands of tyrants and bid the captives go.

Sisters, how long before you will arise in your might and reedem the world? How long before the song of universal peace, harmony and love shall burst forth and fill the earth as the fruit of your labors? You are not called to achieve this glorious victory in noise and strife, with sacrifices on the batle field but you have only to breathe love and harmony to the hearts of your children as you hang so fondly over their infant forms. This do and the world will become a paradise—humanity will be redeemed.

Maxims for Business People.

1. The world estimates men by their success in life; and, by general consent, success is evidence of superiorty.

2. Never, under any circumstances, assume a responsibility you can avoid consistently with your duty to yourself and others.

3. Base all your actions upon a principle of right; preserve your integrity of character, and, in doing this, never reckon the cost.

4. Remember that self-interest is more likely to warp your judgment than all other circumstances combined; therefore, look well to your duty when your interest is concerned.

5. Never make money at the expense of your reputation.

6. Be never lavish nor niggardly; of the two avoid the latter. A mean man is universally despised; but public favor is a stepping-stone to preferment—therefore, generous feelings should be cultivated.

7. Let your expenses be such as to leave a balance in your pocket. Ready money is a friend in need.

8. Keep clear of the law; for, when you gain your case, you are generally a loser of money.

9. Never relate your misfortune, and never grieve over what you cannot prevent.

10. No man who owes as much as he can pay, has any right to endorse for another.

Noiseless Carriage Wheels and Horse Shoes.

The London Mining Journal states that a Mr. Andrew Smith has made a great improvement in a principle applied to the construction of wheels and horse shoes, which consists in forming the hoop or tyre of two seperate layers of galvanized iron, which are riveted together, and re-galvinised in the mass; this division of parts cutting off all vibration when travelling over the roughest stones. Mr. Andrew Smith has also applied the principle to springs, in which each plate is galvanized seperately, and can never rust. The axle is also made to fit the axle box with perfect exactness, by a lining of fusible metal, is itself lubricating, and not liable to heat; the whole, in conjunction, secures a degree of quiet, ease and safety hitherto unattained.

He also applies it to horse shoes in two thicknesses of galvanized metal, then riveting them together and regalvanizing. A horse equipped in these pumps, trots over granite streets of London as softly as if he was on a bowling green.

The Contest and the Contrast.

The nominees of the two Conventions are now before the people. The Democrats have nominated GEORGE R. FORT, of Ocean County, and the Whigs, JOHN RUNK, of Hunterdon; it now remains for the independent freemen of New Jersey to choose betweeen them who shall be Governor of the State for the next ensuing term of three years. The Democrats, as it will be seen by a referance to another part of this paper, have passed a set of resolutions setting forth before the people, in broad and unequivocal terms, their platform of principles; which from the general course they pursued in the last Legislature the people have every reason to believe they will carry into effect, should they succeed in the coming election. On the other hand, the Whigs, knowing from the course they pursued in reference to these measures, they felt that a reiteration of them by their Convention would be too glaring an absurdity, they wisely, so far as their own conduct and votes was concerned, omitted the contrast. Indeed, so far as our state legislation is concerned, it is a self-evident axiom, that Whiggery and Democracy are antagonistic principles.—This is clearly proved by a mere statement of the proposition.

The Whigs of New Jersey have had for a number of years past a clear and unequivocal majority in both branches of the Legislature; and for the last three years a Governor who would have been but too happy to have aided them in every measure of reform. During this time these questions (embodied in the resolutions of the Democratic Convention) have been agitated and discussed among the people, and they, under a solemn conviction of duty, beleiving them to be for the best interests of the whole body of the people of the State, have repeatedly demanded their adoption by their representatives. They, to retain power, have repeatedly promised the people that their wishes should be gratified; this was especially the case at the last election, when it was known that the people were determined to enjoy equal rights they were most loud mouthed in favor of reform, specially pledging themselves at their conventions to the passage of these measures. What was the result? Does it not conclusively prove that they, the Whigs, with one or two noble exceptions, have no sympathy with Democracy—with these measures, which would guarantee equal rights; but that they are attached from principle, from feeling, from habit and association with special privileges?

We believe the mass of the people of both political parties to be honest, to be intelligent, and we trust too that they will follow the dictates of that honesty and the guidance of that intelligence in severing themselves from a party which tells them so plainly, we have no sympathy with you; this it is not only your duty but your interest also to do, seeing that by them you are continually deceived and enslaved.

We believe too that there are some journals in this State—Whig journals, which, judging from their advocacy of these measures, and the slurs of contempt cast upon them and their efforts, by the old hunkers of the party, are in favor of reform; and but for old associations would be hand and hand with the Democracy in ridding the State of this foul blot on her otherwise fair fame, and would aid in raising her up under the broad and protective panoply of Democratic Principles to the niche of Glory from which the antipodes of these principles have brought her. We trust that they too will follow the dictates of that honesty which the advocacy of these principles have implanted in the hearts of their conductors, to a more exalted usefulness, by the desertion of a party whose principles are so diametrically opposed to those they have advocated, and which too are so galling to every independent democratic mind.

We say again that no stronger test, no safer guarantee can be required by those who have the welfare of their country and the progress of republican principles at heart than that which has already been givien. On the one hand the Whigs have had the power, the opportunity and the reiterated demands of the people for the adoption of theso measures, and they have repeatedly and unequivocally refused to do so. On the other hand the Democrats, so far as it lay in their power, have used their utmost endeavors to promote the people's best interests by their uniform and eagerly sought opportunity to carry into effect these measures, which guarantee to all, from the beggar in rags to a king on a throne, from the poor widow with her cow to the lordly manufacturer with untold wealth, their equal and inalienable rights which Almighty God has endowed them with. Having done our duty by setting before you these plain facts in a plain and simple manner, that he who runs may read, we will leave the reader to choose coscientiously between them, nothing doubting the result of that choice.

"The True Test."

All the other claims of the democrats so called—of their being the especial advocates of education, of equality, &c. could easily be proved to be but mere pretensions, by their actual enactment in the several States where they are in power—but it is only necessary to say that for the best laws in favor of civil and religious freedom, for free schools and common school education most generally and extensively diffused, you must go to whig States. Their votes in Legislatures where they are in the minority are no proof of their real sentiments—while their actual laws where they have the power, and the condition of the States in which they have ever been the rulers, are the true test. To that we appeal, and by that we are willing to abide.—Plainfield Union.

How unfortunate this "appeal" for our friend of the Union; like the Whig Convention, he wishes to draw our attention off from the issue to other states, with which the present controversy has nothing to do. Admitting this for the sake of his argument to be true, what does it amount to and what does it prove? It amounts to just this, and proves but too conclusively for the truth of the position, that they have not done it at home;—or wherefore the reference to other states?—therefore they would seek to shun the issue by directing the people's attention to matters with which they have no immediate concern. By a Democratic Legislature of New Jersey was a Convention called to frame a new Constitution; by Democratic votes was that Constitution adopted, being opposed, so far as policy dare permit, by the Whigs; that Constitution abolishished a property qualification, a Whig Legislature subsequently passed an act making property the basis of privilege! The people, a majority of whom are Democrats, by repeated petition and remonstrance have demanded the repeal of that law, they likewise have demanded the passage of general laws, doing away with all special legislation of every description whatever; they also demand a just exemption law which will secure to the poor man a reasonable amount of property from sale for debt, that his tools may not be sacrificed and deprive him of the means of support for his family, or that that they may have a few articles of furniture wherewith to be made comfortable in the hour of sickness and of death; they also demand a homestead exemption law, that a family may not be left destitute but retain the comforts of a home when the misfortunes of its head has deprived them of his support and protection. They would likewise demand as an act of justice, a system of equal taxation, that will tax the Bank Stock and Bonds and Mortgages of the rich man as well as the poor widow's cow; they would restrict the hours of labor, and they would also establish Free Schools and demand the education of the mass, as the sure basis, the only safe guarantee of Liberty.—The Democrats, here at home, where the issue is, have edvocated these measures and used their utmost endeavors upon all occasions to have them adopted. The Whigs, here at home, where the issue is, although possessing the power by a majority of votes, have repeatedly, uniformly and consistently with their whole history in in New Jersey defeated. denied, refused, repudiated these measures of reform by their votes! Therefore the "appeal" as to what they have done elsewhere is an admission that they have not done it here! If they had, why appeal elsewhere? It is the people of New Jersey's Ox that's gored therefore its at home that damages are claimed. Neighbor, you are in the wrong camp, we conjure you, if you are for these measurees, to aid those only who by their acts as well as words have done all that could be done to establish them, and discard forever that party which we have so clearly and conclusively shown are their opposers. But alas, like the company you keep, you are not in favor of these measures, as but a short lime since you defended the property qualification, saying in substance, that jury duty was a burthen and that therefore the law had better remain as was, thus easting reproach upon those who are ever foremost to do their duty and who ask only equal rights. Therefore as "their actual laws where they have the power, and the condition of the States in which they have ever been the rulers, are the true test. To that we appeal, and by that we are willing to abide"

Democratic State Convention.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 25.

The Convention being properly organized by a choice of its officers and adoption of rules for its government, proceded to ballot for a candidate for Governor with the following result:

1st Ballot.—Pitney 10; Ford 68; Cassedy 84; Fort 135; Summerill 99; whole number of votes 396. No choice.

2d Ballot—Ford 65; Cassedy 64; Fort 145; Summerhill 115; whole umber 380.

3d Ballot—Ford 53; Cassedy 48; Fort 165; Summerhill 126; whole number 392.

4th Ballot—Ford 79; Cassedy 79; Fort 178; Summerill 118; whole number 392, necessary to a choice 197. No choice.

5th Ballot—Ford 30; Cassedy 11; Fort 233; Summerill 118.

When the result was announced that Dr. GEORGE F. FORT of Ocean, was unanimously declared to be the candidate of the Democratic party for the office of Governor, which was warmly agreed to, and the nomination greeted with nine rounds of applause.

The Committe on Resolutions, reported the following:

Whereas, the people of New Jersey are about to exercise the high prerogative of selecting from among themselves, one who shall for the constitutional term of three years, exercise the responsible and important office of Governor of the State; and whereas, this convention, in behalf of, and as representing the Democratic Repulican party of the State, have assembled for the purpose of nominating a candidate for that important office, and feeling averse to a non committal policy, deem it proper and necessary to establish and proclaim the principles upon which the Democratic party desire the future action of the State Government to be based, and to announce its position in regard to those prominent measures of reform which have for several years engaged the attention of the people—therefore be it

1. Resolved, That the strength of a Democratic Republican Government consists in the intelligence and virtue of the people; whereever the people govern, it is esential to their safety and prosperity, that they should be instructed; hence the education of the rising generation is entirely a subject of individual and parental charge, but should be cared and provided for by the people of the State at large, as an element of their general security and happiness; therefore, we declare ourselves favorable to a just and judicious system of popular education, by common or free schools.

2. Rosolved, That equality of rights, which is guarantied by the constitution, is denied by existing laws—and that all the distinctions among men, created by property and freehold qualifications, ought to be adolished, as unequal, unjust and odious.

3. Resolved, That equality of taxation is equality of justice—that there is no reason why land should be taxed and personal property exempted: and that the burdens of government should be borne equally by the interests which it is established to protect, whether those interests consist of real or personal estate.

4. Resolved, That sound policy and a just regard to the well-being of society, requires that all the inhabitants of a republican country should be protected in the possesion of such an amount of property as may secure them from poverty and want; therefore we desire the passage of law which shall exempt from execution for debt incurred after the passage of such law, an amount of property real and personal sufficient for that purpose.

5. Resolved, That general laws should be substituted for special legislation—and that where chartered privileges are necessary they should be freely open to all who will give the guarantees proper to secure the public against fraud and abuse.

6. Resolved, That the Democracy of New Jersey will stand by the constitution and its compromise, and pledge themselves to the Union now and the Union forever.

☞ We have received from a New-York Publisher, a work, which in the seductive language of its class, disguises under the denomination of "Light Literature," the most iniquitous and corrupting influences with which society is cursed. If mere lightness, vivacity, frivolity and nonsense had been its only fault we should have suffered it to pass by without notice, or perhaps with a simple announcement of its title. But this is a work of a different kind, and as we conceive of the most dangerous character, being filled with high wrought and intensely interesting scenes of lewdness and debauchery, in the most seductive language that talents of the highest order, in this line at least, can produce. Although making no pretensions to be actuated by purer motives than the generality of our cotemporaries, yet nevertheless, we cannot let this oppurtunity pass without expressing our unqualified disapprobation of works of this character. We know of nothing in the compass of man's ability so powerfully destructive of every good moral principle nor more fatal to the peace and happiness of society than works of this particular description. Written by men of talents which if rightly applied might make this world a paridise, their power for evil is correspondingly great. Believing the Press the proper guardian of our political and social prosperity and happiness we have thus independently expressed our minds on this important subject; trusting that when this meets the eye of the publisher, and perchance of the author, that it will induce them to sow a better seed, that when they come to harvest the crop the good quality and abundant yield will fill their hearts with gladness, and cause them to rejoice that through our humble means they have escaped sorrow sin and woe.

☞ "SHANTY THE BLACKSMITH."—This is a neat little volume of 198 pages, illustrated, containing a very interesting tale, by Mrs. Sherwood; moral in its tendencies, and well calculated to entertain and instruct the mind of the young, for whom it is more especially written. We would advise those who are selecting books for the young to put this on their memorandum, Published by John S. Taylor, 143 Nassau-st N. Y.

To Harden Steel without Springing.

Let the heat be as uniform as possible, and dip it perpendicularly and slowly into the water, so that it may chill regularly on all sides at the same time, and near the surface of the water. If dipped obliquely, the under side will chill first, and as it contracts will draw the upper side, which is still soft. When chilled in that condition it is thrown out of shape. The same thing often occurs when the steel is plunged suddenly into the water, by a bubble of steam remaining on one side till the other chills; hence the necessity of letting it chill near the surface. The lowest heat at which steel will harden is always the best, as by raising the heat above that point you only open the pores, rendering it more brittle without getting it any harder. D. L. WELLS.

MARRIAGE IN CALIFORNIA.

It is said the Californians are born on hrseback, it may also be said they are married on horseback. The day the marriage contract is agreed on between the parties, the bridegroom's first care is to buy or borrow the best horse to be found in his vicinity. At the same time he has to get, by one of these means, a silver-mounted bridle, and a saddle with embroidered housings. This saddle must have also, at its tern, a bridal pillion, with broad aprons flowing down the flanks of the horse. These aprons are also embroidered with silk of different colors, and with gold and silver thread. Around the margin runs a string of little steel plates, alternated with slight pendants of the same metal. These, as the horse moves jingle like a thousand mimic bells.

The bride also, comes in for her share of the nuptial preparations. The bridegroom must present her with at least six entire changes of raiment, not forgetting, through any sentiment of delicacy, even the chemise. Such an oversight might frustrate all his hopes, as it would be construed into a personal indifference—the last kind of indifference which a California lady will forgive. He therefore hunts this article with as much solicitude as the peri the gift that was to unlock paradise. Having found six which ar neither too full nor too slender, he packs them in rose leaves, which seem to flutter like his own heart, and sends them to the lady as his last bridal present. She might naturally expect him to come noxt.

The wedding-day having arrived, the two fine horses, procured for the occasion are led to the door, saddled, bridled and pillioned. The bridegroom takes up before him the god-mother, and the god-father the bride, and thus they gallop away to the church. The priest, in his richest robes, receives them at the altar, where they kneel, partake of the sacrament, and are married. This over, they start on their return--but now the gentleman change partners. The bridegroom. still on the pillion, takes up before him his bride. With his right arm he steadiesher on the saddle and in his left hand holds reins They return to the house of the parents of the bride, where they are generally received with a discharge of musketry. Two persons stationed at some convenient place, now rush out and seize him by his legs, and, before he has time to dismount, deprive him of his spurs which he is obliged to redeem with a bottle of brandy.

The married couple then enter the house, where the near relatives are all waiting in tears to receive them. They kneel down before the parents of the lady and crave a blessing, which is bestowe with patriarchal solemnity. On rising the bridegroom made a signal for the guests to come in, and another for the guitar and harp to strike up. Then commences the dancing, which continues often for three days with only brief intervals for refreshment, but none for slumber; the wedded pair must be on their feet; their dilemna furnishes food for good-humored gibes and merrimement. Thus commences married life in California. The stream, it is to be hoped, is much smoother than its fount.

The orders for the back numbers have been so unexpectedly large, that it has been impossible to supply them. Arrangements have been made, however by which the Publishers will now be able to fill orders to any extent to which they may be favored with them. It is their aim to make the matter which the successive numbers contain of such a character as shall have permanent value and interest for miscellaneous readers. The publishers desire again to express their thanks to the public, and especially to the periodical and newspaper Press throughout the country, for the extraordinary degree of favor with which their Magazine has been received. The universal commendation which has been bestowed upon it, and the extraordinary circulation which it has obtained, confirm them in the opinion, which led them to start it, that the reading public demand just such a work—one which will present monthly, in handsomer style, and at a cheaper rate than any other periodical published in the world, the choicest portions of that vast intellectual wealth which obtains currency through the periodical press at the present day.

The Publishers beg to reassure the readers of the NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE that the favor it meets shall be used to increase its merit, and to add to its interest and its usefulness. Still greater care will be exercised to publish in its pages nothing that is not, in point of ability, of interest, and especially in regard to its moral influence, far above mediocrity. Renewed attention will be given to the illustrations of the successive numbers; and no expense will be spared to make them attractive.

A new feature of the Magazine, which will be regularly maintained, will be copious extracts from English Books, in advance of their publication, for which the Publishers have peculiar facilities in the receipt of early sheets. A Monthly Summary of Domestic as well as of Foreign Events, comprising all the Political, Literary, and Scientific incidents of the current month, will also be given in each successive issue.

Each number of the Magazine will contain 144 pages octavo, in double columns. The volumes of a single year, therefore, will present nearly two thousand pages of the choicest of the Miscellaneous Literature of the age. A carefully prepared Fashion Plate, and other pictorial illustrations, will accompany each number.

TERMS.—THREE DOLLARS a year, or TWENTY-FIVE CENTS a Number. The Work may be obtained of Booksellers and Periodical Agents. and of the Publishers.

Liberal arrangements will be made with the Trade and with Agents for extra efforts in circulating the Work, and Specimen Numbers will be supplied gratuitously for Canvassers.

The Publishers will supply Mail and City Subscribers, when payment is made to them in advance.

Persons desiring the Work early will please to furnish their names and address to the Agents. This will be an accommodation to all parties.

George Castriot, Surnamed Scanderberg.

By Clement C. Moore, LLD. 1 vol. 12mo., price $1.

Castriot is one of those brilliant names which history has given to romance. He flourished in the fifteenth century. The son of a Greek Prince he was sent in tender years as a hostage to Constantinople, when Amurath II., violation of his promise, instructed him in the doctrines of the Koran, but received him into great favor and conferred upon him high honors. At the death of his father, Castriot determined to regain the sovereignty of the principality which his father had lost. Being sent into Hungary with a Turkish army, he revolted, renounced the Mahometan religion, and assuming the government of Albania, waged war for many years with the Turks, performing prodigies of valor, and by his bravery, skill and conduct, filled the whole age with his fame. This is the story which is told by Dr. More, in a style simple and pleasing, and with a careful regard to the best authorities.—Providence Journal.

TRY ONE—YES, TRY BOTH.
SOMETHING NEW!

THE Subscriber would say to his friends and customers that he has the sole agency for the sale of Crane's Patent Compound Wash Mixture, for Plainfield, also for the North American Electric Washing Fluid, both great labor saving articles in washing, warranted not to injure clothing, and fully to answer the purpose represented. Money will be refunded to those using this fluid and finding it not to answer the purpose intended. All that is needed to recommend the above article is a trial; those who have tested them approve them much. Try one—yes, try both.

Just as I finished writing the above and raised my eyes, I see lying on my shelves and counters, some new and elegant plain and figured DeLaines, Silk and worsted and Silk and Cotton Poplins, of various shades, and some splendid Wool Shawls, to which the attention of the ladies is most respectfully requested. HERNIA.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.—This disorder, of very frequennt occurrence, may be considered as arising through weakness of the abdominal walls, inducing an enlargement in the natural openings formed therein for the transmission of blood and other vessels; such openings being enlarged, permit the escape of bowels or other viscera of the abdomen, devolving hernial swellings or rupture, which most generally occur outwardly, as at the navel, groins and thighs.

The complaint is likely to happen at birth, and therefore should be carefully looked for by those having the charge of children, that it may be arrested and cured promptly. It also occurs at any period of life, to either sex, without regard to the condition or mode of living, and when found, should be attended to without delay—the final penalty being death, and that may be induced through strangulation at any momennt.

RUPTURES, are always to be treated with the surgical instruments known as Trusses and Supporters, and these require to be skillfully applied. With this view, the HULL'S TRUSS OFFICE, now established some thirty years, has under the various managers, presented to the public both male and female attendants to apply its instruments directly to the persons, which is preferable in all cases, and has also made improvement at different times, showing that advancement which study and practice only yield toward the relief of this malady.

With much pleasure the fact is now published, that recent improvements BUTLER'S TRUSS PADS have been made, and sufficiently tested upon numerous cases to warrant, through the cures already affected, their submission to the public, as being in adaptation and efficiency superior to any heretofore made known.

These improvements, recently patented, are now being applied at this office, 4 Vesey street, in cases of rupture, gravitation of the bowels, prolapsus uteri, prolapsus ani and piles.

The public may rely upon that care being made in their application, which will most likely tend to the final cure of the several complaints.

TO MECHANICS, INVENTORS and Manufacturers.

The publishers of the Scientific American respectfully give notice that the VIth Volume of this valuable journal will be commenced on the Twenty first of September next, offering a favorable opportunity for all to subscribe who take an interest in the progress and development of the Mechanics, Arts, and Manufactures of our country. The character of the Scientific American is too well known throughout the country to require a detailed account of the various subjects discussed through its columns.

The aim of the publishers has always been to render it the most thorough and useful scientific journal in the country; and to judge of this, by comparing its circulation and influence with other publications of the same class, they have the unequivocal evidence of its value as the leading exponent of the Arts and Sciencies.

It will be published WEEKLY as heretofore, IN QUARTO FORM on fine paper, affording at the end of the year an ILLUSTRATED ENCYCLOPÆDIA of over FOUR HUNDRED PAGES, with an index, and from FIVE to SIX HUNDRED ORIGINAL ENGRAVINGS described by letters of reference, besides a vast amount of practical information concerning the progress of SCIENTIFIC and MECHANICAL IMPROVEMENTS CHEMISTRY, CIVIL ENGINEERING, MANUFACTURING in its various branches, ARCHITECTURE, MASONRY, BOTANY—in short it embraces the entire range of the Arts and Sciences.

It also possesses an original feature not found in any other weekly journal in the country, viz: an OFFICIAL LIST of PATENT CLAIMS, prepared expressly for its columns at the Patent Office, thus constituting it the "AMERICAN REPERTORY of INVETIONS."

In connection with the publishing department the proprietors transact the most extensive Home and Foreign Patent business done in this country; consequently their facilities must be correspondingly superior.

GREAT.

SPRING & SUMMER MEDICINE.

BRISTOL'S COMPOUND EXTRACT OF SARSAPRILLA. The value of this great American Specific for all diseases and disorders generated by impure blood, is universally known and appreciated.

TWENTY-FIVE PHYSICIANS,

among the most eminent in this country, have recently signed and caused to be published, a document certifying that BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA was the best preparation of the kind in existence, and that they

USED IT DAILY IN THEIR PRACTICE,

with the happiest effects. Remember that for

MORE THAN TWENTY YEARS

it has been before the public, performing in that time

MILLIONS OF CURES!

During that period multitudes of Sarsaprilla, so called, have been palmed upon the public, but no other has

STOOD THE TEST OF TIME!

Every year has added thousands upon thousands of bottles to its sales, its cures, and the

IMMENSE MASS OF CERTIFICATES

Which, if printed and bound would form a library of themselves! The victim of

HEREDITARY SCROFULA

with suppurating glands, honey-combed flesh, and caries eating into his bones, finds in BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA a balm for his afflictions. His horrible torments are assuaged and his malady not only relieved, but,

PERMANENTLY CURED!

It may be safely asserted from the results of nearly a quarter of a century's experience, that

BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA,

is beyond all comparison the

MOST WONDERFUL REMEDY ON EARTH

for the following diseases and all others proceeding from.

VITIATED BLOOD.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, Rheumatism, Obstinate Cutaneous Eruptions, Pimples or Pustules on the Face, Blotches, Boils, Chronic Sore Eyes, Ring Worm or Tetter, Scald Head, Enlargement and Pains of the Bones and Joints, Stubborn Ulcers, Syphilitic Symptoms, Sciata or Lumbago, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury.

Acites, or Dropsy

Exposure, or

Imprudence in Life, Liver Complaint, Ague and Fever, Intermitting Fever, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Plethora of Blood in the Head, Piles, Pains in the Back, Side, Breast or Loins, and all forms of Muscular, Glandular, and Skin Diseases.

It is also a sovereign specific for General Debility and the best renovator of a broken constitution. It braces and reinvigorates every organ, promotes activity and regularity in every function, and produces that condition of the whole physical system which is the best security for ☞ LONG LIFE!

Let all who wish to purge the blood from the impurities contracted from the free indulgence of the appetite during the winter, and to prepare the system to

RESIST SUMMER EPIDEMICS,

Resort now to

BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA

the gentle aperient, the powerful tonic, the unrivalled antiseptic, and great builder up and

FORTIFIER OF THE SYSTEM!

The record which has been kept since the introduction of Bristol's Sarsaparilla, twenty odd years ago, exhibits an aggregate of known cures which established its invaluable properties. Among the recorded facts are the following, in round numbers:

Cured of Summer Complaints, 10,000.

100,000 Cured of Scrofula.

Cured of Rheumatism, 58,000

150,000 Cured of Diseases of the Skin.

Cured of Liver Complaints, 35,000.

27,000 Cured of Diarrhœa and Dysentery.

There is not space in an advertisement for a full enumeration, but the cures amount to

A GRAND TOTAL OF ONE MILLION.

The public faith in it has never wavered—never can waver: for it is founded on experience, just as their want of faith in other spurious compounds is also founded in experience. They

FLY FROM MINERAL NOSTRUMS

to seek hope, life, and vigor from this

PURELY VEGETABLE REMEDY.

And are Never Disappointed!

Therefore, however broken in health and spirits, however loathsome to himself and others, let no man despair of recovery. Let the patient only understand that Bristol's Sarsaparilla is an infallible remedy for only persuade him for his own life's sake to try it, and those who know what it has acomplished will have no hesitation in predicting his speedy restoration to health.

A LEGION OF DISEASES,

As a means of regulating all the functions of

WOMAN'S DELICATE ORGANIZATION

it has no equal in the materia medica, and at that critical period of life, when the first stage of her decline commences, its cordial and invigorating properties will enable her to

PASS THE CRISIS SAFELY.

INESTIMABLE VALUE.

IN ALL CASES of General Debility, this Medicine Acts like a charm!

THOUSANDS

Have tested its efficacy, and thousands more are now under treatment; and not one solitary case of failure has yet been reported. Volumes could be filled with certificates of those who have been permanently cured; but it is considered that the testimony of a few well known citizens will answer every purpose. The reader will find, on looking TESTIMONIALS, they are not 'got up' for the occason; but that they are bona fide letters from gentlemen living in our midst, and who can be seen daily at their places of business.

READ, AND SATISFY YOURSELVES:

Read the following from an eminent Physician:

The undersigned being acquainted with some of the ingredints of HUTCHINGS' VEGETABLE DYSPEPSIA BITTERS, and having used it for some time in his practice with every desired effect, here commends this medicine from the certainty of its effect and gives it a preference over all preparations in medicine for that distressing complaint, Dyspepsia.

T. HARDENBERGH, M. D., No. 1 Beach street N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half; during a greater portion of this time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself until he was recommended to try HUTCHINGS' DYSPEPSIA BITTERS; he very soon derived a benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of HUTCHINGS' BITTERS for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine. L B. WYMAN. 23 Burling Slip.

New York, September 3. 1849.

The following certificate is from M. B. Brady, the celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness. I was advised to take Hutching's Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease, and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia.

M. B. BRADY, No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

The proprietor of this medicine has received many other certificates of cures, equally remarkable, of the various diseases for which this preparation is applicable; but the above are deemed necessary to satisfy any unprejudiced mind of its value and superiority above all other preparations.

Circulars, containing the Certificates of Remarkable Cures and the high estimation in which this Medicine is held by the Public Press, can be had of the Agent, free. ☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle.

CHERRY PECTORAL:

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, ASTHMA, WHOOPING-COUGH AND CONSUMPTION.

The uniform success which has attended the use of this preparation—its salutary effect—its power to relieve and cure affections of the Lungs, have gained for it a celebrity equalled by no other medicine. We offer it to the afflicted with entire confidence in its virtues, and the full belief that it will subdue and remove the severest attacks of disease upon the throat and Lungs. These results, as they become publicly known, very naturally attract the attention of medical men and philanthropists everywhere.—What is their opinion of CHERRY PECTORAL may be seen in the following:—

VALENTINE MOTT, M. D.,

Prof. Surgery Med. College, New York, says:—

"It gives me pleasure to certify the value and efficacy of Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL, which I consider peculiarly adapted to cure diseases of the Throat and Lungs."

THE RT. REV. LORD BISHOP FIELD

writes in a letter to his friend, who was fast sinking under an affection of the Lungs:—"Try the CHERRY PECTORAL and if any medicine can give you relief, with the blessing of God that will."

CPIEF JUSTICE EUSTIS,

of Louisiana, writes "That a young daughter of his was cured of several severe attacks of Croup by the "CHERRY PECTORAL."

ASTHMA AND BRONCHITIS.

The Canadian Journal of Medical Science states, "That Asthma and Bronchitis so prevalent in this inclement climate, has yielded with surprising rapidity to Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL, and we cannot too strongly recommend this skilful preparation to the Profession and public generally."

Let the relieved sufierer speak for himself:—

HARTFORD, Jan. 26. 1847.

Dr. J. C. Ayer—Dear Sir:—Having been rescued from a painful and dangerous disease by your medicine, gratitude prompts me to send you this acknowledgment, not only in justice to you, but for the information of others in like affliction.

A slight cold upon the lungs, neglected at first became so severe that spitting of blood, a violent cough and profuse night sweats followed and fastened upon me. I became emaciated, could not sleep, was distressed by my cough, and a pain through my chest, and in short had all the alarming symptoms of quick consumption. No medicine seemed at all to reach my case, until I providentially tried your CHERRY PECTORAL, which soon relieved and now has cured me.

Yours with respect. E. A. STEWART.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 17, 1848

Dr. Ayer, Lowell—Dear Sir:—I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form; so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breath on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my Physician prescribed, as an experiment, your CHERRY PECTORAL.

At first it seemed to make me worse, but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

BLAKE'S PATENT

FIRE PROOF PAINT.

THE original and only genuine article, that can be obtained, without subjecting the purchaser to a prosecution for an infringement of my Patent. It has not yet been two year since the first counterfeit, was got up, but in that short time has proved itself, entirely worthless, as will be seen by the statement of more than twenty of the most respectable inhabitants of Sharon Ohio where mine as well as the Counterfeits are made. They say that we have examined recently, a house that was painted, with

Blake's Patent Fire Proof Paint,

SIX YEARS since (as an experiment) and now find the coating as hard as slate or stone. The action of the weather having no effect than to indurate and harden the substance. We will farther state that it has been such a complete failure in all the other kinds of stuff got up, and sold here, called Fire Proof paint (except Blakes) that his only is considered worth useing.

(Signed) Barnabus Crane and 20 others.

Hon. Daniel Webster has recently examined the patent and at the close of his report says, "I have no doubt whatever, but Mr Blake's Patent is good and valid. [104.

The genuine kept constantly on hand of different colors ground in oil or dry powder at the general depot No 84 Pearl-st. N Y.

MARRIAGE:

WHY SO OFTEN UNHAPPY.

THE CAUSES AND THE REMEDY!

MANY and many a wife endures years of bodily suffering and of mental anguish, prostrate and helpless, embittering her life, that of her husband, and hazarding the future welfare of her children, arising from causes which, if known, would have spared the suffering, the anguish to the wife, and to the husband embarrassments and pecuniary difficulties having their origin in the mind being weighed down and harassed in consequence of the sickness of the companion of his bosom.

How important that the causes should be known to every wife, to every husband, that the dreadful and harrowing consequences to the health and happiness of both may be avoided! Life is too short and health too precious to admit any portion of the one to be spent without the full enjoyment of the other. The timely possession of a little work entitled as follows has been the means of saving the health and the life of thousands, as over copies have been sold since the first edition was issued.

The author has been induced to advertise it by the urgent and pressing request of those who have been indebted to its publication for all they hold dear (that all may have an opportunity of obtaining it), and who have favored him with thousands of letters of encomium, some of which are annexed to the advertisement.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

Twentieth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, $1.00.

THIS WORK IS INTENDED ESPECIALLY FOR THE MARRIED, or those contemplating marriage, as it discloses important secrets which should be known to them particularly.

Here, every female—the wife, the mother—the one either budding into womanhood, or the one in the decline of years, in whom nature contemplates an important change—can discover the causes, symptoms, and the most efficient remedies and most certain mode of cure, in every complaint to which her sex is subject.

The revelations contained in its pages have proved a blessing to thousands, as the innumerable letters received by the author (which he is permitted by the writers to publish) will attest.

SICKLY AND UNHAPPY WIVES.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Dayton, O.

"DAYTON, May 1, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU—My Dear Sir: 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion,' for which I enclosed one dollar to your address, came safely to hand. I would not have troubled you with these few lines, but that I am impelled by a sense of gratitude, for myself and wife, to give utterance to our sincere and heartfelt emotions.

"My wife has been perceptibly sinking for some three years or more, in consequence of her great anguish and suffering some months before and during confinement; every successive one more and more debilitated and prostrated her, putting her life in imminent danger, and which was, on the last occasion, despaired of. I supposed that this state of things was inevitable, and resigned myself to meet the worst. At this time (now about two months) I heard your book highly spoken of, as containing some matters reaching my case. On its receipt and perusal, I can not express to you the relief it afforded my distressed mind and the joy its pages imparted to my wife, on learning that the great discovery of M. M. Desomeaux provided a remedy. It opened a prospect to me which I little conceived was possible. No pecuniary consideration can ever repay the obligations I am under to you for having been the means of imparting to us the matters contained in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' But for this, ere another year would have passed over my head, in all human probability my wife would have been in her grave, and my children left motherless."

Extract from a Letter.

Competence and Health.

"LANCASTER, PA., Oct. 24, 1847.

"MY DEAR SIR: I know you will have the kindness to bear with me in encroaching upon your time, while I acknowledge (in behalf of myself and wife) the obligations we feel ourselves under to you in having made known certain matters, contained in your most invaluable 'Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' It has been worth its weight in gold to me. If I express myself rather warmly, you will see that I can not do so too warmly, when I inform you of the extent to which I have, through it, been benefited. I will state my situation when I obtained your book through the merest curiosity I look upon it as one of the most fortunate events of my life. I had been married some ten years, and was the father of seven children. I was long struggling unceasingly, to the end that I might gain a moderate competency, but the results of my utmost exertions at the end left me about where I was at the beginning of each year; and that only, with the most stinted economy, sufficing with barely the necessaries of life. Finally, this constant effort was beginning to have its effect upon my health: I felt less capable to endure its continuance, while I felt the necessity of perseverance.

"This constant, unceasing struggle on my part was imperative, in consequence of the prostrated condition of my wife (with occasional intermission) for six years, much of the time confined to her bed, and of course incapable of taking the charge and management of household affairs. Her condition arose from causes of which I was ignorant. Oh! what would I have given had I the six years to live over again! What would my wife have given to have been spared the long days and still longer nights prostrate on a bed of sickness!—all of which would have been avoided, had I then seen a copy of 'THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION.'"

From a Physician.

DANGEROUS DELIVERIES,

OBSTRUCTIONS, IRREGULARITIES, &C.

How many are suffering from obstruction or irregularities peculiar to the female system, which undermine their health, the effects of which they are ignorant, and for which their delicacy forbids seeking medical advice! How many suffer from prolapsus uteri (falling of the womb), or from fluor-albus (weakness, debility, &c., &c)! How many are in constant agony for many months preceding confinement! How many have difficult if not dangerous deliveries, and whose lives are jeoparded during such time, will find in its pages the means of prevention, amelioration, and relief!

Extract from a Letter.

To those just Married.—"Had I known!"

"PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU: Had I known of the im portant matters treated of in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion' some years ago, how much misery I might have escaped! I have suffered years from causes which you point out in your book, without knowing what to do. I obtained a copy, and found my case treated of. I trust every female will avail herself of the information contained in its pages."

Letters are daily received of this character, unnecessary to present.

To those yet unmarried, but contemplating marriage, or perhaps hesitating as to the propriety of incurring the responsibilities attendant upon it, the importance of being possessed of the revelations contained in these pages, so intimately involving their future happiness, can not be appreciated.

It is, of course, impracticable to convey more fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage; neither is it necessary, since it is every one's duty to become possessed of knowledge whereby the sufferings to which a wife, a mother, or a sister, may be subject, can be obviated.

☞ Copies will be sent by Mail free of Postage to the Purchaser.

☞ CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against various catch-penies intended to be palmed off upon them initiating the title of the work as "The Married LADIES' Medical Companion," and various other titles. FOR FEMALES AND MALES

Dr. Lazetti's Juno Cordial, or Protective Elixir.

This is the only actual remedy ever discovered for impetency, Genital Debility, Nocturnal Emissions, and all diseases occasioned by certain secret habits; and many of the nostrums recently recommended for the same complaints are worthless imitations which its unrivalled excellence, fame and popularity have brought into the market. The Medical Faculty of Europe and the United States are unanimous in their recommendations of the Juno Cordial and have not given their sanction in a single instance that has been authenticated, to any compound for the same purposes. The nature of the maladies relieved by the Juno Cordial are generally such as to leave the publication of certificates of cures out of the question, or the proprietor could produce a host of the most conclusive testimony to show that the great reputation that it enjoys was not accidentally obtained, but is firmly based upon its positive, and apparently miraculous virtues. In all directions are to be found the happy pareuts of healthy offspring, who would not have been so, but for this extraordinary preparption. And it is equally potent in the many diseases for which it is recommended. Objection has been naturally made to the price of the Juno Cordial, because the trash that has been thrown into the market in opposition to it is sold cheaper; but the fact is, the Cerdial cannot be afforded for less, and ought to be much dearer, as many of the ingredients which compose it are among the costliest things in nature; whereas the others are made up of cheap drugs, worth but little in money, and less in merit. We assure the reader that the utmost reliance may be placed on the Juno Cordial in the cure of the maladies mentioned above, and also those that follow, viz: Loss of Muscular Energy, Physical Lassitude and General Prostration, Irritability, and all Nervous Affections, Indigestion, Sluggishness of the Liver, Gleet, Lucorrhoea or Whites, and Flour Albus and every disease in any way connected with the disorder of the Procreative Functions—in all of which it will afford almost immediate relief, and, if used as directed, is almost certain to produce a positive and permanent cure. Persons about to marry, if conscious of any weakness or disability of a certain nature, should take this Cordial, as it will infallibly restore health and vigor in a brief period, and where want of offspring is a cause of regret, if recourse be had to it the most beneficial results may be anticipated with confidence. It is of priceless value to those without offspring. It has taken the precedence in Italy, and will in all other countries where it may become known.

To spread wide the blessings of this medicine, I have appointed Messrs. Judson & Co., of the City of New York, in the United States of America, my sole Agents for its sale; and none can be genuine unless it comes through them, and their signature is on the weapper.

The Orphan Boy.

The bustle of the fight was over; the prisoners had been secured, and the decks washed down, and the schooner had once more relapsed into midnight's quiet repose. I sought my hammock and soon fell asleep. But my slumbers were disturbed by wild dreams, which, like the visions of a fever, agitated and unnerved me. The last strife, the hardships of my life and a thousand other things, mingled together as figures in a fantasmagoria. Sudddenly a hand was laid on my shoulder, and starting up I beheld the surgeon's mate.

"Little Dick, sir, is dying," said he.

At once I sprung from my hammock—little Dick was a sort of protege of mine. He was a pale, delicate child, said to be an orphan, and of a gentle nature; and from the first hour I joined the schooner, my heart yearned towards him, for I, too had once been friendles and alone in the world. He had often talked to me in confidence of his mother, whose memory he regarded with holy reverence, while to the other boys of the ship he had little to say; for they were rude and coarse, he delicate and sensitive. Often when they jeered him for his melancholy, he would go apart by himself and weep. He never complained of his lot, though his companions imposed on him continually. Poor lad! his heart was in the grave with his lost parents.

I took a strong interests in him, and had lightened his task as much as possible. During the late fight I had owed my life to him, for he rushed in just as a sabre-stroke was levelled at me: and by interposing his feeble cutlas he averted a deadly blow. In the hurry and confusion since, I had quite forgotten to inquire whether he was hurt, though, at the time, I had inwardly resolved to exert all my little influence to procure him a midshipman's warrant in requital for his service. It was with a pang of reproachful agony therefore, that I leaped to my feet.

"My God!" I exclaimed; "You don't mean it? He is not dying?

"I fear, sir," said the messenger, shaking his head sadly," "that he cannot live till morning."

"And I have been lying idle here?" I exclaimed with remorse. "Lead me to him."

"He is delirious, but at intervals of lunacy he asks for you, sir," and as the man spoke we stood beside the bed of the boy.

The sufferer did not lie in his hammock, as it was hung in the very midst of the crew and the close air around it was so stifling that he had been carried under the open hatchway, and laid there in a little open space of about four feet square, From the sound of the ripples I judged the vessel was in motion, while the clear calm blue sky, seen through the opening overhead and dotted with myriads of stars, betokened the fog had broken away. How calm had it smiled down on the wan face of the dying boy. Occasionally a light currrent of wind—oh! how deliciously cool in that pent up hole—eddied down the hatchway, and lifted the dark chestnut locks of the sufferer, as with his head reposing on the lap of an old vetern, he lay in an unquiet slumber. His shirt collar was unbuttoned, and his childish bosom, white as that of a girl, was opened and exposed. He breathed quick and heavily. The wound of which he was dying had been intensely painful, but within the last half hour had some what lulled, though even now his thin fingers tightly grasped the bedclothes, as if he suffered the greatest agony.

A battle-stained and gray-haired seamen stood beside him, holding a dull lanthorn in his hand and gazed sorrowfully down upon the sufferer. The surgeon knelt with his finger on the boy's pulse. As I approached they all looked up—the veteran who held him shook his head, and would have spoken, but the tears gathered too chokingly in his eyes.

The surgeon said—

"He is going fast—poor little fellow. Do you see this?" As he spoke he lifted up a rich gold locket which laid upon his breast. "He has seen better days."

I could not answer, for my heart was full—here was the being to whom but a few hours before I had owed my life, a poor, slight, unprotected child—lybefore me with death already written upon his brow—and yet I had never sought him out after the conflict. How bitterly my heart reproached me at that hour. They noticed my agitation, and his old friend—the seaman who held his head, said sadly—

"Poor lijtle Dick—you'll never see the shore you have wished for so long. But there'll be more than one when your log's out"—he spoke with emotion—"to mourn over you."

Suddenly the little fellow opened his eyes and looked vacantly around.

"Has he come yet?" he asked in a low voice.—"Why don't he come?"

"I am here," said I, taking the little fellow's hand. "Don't you know me, Dick?"

He smiled faintly in my face. He then said—

"You have been kind to me, sir—kinder to me than most people are to a poor orphan boy. I have no way to show my gratitude—unless you will take the Bible you will find in my trunk. It's a small offering, I know, but its all I have."

I burst into tears: he resumed—

"Doctor, I am dying, ain't I?" said the little fellow, "for my sight grows dim. God bless you Mr. Worth."

"Can I do nothing for you Dick?" said I. You saved my life. I would coin my blood to save yours."

"I have nothing to ask—I don't want to live—only, if it's possible, let me be burried by my mother—you'll find the name of the place and all about it in my trunk."

"Anything, everything, my poor lad," I answered chokingly.

The little fellow smiled faintly—It was like an angel's smile—but he did not answer. His eyes were fixed on the stars flickering in that patch of blue sky overhead. His mind wandered.

"It's a long, long way up there, but there are bright angels among them. Mother used to say that I should meet her there. How near they come! and I see sweet faces smiling on me from among them. Hark! is that music?" and lifting his finger he seemed listening for a moment. He fell back, and the old veteran burst into tears—the child was dead. Did he indeed hear angel's voices? God grant it.

OUT OF HEART.

BY ELLEN ASHTON.

"Why so sad, Ernest?" said the young wife to her hnsband, affectionately twining her arms around his neck and kissing him.

He looked up with a smile, and replied—

"I am almost out of heart, Mary. I think of all pursuits, a physicin's profession is the worst. Here I have been week after week and month after month—and I may soon say year after year—waiting for practice, yet without success. A lawyer may volunteer in a celebrated case, and so makes himself known—but a physician must sit patiently in his office, and if unknown, see men without half his acquirements rolling in wealth while he, perhaps, is starving. And it will soon come that," he added bitterly, "if I do not get employment."'

An unbidden tear stole into the wife's eye, but she strove to smile, and said:

"Do not despond, Ernest; I know you have been unfortunate so far, but you have talents and knowledge to make your way as soon as you get a start. And depend upon it," she added with a cheerful look, "that will come, when you least expect it."

"So you have told me often; but the lucky hour has never come," said her husband despondingly.—"and now every cent of my little fortune has been expened, and our credit will soon be gone when it is found we do not pay. What then is to become of us?"

Ernest was in a mood which the most sanguine sometimes experience when disappointment has crushed the spirit, and the voice of hope is no longer heard within. His wife would have given way to tears, if she had been alone; but she felt the necessitiy of sustaining him, and answered cherfully:

"And what if every cent is gone? Have no fear that we shall starve. God sent ravens to feed Elijah, and he will yet interpose for our aid. Trust in him Ernest."

The husband felt rebuked as she thus spoke and answered less despondingly:

"But really, Mary, this want of success would try the stoutest spirit. The mechanic, the day laborer, the humblest farmer, is sure of his raiment; but; I, after having spent years in study, have wasted years besides waiting for practice; and now when all my fortune, is gone, if I resort to other means of livelihood, I lose all that I have spent, both time and money, and must forever abandon the idea of persuing my profession. It is too hard!" and he arose and walked the room with rapid strides.

His wife sighed and remained silent.

But after a moment or two she arose, went up to him and fondly encircling him with her arms, said:

Dear Ernest, you must not worry yourself so.—You think it painful for me to bear poverty, I know, or you would not take it so hard; but a woman never regards such things when she loves. A crust of bread a log-cabin, would be preferable to me if I shared them with you, than a palace with any other. But it will not come to this. Something within assures me you will yet be great and rich. Have patience only a little while longer. There—there is a knock at the door now—it may be for you."

As if her words had been prophetic, the littie girl, their ouly servant, appeared at that crisis, and said the doctor was wanted in a great hurry. With an exulting smile his wife ran for his hat, and then sat down, with a beating heart to wait his return.

It was almost the first summens that the young physician had received though he had resided in the village for more than a year. The place, too, was large and populous, but there resided medical men of large practice, and all these combined to put down their young rival, More than once heretofore Ernest would have abandoned the field in despatr; but his young wife cheered and encouraged him, though sometimes her own heart felt ready to give up.

Mary Linwood was indeed that greatest of blessings, a good wife; she sympathised with her husband, economized to the utmost and by her sanguine words chased despondency from his heart.

Hour after hour she sat there awaiting her husband, yet still he came not. At last darkness sat in and she began to feel uneasy. She was about rising to go to the door, when she heard her husband's foot on the step, and hurrying out she met him in the hall.

"God bless you, Mary, for an angel as you are," were his first words. "If it had not been for you, I should have given up long ago, and now my fortune is made."

Breathles with an anxiety to hear all, yet not unmindful of his probably wearied condition, Mary hurried her husband into she sitting room, where the tea things were laid, and began to pour out the refreshing beverage with a trembling hand, while Ernest told the history of his day's absence.

"I found," he said, "I was sent for to old Governor Houstan's—the richest man that any of us know, in the country—and when I got there I learned to my surprise, the governor had been thrown from his carriage and was dying. All the physicians of the town had been sent for one after another, but none could aid him. In despair, his wife, without orders, had sent for me. I saw his only chance for life depended on a new and dificult operation, which none of the older physicians had ever seen performed. Fortunately, I had assisted at one when a student. I stated what I thought could be done. The old governor is a man of iron nerves and quick resolution; so when he heard others say that they could do nothing for him, he determined to commit himself to my hands. I succeeded beyond my hopes; even the other physicians were forced to acknowledge my skill; and there is now nothing but care required to make my patient as well as ever. On parting, he put this roll of bills in my hands."

Mary was in tears long before her husband had finished his narration; but her heart went up in thankfulness to God for having thus interposed just at the crisis when he seemed gone.

From that day Ernest Linwood was a made man. The fame of his skilful operation was in everybody's mouth; and by the aid of his patient, who now became his patron, he stepped at once into practice among the best families of the place. Wealth as well as reputation flowed in upon him; but he always attributed his success to his wife, whose affections, he said, had cheered and sustained him when out of heart.

"Ther is nothing," he would say, "like a faithful wife; under God our weal or woe for this life depends on her. If she is desponding, your own sanguine spirit catches the infection; but if she is full of hope and energy her smiles will cheer you in the darkest hours, and enable you to achieve what you at first thought impossibilities. Our success in this world, as well as our happiness, depends chiefly on our wives. Let a man marry one, therefore, 'equal to either fortune,' who can adorn his riches or brighten his poverty; and who under all circumstances, will be truly his helpmate.

THE BILL PAID.

Medical students may be proverbially "hard cases" for aught we know. Yet it cannot be denied that few are more benevolent and kind-hearted than these same hard cases are. It may be because they witness so much suffering and distress, that they become accustomed, as it were, to scenes from which at first they turned away, unable to witness.

A few years ago, we happened to be in the company of a number of students, from one of whom we heard the following story:

A few years ago, we happened to be in the company of a number of students, from one of whom we heard the following story:

It was on a cold Christmas morning, in the year 18—, a medical student, whom I will call Rush Rudder, was proceeding on his way to meet some fellow students in the little village of Richmond, where, forgetting books and studies, they had intended to spend the anniversary of the day, which brought peace and good will to men. As he was passing through one of those narrow streets in the northern part of the city, he met a small girl, weeping, as if her heart would break. The crowd passed on without inquiring the cause of her grief.

"Oh, sir," she answered him, "it is not for myself I care, but mother is very sick, and she sent me to the tailor for whom she works, but he could not pay me."

"Where does your mother live?" he asked, after he had listened to her plain story. The little girl led him into a small house, where lay a sick woman laboring under great debility, and rapidly sinking for want of proper nourishment.

Ever and anon could be heard the laugh of passers by, clad in furs and well protected from the keen blasts of Boreas, as they joined in the merry making of that festive day—and the sick woman would sigh as their merry laugh fell on her ears. It may be her mind reverted to her happier days. Such thoughts will often steal upon the distressed, however much they guard themselves against them.

"I will get you some medicine, which I hope will do you good," said the student. "But, no matter about that," said he, knowing full well what she was about to say. "No matter, you can pay me when you get money enough to spare," and without waiting to hear any objections on her part he wished her a good day, promising to call soon again. So much time had elapsed while the student was thus engaged, that it was too late for him to meet his friends, as at starting in the morning he had intended.

Every morning a supply of food and medicine was sent to the poor woman, who; under proper nourishment, rapidly improved until convalescent, and every day did the student wend his way to the patient—to inquire how she did.

The commencement of the university took place, and Rush Rudder, M. D. was attending to the arduous duties of his profession, in his native city, Cincinnati, when one fine morning, several years after he had left the university, a splendid coach drove up to the door, and a beautiful female entered his office. The young physician lifted his eyes from the book he had been reading, he fancied he had seen that face before, but when, or where, he knew not.

"I have come, sir," said she, "to pay you for medicine received from you long, long ago."

"When did you receive the medicine?" asked the doctor in a business manner, (but it was a counterfeit.)

"On a cold Christmas morning, in the year 18—, you met a poor girl crying in the city of Philadelphia, you spoke kindly to her sick mother, and purchased food and medicine until she recovered. That poor sick woman was the only daughter of a wealthy gentleman, but marrying contrary to her father's wish, he banished her from his house. The husband soon died, and she was forced to support herself and child by her needle, but unused to labor, days and nights of toil were too much for her, and she sunk beneath the task; and had it not been for you, she must have died, and her daughter exposed to the charities of a cold, heartless world; yea, to all the temptations which helpless females are subject in our large cities. Her father died shortly after her recovery, without a will, consequently she fell heir to all his vast estate. Kind sir, that woman was my mother, and I am the little girl you spoke so kindly to."

The rest of my story is soon told. They were married, Dr. Rudder and the wealthy heiress. And if you ever visit Cincinnati, you may see the beautiful house where Rush Rudder has retired from practice; still he pursues the study of his favorite science. and much we are indebted to him for his researches in the field of medicine.

☞ If a man would take the advice he gives to others, he would be successful. It is surprising that while sound advice is so abundant, sound practice is so very scarce. What's the reason?

☞ A lady asked her physician whether snuff was injurious to the brains?

"No," said he, "for nobody who has any brains ever takes snuff."

☞ 'Is there anything really the matter with you?' said a physician, to a person who sent for him.

'I don't know how it is,' was the reply, 'I eat well, sleep well, and have a good appetite'

'Very well,' said the doctor, 'I'll give you something to take away all that.'

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

"THE TRUE TEST."—We stated last week that judging from the actual enactments in (New Jersey) the whigs were (not) in favor of Free Schools, the general diffusion of Education, and all other true, valuable and safe reforms. This is not denied by (the Whigs.) but they say give them (another) chance in New Jersey and we will do all manner of good things No, thank you, we (the people) are not so green. We want a little better evidence than mere promises before election.—Plainfield Union.

We are much obliged to the Union for the above explanation of the "True Test." Of course it cannot deny the evidence we brought forward last week, or it would have done so. It therefore admits for facts (which we defy a Whig journal in the State to refute) that by a Democratic Legislature of New Jersey was a Convention called to frame a new Constitution; by Democratic votes was that Constitution adopted, being opposed, so far as policy dare permit, by the Whigs; that Constitution abolished a property qualification, a Whig Legislature subsequently passed an act making property the basis of privilege! It admits that the Whigs, here at home, where the issue is, although possessing the power by a majority of votes, have repeatedly, uniformly and consistently with their whole history in New Jersey defeated, denied, refused, repudiated all measures of reform by their votes! Therefore the "better evidence" as to what they have done elsewhere is an admission that they have not done it here! If they had, why appeal elsewhere? Other States can take care of their own matters, as we could easy prove, were we disposed to evade the "True Test." The editor of the Union admits that he defended the property qualification, by saying, in substance that jury duty was a burthen and that therefore the law had better remain as it was, thus casting reproach upon those who are ever formost to to do their duty and who ask only equal rights.—How can our honest Whigs, and we trust there are many of them, with no better defense of their principles than the above, with these facts staring them in the face, vote the whig ticket in New Jersey.

HONESTY.—There is no man, but for his own interest, hath an obligation to be honest. There may be sometimes temptations to be otherwise; but, all cards cast up, he shall find it the greatest case, the highest profit, the best pleasure, the most safety, and the noblest fame, to hold the horns of this altar, which, in all assays, can in himself protect him. And though in the march of human life, over the stage of this world, a man shall find presented sometimes examples of thriving vice, and several opportunities to invite him upon a seeming advantage to close with unhandsome practices; yet, every man ought so to improve his progress in what is just and right, as to be able to discern the fraud and feigned pleasureableness of the bad and to choose and follow what is good and warrantable. If any man shall object that the world is far more bad than good, so that the good man shall be sure to be overpowered by the evil; the case is long since resolved by Antisthenes, that it is better with a few good men to fight against an army of bad, than with swarms and shoals of bad men, to have a few good men his enemies. And surely this was it which raised up David to that bravery of spirit which made him profess, that though a host were pitched against him, yet should not his heart be afraid.

☞ "THEOPNEUSTY, OR THE PLENARY INSPIRATION OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES, by S. R. L. Gauson, Professor of Theology in Geneva, Switzerland. Translated by Edward Norris Kirk. Published by John S. Taylor 143. Nassau-st. N. Y.

This work takes the ground that "all scripture is given by inspirtion of God." Although there are many able writers who reject different portions of the Bible as the word of God, yet with the author we cannot conceive when or where you must stop if you once overstop the broad platform the Bible itself erects. No true christian as we can concieve can permit for a moment so fatal an acknowledgement. Either the Bible, the whole Bible, is what it is represented to be or else it is the workmanship of man alone. These views will be found ably set forth in the work, by one who has evidently thought much on the subject. We commend it to the atention of all who are seeking information thereon whether christians or infidels. Certainly no more important subject can employ the minds of men; whether true or false every man should be well persuaded in his mind.

What is the Whig Creed in New Jersey?

Some few of our political wiseacres. whose ideas of perfection are limited to the good old times when Royal Charters were our paramount law and who regard the Newark Daily Advertiser as the only standard of Whig orthodoxy, have recently been sorely exercised in mind by the rapid dissemination of progressive doctrines among the Whigs of this state and of the Union. Among others we have ventured to exhibit our feelings of sympathy with the wants of the people as expressed in their petitions for legislative relief and have not hesitated to avow our adhesion to the party of progress and improvement, and our opposition to the antiquated prejudice which measures intellect by broad acres of freehold and confers political privileges only upon those who can keep gold in their purses. For this we are contemned by a few, who under the old regime, enjoyed the honors and emoluments which a confiding and generous people conferred upon them, and who having constituted themselves leaders of party, used their position only for their own aggrandizement and neglected, or still worse, betrayed the interests of the people whose sworn servants they were. * * * *

But our object at present is only to show that we stand upon the true Whig platform as it is well understood in reference to State affairs, and when we name the State Gazette, the Newark Mercury, the Jersey City Telegraph, the Sussex Register and others of the leading Whig papers in the State as standing by our side in advocating reform, we have no fear that some twenty or thirty of our townsmen who prefer a charter granted by the Majesty of England, to a republican form of municipal government, will be able to push us off that platform and establish themselves as the only rightful occupants.—Elizabethtown Journal.

The Echo of the above query is all that the "Journal" will be enabled to get from those to whom it is addressed. Their acts conclusively prove as above stated, that, the "leaders of party, used their position only for their own aggrandisement and neglected, or still worse, betrayed the interests of the people." As we stated in our last—and truth will certainly bear repetition—

'The Whigs of New Jersey have had for a number of years past a clear and unequivocal majority in both branches of the Legislature; and for the last three years a Governor who would have been but too happy to have aided them in every measure of reform. During this time these questions (embodied in the resolutions of the democratic Convention) have been agitated and discussed among the people, and they, under a solemn conviction of duty, believing them to be for the best interests of the whole body of the people of the State, have repeatedly demanded their adoption by their representatives. They, to retain power, have repeatedly promised the people that their wishes should be gratified; this was especially the case at the last election, when it was known that the people were determined to enjoy equal rights they were most loud mouthed in favor of reform, specially pledging themselves at their conventions to the passage of these measures. What was the result? Does it not conclusively prove that they, the Whigs, with one or two noble exceptions, have no sympathy with Democracy—with these measures, which would guarantee equal rights; but that they are attached from principle, from feeling from habit and association with special privileges?

We also stated that there are some journals in This State—Whig journals, which, judging from their advocacy of these measures, and the slurs of contempt cast upon them and their efforts, by the old hunkers of the party, are in favor of reform; and but for old associations would be hand and hand with the Democracy in ridding the State of this foul blot on her otherwise fair fame, and would aid in raising her up under the broad and protective panoply of Democratic Principles to the niche of Glory from which the antipodes of these principle have brought her. We trust that they too will follow the dictates of that honesty which the advocacy of these principles have implanted in the hearts of their conductors, to a more exalted usefulness, by the desertion of a party whose principles are so diametrically opposed to those they have advocated, and which too are so galling to every independent democratic mind.

We say again that no stronger test, no safer guarantee can be required by those who have the welfare of their country, and the progress of republican principles at heart than that which has already been given. On the one hand the Whigs have had the power, the opportunity and the reiterated demands of the people for the adoption of these measures, and they have repeatedly and unequivocally refused to do so. On the other hand the Democrats, so far as it lay in their power, have used their utmost endeavors to promote the people's best interests by their uniform and eagerly sought opportunity to carry into effect these measures, which guarantee to all their equal and inalienable rights.

Thus we think we have shown that the 'Journal' and its coajutors named do not stand on the Whig platform at all, as they themselves do testify, and as we have stated, the Whigs have shown no sympathy with Democracy—with thes principles; we therefore conjure them to leave a sinking ship, loaded with "Royal Charters" and special privileges and come on board the good Democratic ship Constitution, freighted with the people's rights.

Later from Havana.

The Georgia arrived at New York on Sunday evening, in 7 1-2 days from Chagres via Havana, with the California mails and passengers. A number of passengers and specie to the amount of $500,000, destined for her, had not reached Chagres at the time of her departure with the mails.

The sickness, both cholera and fever, had entirely disappeared from the Isthmus.

But little sickness prevails in Havana. The new Governor General was daily expected with 5,000 troops from Spain. The militia were reviewed by the Governor-General and disbanded on the 23d. Much indignation was excited by the ungracious manner in which their arms were required of them. A large proportion of the muskets in consequence were returned to the armory unfit for use, having been dipped in salt water, and injured by various other means, and cockades which once adorned the hats of citizen soldiers were appended to the tails of dogs and otherwise contemptuously treated. It was said that upwards of two millions of dollars per annum was to be raised for the support of additional troops and other expenses of the Island. The Habaneros were looking forward with much pleasure for the arrival of the opera company which is to commence performing on the 28th inst.

Great Meeting in New-York to Repudiate the Fugitive Law.

Several thousand people, white and black, attended a meeting in the Park at noon on Saturday, at which James Hamlet, the first New-York victim of the man-stealers, was exhibited. The greatest enthusiasm prevailed and the meeting was addressed by Messrs. W. P. Powel, Rev. John P. Raymoud, Robert hamilton, and Rev. Charles B. Ray, all colored. Resolutions of thanks were offered to the gentlemen who had assisted in the liberation of Hamlet, and a strong spirit of a resistance manifested to the Fugitive Slave Law, and the persons who sustained and secured its passage. Rev. JOHN P. THOMPSON, President; Albro Lyons, J. M. Smith, L. Napoleon and William C. Inners, Vice Presidents; Wm. P. Powell, Secretary. The meeting adjourney at 1 o'clock. A great rush was made by the spectators to see Hamlet, and he was borne in triumph to the east side of the Park on the shoulders of his sympathizing friends, and chased down Spruce-st. by a large number of men who were anxious to catch a glimpse of him.

It was stated that since the passage of the Fugitive Slave Reclamation Bill more slaves had run away than ever was known before, six women reaching the City on Sunday, Sept. 29, who had fled from Baltimore.

Mayor Woodhul has announced that none of his Police would aid or abet in the capture of runaways and cheers were given when this was stated. Hamlet was loudly cheered several times, and a Fugitive song was given at the close of the meeting, in which a great portion of the audience joined.

On Thursday evening another Repudiating meeting was held at the Church of Rev. Mr. Joslin, corner of Eleventh-st. and South Ferry, Williamsburg, which was largely attended. Still another meeting is announced, to take place on Tuesday evening at the High-st. Church, Brooklyn.

The Fugitive Slave Law in Boston.

A large meeting of Fugitive Slaves and others was held at Belknap st. Church on Friday night, Oct. 4. Resolutions were passed advising Fugitives to act cautiously, but to defend their freedom with their lives. U. S. Commissioners and Assistants were warned to beware of the consequences of attempting to capture fugitives. The meeting was addressed by J. B. Smith, a fugitive slave, who said he would defend his liberty with his life. He showed a long knife to the audience and advised them all to buy Colt's Revolvers. Another speaker said that 50,000 inhabitants of Boston would protect fugitives from arrest, and that the Police would not act against them. A meeting is to be called in Faneuil Hall.

The Fugitive Slave Law in Lowell.

A great Free Soil meeting was held in Lowell on Friday night, Oct. 4th., at which, with shouts of applause, a resolution was passed to call back three fugitive slaves who had fled from that city to Canada, with a pledge that they shall be protected from arrest by the citizens of Lowell.

FUGITIVE SLAVES—Freedom.—Hon. J. R. Giddings affirmed, in an address at Cleveland a week since, that any fugitive slave having been once on British soil, might return to the United States with impunity, as he could not again be reduced to Slavery, and that the courts both North and South had so decided.—If this is good law, we trust our various Railroads pointing towards Canada will arrange special trains for taking all the fugitives to the line and having them washed free in the waters of the St. Lawrence—north side.—Tribune

W. VAN HOOK, Assignee, 304 Broadway.

MECHANICNL MEDICINE.

Dr. Banning, formerly of this city, asks to announce that he has returned to 341 Broadway; for consultation and management of weakneses of the vocal, pulmonary, digestive, nervous, spinal and female systems; and also of the drooping, languor and physical deformities, which are so destructive of both health and beauty at the present day.

As these and kindred maladies are usually the result of a violation of the laws of physical organization, he will treat them chiefly by those exercises, mechanical appliances and reformatory habits of body, in coujunction with hydropathy galvanism and other discoveries of the day, which, united with the cooperative efforts of the subject, are calculated to relieve and restore the energies of the suffering and neglected organs.

Having spent several years in traveling for investigation and practical experiment on the subject, he has, at length, greatly improved and multiplied his surgical and mechanical appliances for the purpose. In addition to his new supports for female and spinal weaknesses, are some combining the properties of a universal hernial truss and an effective general support, with which he challenges cases of general debility, constipation, piles and prolapsus, ani, lencorrhea, prolapsus uteri and every variety of hernia.

The distinctive peculiarity of these devices is, that they do not weaken or restrain the motions or growth of the suffering parts, but act imitatively and concordantly with the mathematical genius of the body's forces. Hence, by a most comfortable and gentle pressure, they at once give great support and render the oppressed system eligible to its own restoration.

Feeble invalids coming from a distance will command prompt and faithful attention.

For more definite information, see his revised edition of "Animal Mechanics," and also his circular, which will be sent gratuitously when requested.

His improved body-braces, spinal supports and supporter trusses applied at his office (341 Broadway) and to be had wholesale and retail. City and country physicians and druggists are invited to call and examine Office hours from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. [121.

HARPER'S NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE.

FORTY THOUSAND COPIES of the fourth number of the NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE are issued to-day as the first edition. The orders for the back numbers have been so unexpectedly large, that it has been impossible to supply them. Arrangements have been made, however by which the Publishers will now be able to fill orders to any extent to which they may be favored with them. It is their aim to make the matter which the successive numbers contain of such a character as shall have permanent value and interest for miscellaneous readers. The publishers desire again to express their thanks to the public, and especially to the periodical and newspaper Press throughout the country, for the extraordinary degree of favor with which their Magazine has been received. The universal commendation which has been bestowed upon it, and the extraordinary circulation which it has obtained, confirm them in the opinion, which led them to start it, that the reading public demand just such a work—one which will present monthly, in handsomer style, and at a cheaper rate than any other periodical published in the world, the choicest portions of that vast intellectual wealth which obtains currency through the periodical press at the present day.

The Publishers beg to reassure the readers of the NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE that the favor it meets shall be used to increase its merit, and to add to its interest and its usefulness. Still greater care will be exercised to publish in its pages nothing that is not, in point of ability, of interest, and especially in regard to its moral influence, far above mediocrity. Renewed attention will be given to the illustrations of the successive numbers; and no expense will be spared to make them attractive.

A new feature of the Magazine, which will be regularly maintained, will be copious extracts from English Books, in advance of their publication, for which the Publishers have peculiar facilities in the receipt of early sheets. A Monthly Summary of Domestic as well as of Foreign Events, comprising all the Political, Literary, and Scientific incidents of the current month, will also be given in each successive issue.

Each number of the Magazine will contain 144 pages octavo, in double columns. The volumes of a single year, therefore, will present nearly two thousand pages of the choicest of the Miscellaneous Literature of the age. A carefully prepared Fashion Plate, and other pictorial illustrations, will accompany each number.

TERMS.—THREE DOLLARS a year, or TWENTY-FIVE CENTS a Number. The Work may be obtained of Booksellers and Periodical Agents. and of the Publishers.

Liberal arrangements will be made with the Trade and with Agents for extra efforts in circulating the Work. and Specimen Numbers will be supplied gratuitously for Canvassers.

The Publishers will supply Mail and City Subscribers, when payment is made to them in advance.

Persons desiring the Work early will please to furnish their names and address to the Agents. This will be an accommodation to all parties.

George Castriot, Surnamed Scanderberg.

By Clement C. Moore, LLD. 1 vol. 12mo., price $1.

Castriot is one of those brilliant names which history has given to romance. He flourished in the fifteenth century. The son of a Greek Prince he was sent in tender years as a hostage to Constantinople, when Amurath II, violation of his premise, instructed him in the doctrines of the Koran, but received him into great favor and conferred upon him high honors. At the death of his father, Castriot determined to regain the sovereignty of the principality which his father had lost. Being sent into Hungary with a Turkish army, he revolted, renounced the Mahometan religion, and assuming the government of Albania, waged war for many years with the Turks, performing prodigies of valor, and by his bravery, skill and conduct, filled the whole age with his fame. This is the story which is told by Dr. More, in a style simple and pleasing, and with a careful regard to the best authorities.—Providence Journal.

TRY ONE—YES, TRY BOTH.

SOMETHING NEW!

THE Subscriber would say to his friends and customers that he has the sole agency for the sale of Crane's Patent Compound Wash Mixture, for Plainfield, also for the North American Electric Washing Fluid, both great labor saving articles in washing, warranted not to injure clothing, and fully to answer the purpose represented. Money will be refunded to those using this fluid and finding it not to answer the purpose intended. All that is needed to recommend the above article is a trial; those who have tested them approve them much. Try one—yes, try both.

Just as I finished writing the above and raised my eyes, I see lying on my shelves and counters, some new and elegant plain and figured DeLaines, Silk and worsted and Silk and Cotton Poplins, of various shades, and some splendid Wool Shawls, to which the attention of the ladies is most respectfully requested DANIEL BULLMAN.

HERNIA.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.—This disorder, of very frequennt occurrence, may be considered as arising through weakness of the abdominal walls, inducing an enlargement in the natural openings formed therein for the transmission of blood and other vessels: such openings being enlarged, permit the escape of bowels or other viscera of the abdomen, devolving hernial swellings or rupture, which most generally occur outwardly, as at the navel, groins and thighs.

The complaint is likely to happen at birth, and therefore should be carefully looked for by those having the charge of children, that it may be arrested and cured promptly. It also occurs at any period of life, to either sex, without regard to the condition or mode of living, and when found, should be attended to without delay—the final penalty being death, and that may be induced through strangulation at any momennt.

RUPTURES, are always to be treated with the surgical instruments known as Trusses and Supporters, and these require to be skillfully applied. With this view, the HULL'S TRUSS OFFICE, now established some thirty years, has under the various managers, presented to the public both male and female attendants to apply its instruments directly to the persons, which is preferable in all cases, and has also made improvement at different times, showing that advancement which study and practice only yield toward the relief of this malady.

With much pleasure the fact is now published, that recent improvements BUTLER'S TRUSS PADS have been made, and sufficiently tested upon numerous cases to warrant, through the cures already affected, their submission to the public, as being in adaptation and efficiency superior to any heretofore made known.

These improvements, recently patented, are now being applied at this office, 4 Vesey street, in cases of rupture, gravitation of the bowels, prolapsus uteri, prolapsus ani and piles.

The public may rely upon that care being made in their application, which will most likely tend to the final cure of the several complaints.

Hull's Truss Office, 4 Vesey street, Astor House, opposite St. Paul's Church, New-York.

GREAT.

SPRING & SUMMER MEDICINE.

BRISTOL'S COMPOUND EXTRACT OF SARSAPRILLA. The value of this great American Specific for all diseases and disorders generated by impure blood, is universally known and appreciated.

TWENTY-FIVE PHYSICIANS,

among the most eminent in this country, have recently signed and caused to be published, a document certifying that BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA was the best preparation of the kind in existence, and that they

USED IT DAILY IN THEIR PRACTICE,

with the happiest effects. Remember that for

MORE THAN TWENTY YEARS

it has been before the public, performing in that time

MILLIONS OF CURES!

During that period multitudes of Sarsaprilla, so called, have been palmed upon the public, but no other has

STOOD THE TEST OF TIME!

Every year has added thousands upon thousands of bottles to its sales, its cures, and the

IMMENSE MASS OF CERTIFICATES

Which, if printed and bound would form a library of themselves! The victim of

HEREDITARY SCROFULA

with suppurating glands, honey-combed flesh, and caries eating into his bones, finds in BRISTOL'S SARSAPRILLA a balm for his afflictions. His horrible torments are assuaged and his malady not only relieved, but.

PERMANENTLY CURED!

It may be safely asserted from the results of nearly a quarter of a century's experience, that

BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA,

is beyond all comparison the

MOST WONDERFUL REMEDY ON EARTH

for the following diseases and all others proceeding from.

VITIATED BLOOD.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, Rheumatism, Obstinate Cutaneous Eruptions, Pimples or Pustules on the Face, Blotches, Boils, Chronic Sore Eyes, Ring Worm or Tetter, Scald Head, Enlargement and Pains of the Bones and Joints, Stubborn Ulcers, Syphilitic Symptoms, Sciata or Lumbago, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury.

Acites, or Dropsy

Exposure, or

Imprudence in Life, Liver Complaint, Ague and Fever, Intermitting Fever, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Plethora of Blood in the Head, Piles, Pains in the Back, Side, Breast or Loins, and all forms of Muscular, Glandular, and Skin Diseases.

It is also a sovereign specific for General Debility and the best renovator of a broken constitution. It braces and reinvigorates every organ, promotes activivity and regularity in every function, and produces that condition of the whole physical system which is the best security for ☞ LONG LIFE!

Let all who wish to purge the blood from the impurities contracted from the free indulgence of the appetite during the winter, and to prepare the system to

RESIST SUMMER EPIDEMICS,

Resort now to

BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA

the gentle aperient, the powerful tonic, the unrivalled antiseptic, and great builder up and

FORTIFIER OF THE SYSTEM!

The record which has been kept since the introduction of Bristol's Sarsaparilla, twenty odd years ago, exhibits an aggregate of known cures which established its invaluable properties. Among the recorded facts are the following, in round numbers:

Cured of Summer Complaints, 10,000.

100,000 Cured of Scrofula.

Cured of Rheumatism, 58,000

150,000 Cured of Diseases of the Skin.

Cured of Liver Complaints, 35,000.

27,000 Cured of Diarrhœa and Dysentery.

There is not space in an advertisement for a full enumeration, but the cures amount to

A GRAND TOTAL OF ONE MILLION.

The public faith in it has never wavered—never can waver; for it is founded on experience, just as their want of faith in other spurious compounds is also founded in experience. They

FLY FROM MINERAL NOSTRUMS

to seek hope, life, and vigor from this

PURELY VEGETABLE REMEDY.

And are Never Disappointed!

Therefore, however broken in health and spirits, however loathsome to himself and others, let no man despair of recovery. Let the patient only understand that Bristol's Sarsaparilla is an infallible remedy for only persuade him for his own life's sake to try it, and those who know what it has acomplished will have no hesitation in predicting his speedy restoration to health.

A LEGION OF DISEASES,

As a means of regulating all the functions of

WOMAN'S DELICATE ORGANIZATION

it has no equal in the materia medica, and at that critical period of life, when the first stage of her decline commences, its cordial and invigorating properties will enable her to

PASS THE CRISIS SAFELY.

In ALL CASES of General Debility, this Medicine Acts like a charm!

THOUSANDS

Have tested its efficacy, and thousands more are now under treatment; and not one solitary case of failure has yet been reported. Volumes could be filled with certificates of those who have been permanently cured; but it is considered that the testimony of a few well known citizens will answer every purpose. The reader will find, on looking TESTIMONIALS, they are not 'got up' for the occason; but that they are bona fide letters from gentlemen living in our midst, and who can be seeen daily at their places of business.

READ, AND SATISFY YOURSELVES:

Read the following from an eminent Physician:

The undersigned being acquainted with some of the ingredints of HUTCHINGS' VEGETABLE DYSPEPSIA BITTERS, and having used it for some time in his practice with every desired effect, here commends this medicine from the certainty of its effect and gives it a preference over all preparations in medicine for that distressing complaint, Dyspepsia.

T. HARDENBERGH, M. D., No. 1 Beach street N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half; during a greater portion of this time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself until he was recommended to try HUTCHINGS' DYSPEPSIA BITTERS; he very soon derived a benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of HUTCHINGS' BITTERS for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine. L B. WYMAN. 23 Burling Slip.

New York, September 3. 1849.

The following certificate is from M. B. Brady, the celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness. I was advised to take Hutching's Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease, and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia.

M. B. BRADY, No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

The proprietor of this medicine has received many other certificates of cures, equally remarkable, of the various diseases for which this preparation is applicable; but the above are deemed necessary to satisfy any unprejudiced mind of its value and superiority above all other preparations.

Circulars, containing the Certificates of Remarkable Cures and the high estimation in which this Medicine is held by the Public Press, can be had of the Agent, free. ☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle.

CHERRY PECTORAL:

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, ASTHMA, WHOOPING-COUGH AND CONSUMPTION.

The uniform success which has attended the use of this preparation—its salutary effect—its power to relieve and cure affections of the Lungs, have gained for it a celebrity equalled by no other medicine. We offer it to the afflicted with entire confidence in its virtues, and the full belief that it will subdue and remove the severest attacks of disease upon the throat and Lungs. These results, as they become publicly known, very naturally attract the attention of medical men and philanthropists everywhere.—What is their opinion of CHERRY PECTORAL may be seen in the following:—

VALENTINE MOTT, M. D.,

Prof. Surgery Med. College, New York, says:—

"It gives me pleasure to certify the value and efficacy of Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL, which I consider peculiarly adapted to cure diseases of the Throat and Lungs."

THE RT. REV. LORD BISHOP FIELD

writes in a letter to his friend, who was fast sinking under an affection of the Lungs:—"Try the CHERRY PECTORAL and if any medicine can give you relief, with the blessing of God that will."

CPIEF JUSTICE EUSTIS,

of Louisiana, writes "That a young daughter of his was cured of several severe attacks of Croup by the "CHERRY PECTORAL."

ASTHMA AND BRONCHITIS.

The Canadian Journal of Medical Science states, "That Asthma and Bronchitis so prevalent in this inclement climate, has yielded with surprising rapidity to Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL, and we cannot too strongly recommend this skilful preparation to the Profession and public generally."

Let the relieved sufierer speak for himself:—

HARTFORD, Jan. 26. 1847.

Dr. J. C. Ayer—Dear Sir:—Having been rescued from a painful and dangerous disease by your medicine, gratitude prompts me to send you this acknowledgment, not only in justice to you, but for the information of others in like affliction.

A slight cold upon the lungs, neglected at first became so severe that spitting of blood, a violent cough and profuse night sweats followed and fastened upon me. I became emaciated, could not sleep, was distressed by my cough, and a pain through my chest, and in short had all the alarming symptoms of quick consumption. No medicine seemed at all to reach my case, until I providentially tried your CHERRY PECTORAL, which soon relieved and now has cured me.

Yours with respect. E. A. STEWART.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 17, 1848

Dr. Ayer, Lowell—Dear Sir:—I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form; so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breath on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my Physician prescribed, as an experiment, your CHERRY PECTORAL.

At first it seemed to make me worse, but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

BLAKE'S PATENT

FIRE PROOF PAINT.

THE original and only genuine article, that can be obtained, without subjecting the purchaser to a prosecution for an infringement of my Patent. It has not yet been two year since the first counterfeit, was got up, but in that short time has proved itself, entirely worthless, as will be seen by the statement of more than twenty of the most respectable inhabitants of Sharon Ohio where mine as well as the Counterfeits are made. They say that we have examined recently, a house that was painted, with Blake's Patent Fire Proof Paint, SIX YEARS since (as an experiment) and now find the coating as hard as slate or stone. The action of the weather having no effect than to indurate and harden the substance. We will farther state that it has been such a complete failure in all the other kinds of stuff got up, and sold here, called Fire Proof paint (except Blakes) that his only is considered worth useing.

(Signed) Barnabus Crane and 20 others.

Hon. Daniel Webster has recently examined the patent and at the close of his report says, "I have no doubt whatever, but Mr Blake's Patent is good and valid. [104.

The genuine kept constantly on hand of different colors ground in oil or dry powder at the general depot No 84 Pearl-st. N Y.

MARRIAGE:

WHY SO OFTEN UNHAPPY.

THE CAUSES AND THE REMEDY!

MANY and many a wife endures years of bodily suffering and of mental anguish, prostrate and helpless, embittering her life, that of her husband, and hazarding the future welfare of her children, arising from causes which, if known, would have spared the suffering, the anguish to the wife, and to the husband embarrassments and pecuniary difficulties having their origin in the mind being weighed down and harassed in consequence of the sickness of the companion of his bosom.

How important that the causes should be known to every wife, to every husband, that the dreadful and harrowing consequences to the health and happiness of both may be avoided! Life is too short and health too precious to admit any portion of the one to be spent without the full enjoyment of the other. The timely possession of a little work entitled as follows has been the means of saving the health and the life of thousands, as over copies have been sold since the first edition was issued.

The author has been induced to advertise it by the urgent and pressing request of those who have been indebted to its publication for all they hold dear (that all may have an opportunity of obtaining it), and who have favored him with thousands of letters of encomium, some of which are annexed to the advertisement.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

Twentieth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, $1.00.

THIS WORK IS INTENDED ESPECIALLY FOR THE MARRIED, or those contemplating marriage, as it discloses important secrets which should be known to them particularly.

Here, every female—the wife, the mother—the one either budding into womanhood, or the one in the decline of years, in whom nature contemplates an important change—can discover the causes, symptoms, and the most efficient remedies and most certain mode of cure, in every complaint to which her sex is subject.

The revelations contained in its pages have proved a blessing to thousands, as the innumerable letters received by the author (which he is permitted by the writers to publish) will attest.

SICKLY AND UNHAPPY WIVES.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Dayton, O.

"DAYTON, May 1, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU—My Dear Sir: 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion,' for which I enclosed one dollar to your address, came safely to hand. I would not have troubled you with these few lines, but that I am impelled by a sense of gratitude, for myself and wife, to give utterance to our sincere and heartfelt emotions.

"My wife has been perceptibly sinking for some three years or more, in consequence of her great anguish and suffering some months before and during confinement; every successive one more and more debilitated and prostrated her, putting her life in imminent danger, and which was, on the last occasion, despaired of. I supposed that this state of things was inevitable, and resigned myself to meet the worst. At this time (now about two months) I heard your book highly spoken of, as containing some matters reaching my case. On its receipt and perusal, I can not express to you the relief it afforded my distressed mind and the joy its pages imparted to my wife, on learning that the great discovery of M. M. Desomeaux provided a remedy. It opened a prospect to me which I little conceived was possible. No pecuniary consideration can ever repay the obligations I am under to you for having been the means of imparting to us the matters contained in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' But for this, ere another year would have passed over my head, in all human probability my wife would have been in her grave, and my children left motherless."

Extract from a Letter.

Competence and Health.

"LANCASTER, PA., Oct. 24, 1847.

"MY DEAR SIR: I know you will have the kindness to bear with me in encroaching upon your time, while I acknowledge (in behalf of myself and wife) the obligations we feel ourselves under to you in having made known certain matters, contained in your most invaluable 'Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' It has been worth its weight in gold to me. If I express myself rather warmly, you will see that I can not do so too warmly, when I inform you of the extent to which I have, through it, been benefited. I will state my situation when I obtained your book through the merest curiosity I look upon it as one of the most fortunate events of my life. I had been married some ten years, and was the father of seven children. I was long struggling unceasingly, to the end that I might gain a moderate competency, but the results of my utmost exertions at the end left me about where I was at the beginning of each year; and that only, with the most stinted economy, sufficing with barely the necessaries of life. Finally, this constant effort was beginning to have its effect upon my health: I felt less capable to endure its continuance, while I felt the necessity of perseverance.

"This constant, unceasing struggle on my part was imperative, in consequence of the prostrated condition of my wife (with occasional intermission) for six years, much of the time confined to her bed, and of course incapable of taking the charge and management of household affairs. Her condition arose from causes of which I was ignorant. Oh! what would I have given had I the six years to live over again! What would my wife have given to have been spared the long days and still longer nights prostrate on a bed of sickness!—all of which would have been avoided, had I then seen a copy of 'THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION.'"

From a Physician.

DANGEROUS DELIVERIES,

OBSTRUCTIONS, IRREGULARITIES, &C.

How many are suffering from obstruction or irregularities peculiar to the female system, which undermine their health, the effects of which they are ignorant, and for which their delicacy forbids seeking medical advice! How many suffer from prolapsus uteri (falling of the womb), or from fluor-albus (weakness, debility, &c., &c)! How many are in constant agony for many months preceding confinement! How many have difficult if not dangerous deliveries, and whose lives are jeoparded during such time, will find in its pages the means of prevention, amelioration, and relief!

Extract from a Letter.

To those just Married.—"Had I known!"

"PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU: Had I known of the im portant matters treated of in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion' some years ago, how much misery I might have escaped! I have suffered years from causes which you point out in your book, without knowing what to do. I obtained a copy, and found my case treated of. I trust every female will avail herself of the information contained in its pages."

Letters are daily received of this character, unnecessary to present.

To those yet unmarried, but contemplating marriage, or perhaps hesitating as to the propriety of incurring the responsibilities attendant upon it, the importance of being possessed of the revelations contained in these pages, so intimately involving their future happiness, can not be appreciated.

It is, of course, impracticable to convey more fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage; neither is it necessary, since it is every one's duty to become possessed of knowledge whereby the sufferings to which a wife, a mother, or a sister, may be subject, can be obviated.

FOR FEMALES AND MALES

Dr. Lazetti's Juno Cordial, or Protective Elixir.

This is the only actual remedy ever discovered for impotency, Genital Debility, Nocturnal Emissions, and all diseases occasioned by certain secret habits; and many of the nostrums recently recommended for the same complaints are worthless imitations which its unrivalled excellence. fame and popularity have brought into the market. The Medical Faculty of Europe and the United States are unanimous in their recommendations of the Juno Cordial and have not given their sanction in a single instance that has been authenticated, to any compound for the same purposes. The nature of the maladies relieved by the Juno Cordial are generally such as to leave the publication of certificates of cures out of the question, or the proprietor could produce a host of the most conclusive testimony to show that the great reputation that it enjoys was not accidentally obtained, but is firmly based upon its positive, and apparently miraculous virtues. In all directions are to be found the happy pareuts of healthy offspring, who would not have been so, but for this extraordinary preparption. And it is equally potent in the many diseases for which it is recommended. Objection has been naturally made to the price of the Juno Cordial, because the trash that has been thrown into the market in opposition to it is sold cheaper; but the fact is, the Cerdial cannot be afforded for less, and ought to be much dearer, as many of the ingredients which compose it are among the costliest things in nature; whereas the others are made up of cheap drugs, worth but little in money, and less in merit. We assure the reader that the utmost reliance may be placed on the Juno Cordial in the cure of the maladies mentioned above, and also those that follow, viz: Loss of Muscular Energy, Physical Lassitude and General Prostration, Irritability, and all Nervous Affections, Indigestion, Sluggishness of the Liver, Gleet, Lucorrhoea or Whites, and Flour Albus and every disease in any way connected with the disorder of the Procreative Functions—in all of which it will afford almost immediate relief, and, if used as directed, is almost certain to produce a positive and permanent cure. Persons about to marry, if conscious of any weakness or disability of a certain nature, should take this Cordial, as it will infallibly restore health and vigor in a brief period, and where want of offspring is a cause of regret, if recourse be had to it the most beneficial results may be anticipated with confidence. It is of priceless value to those without offspring. It has taken the precedence in Italy and will in all other countries where it may become known.

It also possesses the unrivalled qualities of curing incipient Consumption, and I have administered it with great success to patients who have sought our delightful climate for the restoration of their health and the result is that a medicine has been added to the catalogue for the cure of insipient consumption.

To spread wide the blessings of this medicine, I have appointed Messrs. Judson & Co., of the City of New York, in the United States of America, my sole Agents for its sale; and none can be genuine unless it comes through them, and their signature is on the weapper.

☞ MR. JOHN S. TAYLOR, 153 NASSAU-STREET, NEW-YORK, has favored us with the "HISTORY OF THE PERSECUTIONS AND BATTLES OF THE WALDENSES by Rev. J. T. HEADLEY," from which we copy the following interesting account of

A MAN BUILT IN A WALL.

FLORENCE May, 1843.

The day I entered this city was one of the festive days of the church. Leaving Arezzo the previovs afternoon later than we ought we were compelled to stop for the night at a country inn entirely removed from any settlement and with no house in sight of it. It was growing dusk as we drove up, and the lonely inn, though not particularly inviting, seemed preferable to the uninhabited road that stretched away on the farther side. Everything was in primitive style; the stables were on the first floor, at the foot of the stairs leading to the second story, and the horses slept below while we slept above. As we went down we saw them standing by the manger, Just where the bar room should have been, quietly put away for the night.

Having obtained some honey, my invariable resort in wretched inns in Italy, I made my simple meal and strolled out into the moonlight to breathe the fresh air. On the hills, in the distance, a bonfire suddenly blazed up, before which dusky figures were rapidly passing and repassing. On inquiry, I found that it was kindled in honor of the approaching festivity, and the music and dancing would be in the peasant's cottage that night. I do not know why it is, but a mirthful scene in a strange country among the peasantry brings back the memory of home sooner than anything else. There is a freshness, a sincerity about it that reminds one of his childhood years and makes the heart sad. It was so with me that night. Everything was quiet as the moonlight on the hills, and the stillness of nature seemed filled with sad memories. I retired to my bed, but not to sleep; the busy brain and busier heart drove slumber away. At length there grew a sense of pleasure in my bosom, and I rose and opened the window and leaned out into the cool air for relief. All was quiet, within and without.—The stars were burning on in the deep heavens, and the moon was hanging her crescent far away over the hills. The distant bonfire burned low and feebly, for the revelers had left it. The heavy breathing of my companion, in the next room, spoke of oblivion and rest, while my own loud pulses told how little sleep would be mine that night. Memories came thronging back like forgotton music, and the sternness of the traveler melted away before the feelings of the child, the son and the early dreamer. As I stood, looking off on the sparkling light and deep shadows of the uneven surface before me, suddenly from out a grotto of trees, whose tops alone the moonbeams could find, came the clear voice of a nightingale. It was like the voice of a spirit to me—so strange and mysterious. Unconscious of any listener, it looked out from its thick curtain of leaves and sang on to the moon. Its wild warble was like the murmur in one's dreams, and the music seemed half repressed in its trembling throat. I listened as it rose and died away and rose again, till I felt that the sweet bird was singing in its happy dreams. How long I listened I know not, and what the strange fancies that spell bound me were I canot tell.

* * * * * * The morning came, and we started for Florence. While the driver was harnessing his team, I set off on foot and walked on for miles, while the quietness around was disturbed only by the mournful cry of the cuckoo. We at length entered upon the Val d' Arno, and wound along its beautiful banks. In the distance on the right, was the Vallambrosa, immortalized by Milton, and the convent in which he dwelt. The scenery changed with every turn of the river, yet it was ever from beautiful to beautiful.

At length we entered the little town of San Giovanni (St. John) and, after strolling over the Cathedral, sent for the woman who keeps the key of the door that shuts over the withered form of a man cased in the church wall of San Lorenzo

As the door swung open I recoiled a step in horror, for there stood, upright, a human skeleton, perfect in all its parts, stareing upon me with its dead eye-sockets No coffin inclosed it, no mason-work surrounded it, bnt among the naked jagged stones it stood erect and motionless.

This church had been built centuries ago, and had remained untouched till within a few years, when in making some repairs the workmen had occasion to pierce that wall, and struck upon this skeleton. They uncovered it, and the priests have let it stand unmolested. A narrow door has been made to swing over it, to protect it from injury and shield it from the eyes of those who worship in the church. The frame indicates a powerful man, and though it is but a skeleton, the whole attitude and aspect give one the impression of a death of agony. The arms are folded across the breast in forced resignation, the head is slightly bowed, and the shoulders elevated, as if in the effort to breathe, while the very face—bereft of muscle as it is—seemed full of suffering. An English physician was with me, and, inured to skeletons as he was, his countenance changed as he gazed on it. His eyes seemed riveted to it, and he made no reply to the repeated questions I put to him, but kept gazing, as if in a trance. It was not till after we left that he would speak of it, and then his voice was low and solemn, as if he himself had seen the living burial. Said he, "That man died by suffocation, and he was built up alive in that wall. In the first place it is evident it was a case of murder, for there are no grave-clothes, no coffin, and no mason-work around the body. The poor civility of a savage was not shown here, in knocking off the points of the stones, to give even the appearance of regularity to the inclosure. He was packed into the rough wall, and built over, beginning at the feet. It is extremely difficult to tell anything of the manner of death, whether painful or pleasant by any skelton, for the face always has the appearagce of suffering; but there are certain indications about this which show that the death was a painful one, and caused, doubtless, by suffocation. In the first place, the arms are not crossed gently and quietly in the descent composure of death, but far over as with a painful effort or by force. In the second place, the shoulders are elevated, as if the last, strong effort of the man was for breath In the third place, the bones of the toes are curled over the edge of the stone on which he stands, as if contracted in agony when life parted. And," continued the doctor, with true professional detail, "he died hard, for he was a powerful man. He was full six feet high, with broad chest and shoulders, and strongly limbed." I knew all this before, for I felt it. There was no mistaking the manner of that man's death. I could tell every step of the process. Doubtless there was originally some hanging or church furniture in this part of the church, to conceal the displacement of the wall. In a dark night the unfortunate man was entrapped, bound, and brought into this temple, where he first could be tortured to death, and then the crime concealed. Men of rank were engaged in it, for none other could have got the control of a church, and none but a distinguished victim could have caused such great precaution in the murderers. By the dim light of lamps, whose rays scarcely reached the lofty ceiling, the stones were removed before the eyes of the doomed man, and measurement taken, to see if the aperture were sufficiently large. A bound and helpless victim, he lay on the cold pavement, with the high altar and cross before him, but no priest to shrive him. Stifling in pride the emotions that checked his very sighs, he strung every nerve for the slow death he must meet. At length the opening was declared large enough, and he was lifted into it. The workman began at the feet, and with his mortar and trowel built up with the same carelessness he would exhibit in filling any broken wall. The successsul enemy stood leaning on his sword—a smile of scorn and revenge on his features—and watched the face of the man he hated, but no longer feared. Ah, it was a wild effort that undertook to return glance for glance and scorn for scorn, when one was the conquered and helpless victim and the other the proud and victorous foe! It was slow work fitting the pieces nicely, so as to close up the aperture with precision. The tinkling of the trowel on the edges of the stones, as it broke off here and there a particle to make them match, was like the blow of a hammer on the excited nerves of the half-buried wretch. At length the solid wall rose over his chest repressing its effort to lift with the breath, when a stifled groan for the first time escaped the sufferer's lips, and a shudder ran through his frame that threatened to shake the solid mass which inclosed it to pieces. Yet up went the mason work till it reached the mouth, and the fragment was jammed into the teeth and fastened there with mortar—and still rose, till nothing but the pale, white forehead was visible in the opening. With care and precision the last stone was fitted in the narrow space—the trowel passed smoothly over it—a stifled groan, as if from the centre of a rock, broke the stillness—one strong shiver and all was over. The agony had passed, revenge was satisfied, and a secret locked up for the great revelation day. Years rolled by; one after another of the murderers dropped into his grave, and the memory of the missiug man passed from the earth. Years will still roll by, till this strong frame shall step out from its narrow inclosure upon the marble pavemevi, a living man.

Absorbed in the reflections such a sight naturally awakens, I rode on, for a long time unconscious of the scenery around me, and of the murmur of the Arno on its way through the valley. But other objects at length crowded off the shadow on the spirit; the day wore away, and at last, after ascending a long and weary mountain, Florence, with its glorious dome, and the whole vale of the Arno, rich as a garden, lay below us. Past smiling peasants, and vlne-covered walls, we trotted down into the valley and entered the city.

Powerful Reasoning.

At a young man's debating society somewhere in Indiana, the question, was—"which is the greatest evil, a scolding wife or a smokey chimney? After the appointed disputants had coucluded the debate, a spectator rose and begged the privileges of "making a few remarks on the occasion." Permission being granted, he delivered himself in this way—"Mr. President, I've been almost mad a-listing to the debate of these ere youngster's. They don't know nothing at all about the evils of a scolding wife? Wait till they have had one for twenty years, and been hammered, and jammed and slammed all the while—and wait till they've been scolded because the baby cried, because the fire wouldn't burn, because the oven was too hot, because the cow kicked over the milk because it rained, because the sun shined, because the hens didn't lay, because the old cat had kittens, because they came too soon for dinner, because they were one minute too late, because they tore their trowsers, because they invited a neighbor woman to call again, because they got sick, or because they did anything else, no matter whether they couldn't help it or not, before they talk about the evils of a scolding wife; why, Mr. President, I'd rather hear the clatter of hammers and stones, and twenty tinpans and nine bras kettles, than the din, din, din of the tongue of a scolding wife. Yes sir-ee, I would. To my mind, Mr. President a smokey chimney is no more to be compared to a scolding wife than a little negro is to a dark night

Montgomery Prize ham.

Mr. Nathan white, of Montgomery county, Maryland, gives the following as the recipe by which the prize ham at the late Fair was cured:

"The pork should be perfectly cold before being cut up. The hams should be salted with bloom salt with a portion of red pepper, and about a gill of molasses to each ham. Let them remain in salt five weeks; then hang them up, and smoke with hickory wood for five or six weeks. About the first of april take them down, and wet them with cold water, and let them be well rubbed with unleached ashes. Let them remain in bulk for several days, and then hang them in the loft again for use."—Sci. American.

"I am afraid I shall come to want," said an old lady to a young gentlemen.

"I have come to want already," was the reply, "I want your daughter!"

The old lady opened her eyes.

"More tronble coming," said Mrs. Partington, laying down the paper, "there's the State of Affairs: I suppose it 'll soon be applying for admission into the Union,' and the old lady resumed her darning with a look of patriotic anxioty.

"O! WHAT A BUSTLE!"

"It was a curious age, wasn't it, that bustle age which we had a year or two since, when the majority of the women in our cities came to the conclusion that God in his wisdom did not make them right, and that they would go to work and remodel themselves, filling up all deficiencies by their own skill?"

"Yes, it was, indeed"

"Well, since you have agreed with me, I'll tell you a yarn about one of them fixens called bustles, which I chanced to behold. One evening in the height of the re-modelling season, I received an invitation to attend a social party to be given at a friend's, and of course I went. Upon arriving there I found about twenty couple already assembled, and the lady portion of them were fixed up some.

For an hour or two things didn't go off well; the company seemed to prefer sitting and staring to any other amusement, and that everybody knows is very dull play for a social party. It had been my misfortune to be seated along side of a girl about sixteen, who certainly wore the most enormous bustle that I ever saw, and I have seen some whoppers in my day. The young lady's conscience doubtless troubled her about it, for as she caught me glancing towards her once or twice, she nitched a little, and looked back daggers. I was most unpleasantly situated, and refrained from looking at her, entering into conversation with my right hand partner, who was a vivacious and lively tempered woman.

Things went on thus for some time, when a sudden exclamation caused all hads to jump up, and two-thirds of them made for a window, as a row was going on in the street. Unfortunately for me I had forgotten my companion, who had risen to her feet and I exclaimed, loud enough to be heard by all—"O what a bustle!"

Merciful heavens! I had better been somewhere else. The young lady turned on me, and with a face as red as blood, fairly shrieked:

"I think it's a pity a lady can't wear what she pleases, without being insulted about it."

I was thunderstruck. I had reference to the sudden rising of the company, but how had it been taken. I must apologize.

"Madam, I beg your pardon"—but she interrupted me.

"You shan't have it; you're no gentleman."

"But I meant the company."

"No you didn't you meant me!" and she threw herself crying into her sister's arms.

Just then I saw her big brother coming towards me from the other side of the room, and I hastily asked my friend for my hat. He tosk me into another room gave it to me, and I sloped, fully resolved never to say "bustle" again before a lady, so long as I love.

A HONEY MOON SCENE.

A correspondent thus describes a scene that took place at Saratoga, a short time since, between a newly married couple who were spending the honey moon.

A bridal party came down a few days since; I never saw a more honey-moonish looking set in my life. The bride and groom looked, walked, and acted love to the life. A more devoted couple you never beheld. They were sitting in the parlor one morning, when I accidentally heard the husband say, with a melting tenderness of voice and manner.

"Did you speak, dearest?"

"No, pet, I did not—I was thinking," replied the bride, looking as angelic as possible.

"Of what was you thinking, my love?"

"I hardly dare tell you, my pet."

"What, loveliest of your sex, distrust your adorer so soon?"

"Pardon a thousand pardons, dear Edgar, if I have even seemed to wrong so noble a being."

"Spoken like your own true self—like a fond and dearly loved wife."

"Oh, Edgar! Edgar! you are a flatterer; I know you are. Oh, you naughty man! You know how dear you are to me."

"You will tell me, then; good angel that you are—you will tell me."

"I will—but first give me assuarance that you will not frown on your too fond Rebecca. A frown, Edgar—nay, even a reproving look from your sweet eyes, would break my now too happy heart. Say, then, you will not frown."

"Foolish child! Do the stars frown when the poet looks up to them for inspiration? Does the fond mother from when her first born looks up to her eyes as he nestles still closer to her bosom? Does love, fond true love ever frown?"

"Foolish child! Do the stars frown when the poet looks up to them for inspiration? Does the fond mother frown when her first born looks up to her eyes as he nestles still closer to her bosom? Does love fond, true love ever frown?"

"Oh, say no more, dear, dear, dear Edgar; I feel, I know you are the best, the kindest, the most devoted of men!"

"Tell me then, love, of what you were thinking?"

"Of you, only of you, Edgar, on my troth."

"And what of me, my own Rebecca?"

"Alas! What shall I say? How shall I extricate myself from this perilous dilemma?"

"Speak, love d one, I charge you!"

"Dear Edgar, you know—"

"Yes, sweet Rebecca—"

"That—oh, how shall I say it?"

"Any how—go on—dear Rebec—"

"That if you continue—"

"Yes—continue—"

"To eat—cabbage—"

"Cabbage!"

"Cabbage—what then?"

"You may catch the cholera, (sobbing) and (sob) and (sob) I may (sob) be left (sob) a widow (sob) before (sob) the season (hysterical sob) is over."

I didn't I couldn't wait to hear any more of this conversation, I do wonder if all "just married" folks go on after this fashion.

☞ A lad who borrowed a dictionary to read, returned it after he got through, with the remark that, "It was werry nice readin', but it somehow changed the subject werry often." It was his sister who thought the first ice cream she tasted was "a leetle touched with frost."

The Fugitive Slave Law.

If there ever was a tyranical law passed or act performed by the British government under king George the III; if there ever was one measure of that or any other government more subversive of the rights of mankind than another, that act or that law is the Fugitive Slave law of these United States! Yes, it is left for Party or the ambition of party chieftains to strike the blow that shall crush the last hopes of the down-trodden, and enshackle the limbs of unborn millions. Yes, cursed ambition—parties must be aggrandised, and party rulers must aggrandise themselves though the last vestige of freedom was struck to the earth. This law entirely subverts the principles upon which our government is founded—makes a mockery of republicanism and the Declaration of Independence, and reflects the most withering contempt on those patriotic men who signed it and upon those who died in its defense. It should receive the everlarting contempt of every son of Liberty.

Our forefathers declared that all men are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; among which are Life and Liberty, and protection to the enjoyment of that Liberty while in the pursuit of happiness. The self-evident axiom follows in their declaration, that whenever any government fails to protect these rights it is unworthy a moments consideration, that it is our duty as it is our right to alter or abolish it. What becomes of the protection of Liberty under this law—of the inalienable rights of our fellow man? Does power alone make right? Suppose those who are now more greatly oppressed than ever were our forefathers, suppose they should make a Declaration of Independence, declaring all men free, and were able to maintain it—subjecting their masters and all that pertains to him unto them as slaves, would this be right? No, of course not, might cannot make right; Liberty is the inalienable gift of GOD to man; no power on earth possesses the right to deprive him of it; no true republican, nonebut tyrants can defend Slavery

To achieve and sustain these rights and to establish them on a firm and enduring basis our fore-fathers braved the horrors of a seven years war, with the gallows of their tyrannical master, should they fail in their attempt, staring them in the face. Unworthy sons of Liberty loving sires, is it indeed possible that we have become so degraded—such mean and abject slaves of party, that we dare with sacreligious hands base and impious hearts trample in the dust the principles which our fathers have taught us—that we dare so far forget the sacred name of Liberty as to chase, and catch, and shackle, and send back into Slavery our fellow man—that we dare set at naught his God given and inalienable rights? Was it for this our forefathers braved death in a thousand forms—in the scorching summer's sun and the winter's piercing blast? Was it for this they braved the inclemencies of a rigorous winter at Valley Forge, or trod the frozen ground in their arduous marches with their naked feet? Was it for this the battles of Trenton and Monmouth, and Princeton and Lexington and Bunkerhill were fought? Was it for this their towns were burned, their farms laid waste, their wives and daughters and little ones were insulted and slain, through seven long and desolating years of war? God forbid. We feel that this is to be the instrument to arouse the people to an assertion of their rights—that now they will not be satisfied alone with its repeal, that they will demand concessions to be made on this subject worthy the manes of those who fought and died that we, that mankind might be free—worthy the cause they so nobly set forth and so gloriously maintained. This rich inheritance, this day star of hope to the oppressed is bequeathed to us; it is their expectation, it was the expectation of those who made the sacrifice to obtain it, and it is a holy duty now we know and enjoy its blessings, that we should defend and transmit it unimpaired to our children and our children's children forever. May it not be too late; may we not wait until the God of Heaven, being called upon by the oppressed, takes their cause into his hands—fearful will be the retribution on this government—upon those who would trifle with the God endowed rights of his fellow man.

Great God what a sight!—men who profess the principles of republicanism—the spirit of the meek and lowly Jesus, who taught us to love one another, to do unto others as we would that they should do unto us—who profess that thou hast endowed his fellow man with equal and inalienable rights, yet pursuing, catching, binding, and delivering him from freedom back into Slavery! The Constitution of the United States, claiming par excellence to be the guardian protector and defendor of the oppressed—the day star of hope—the only ray of freedom on earth—compelling men into Slavery! The spirit of the mighty dead—the immortal signers of the Declaration of Independence and the holy martyrs to the cause of Liberty by whom it was sustained, defend us—imbue us with thy spirit that we may annihilate this monster which would subvert the foundations of that glorious fabric which the energies of your mighty minds erected.

☞ "THE POWER OF BEAUTY," by Rev. J. T. Headly. Published by John S. Taylor 143 Nassau st N. Y. This is a neat volume containing biographical sketches of Esther, Ruth, and Alfieri, with portraits, closing with sonnets to Beauty, all in the most felicitious style of the author; a correct vignette likeness of Jenny Lind, encircled by a wreath of flowers graces the title page Of course all who have read the authors unrivalled sketches, the "Marshalls of Napoleon," will wish to know what he may say on the "Power of Beauty."

☞ Those who intend going to New York City to purchase Dry Goods of any description, would do well to call at D. CROCHERON's 209 Greenwich-st. His store is celebrated for keeping good goods, a large stock, and at very low prices. Read his advertisement.

☞ The attention of dealers in Liquors, Teas and Segars is called to the advertisment of Messrs. Wells & Benschoten, in another column. They have as good an assortment as can be found in the city, which they will guarantee to sell as low as they can be had elsewhere. Those wishing to purchase will do well to give them a call.

☞ Pier No. 8, foot of rector st., N. Y., broke down on Saturday, with the weight of 150 tons of iron, which with other property was precipitated into the water. Several men and also a horse and cart were thrown into the water, but all escaped with their lives. A large quantity of iron and also a lot of tin in boxes was lost.

Dr. Fort's Position.

We are indebted to the Camden Democrat for the following outline of the remarks of Dr. FORT, before the Democratic Convention of the First District. His views are plainly expounded, and show conclusively that he is in no manner connected with the great monopoly, as the Whigs would fain have us believe; but are a plain exposition of the principles of trne democracy, of which he is alone the standard bearer in New Jersey; the Whig leaders and their organs, being divided, some being in favor of while others oppose these principles, they dare not avow them nor permit their candidate to commit himself in their favor; as having the power they have repeatedly repudiated them–hence the people are called upon to support a candidate without knowing his principles; We trust the following is perfectly satisfactory to the great body of the people, and that they will triumphantly sustain him by whom they are boldly and unequivocally avowed:

In an eloquent and impressive manner he said—"Mr. President and gentlemen of the Democratic Convention of the First District: I thank you cordially for the kind manifestations of regard toward, me as expressed in the resoluton you have just pased. Since I have been among you I have been gratified not only with the friendly feelings you have evinced in regard to my nomination, but with the unity of feeling and harmory which pervades the entire Democracy of this District. This, Mr. President, augurs well for our success in the coming contest. If we are united we must succeed; yes, sir,—"union is success." It is not my election, as an individual, for which you are contending; that matter is of secondary moment com pared with the triumph of our cause, which we all believe will promote the interests of our country and state. I subscribe, sir, to the platform of the Democratic State Convention. The principles there set forth are my principles. By them I am willing to stand or fall. Our banner, Mr. President, is unfurled, and our principles are inscribed upon it; they can be read and known of all men. I embrace this occasion to say that I am in favor of equal rights, equal laws, equal Taxation, the abolition of Freehold Qualification. I am opposed to SPECIAL PRIVILEGES and MONOPOLIES of all kinds; I have ever been so, and in favor of a well regulated system of education, of FREE SCHOOLS, and nothing would gratify me more whether in or out of office, than to see a well digested plan put into operation by which the blessings of education could be extended freely to every child in New Jersey. Reforms in legislation are greatly needed, and so far as my influence extends it shall ever be exerted to secure the triumph of the principles we advocate, and for the enactment of such laws as will produce "the greatest good to the greatest number."

I embrace this occacion to correct a report which has been circulated representing that I am a monopoly man, and connected in some way with the Camden and Amboy Railroad Company. Mr. President I am not only not a Director nor Stockholder in that Company, but never owned a dollar of stock in any Company. I have no connection with them whatever, am not under their influence, and havo no understanding with them. Towards these companies, towards all men, I occupy an Independent poaition, and shall continue to do so My intention is, and ever has been, so far as in me lieth, to do justice to all men.

If any person is not satisfied, I am prepared publicly or privately to reply to any questions which may be propounded in regard to my views on any question of state policy, or my position in relation to any matter of a public nature."

☞ The Plainfield Gazette says that the democracy demand the restriction of the hours of labor. Will the Gazette explain to us why it was that when many of the Whig members of the Assembly were in favor of that restriction, the democracy, headed by their leader, Jonathan Pickel, moved to postpone the bill till the next legislature, and by throwing almost their whole vote in favor of the motion, effected the defeat of the bill?—State Gazette.

We find the above in the Huterdon Gazette.—On reference to the vote on the above question as it passed the House, we find that there were Ayes—Democrats 21, Whigs 17; Nays—Democrats 0, Whigs 13! The bill was laid over by the Senate, whose vote we have not on hand, but having a whig majority proves they were not in favor of it. So much for the "many Whig members of the Assembly" being in its favor. But it is evident that the Editor of the State Gazette did not wish an answer or he would have sent us a paper containing the query, knowing that we had not the honor of an exchange. Like others of his class he prefers the policy of the assassin to an honorable exposition of the truth. The article from which the above extract of ours was taken was a plain exposition of the principles of the two parties, showing conclusively by their acts that the Whig party in New Jersey are opposed to reform—prefering special laws securing monopoly privileges to general laws securing equal rights. Being unable to refute this position which their acts so plainly portray to the people, they endeavor to evade it by all sorts of pretexts and subterfuge—now refering us to what they have done in other States, and anon of the general government, not daring to meet the issue that is directly before and immediately concerns the people of New Jersey, knowing that by their acts they stand condemned.

When those journals who have cavalierly and evasively noticed our remarks shall have met the issue therein set forth, by an argument worthy the importance of the subject, then we will satisfactorily answer their interrogatories—provided they do not like the Gazette, prefer a stab in the dark.

ELECTIONS.—The following list exhibits the elections to come off the present year in the States mentioned, and the political character of the present Congressional delegations:

PHILADELPHIA, October 13.

The post office pouches were stolen last night, all made up in Now-York yesterday afternoon; one for Wheeling, suposed to contain all letters from that place to St. Louis and intermediate points; one to Richmond, Va. and one to Wilmington, N. C.—The postmaster has recovered about a bushel of opened letters and several checks and drafts

All the leeters containing money were carried off. It is not known how the bags were stolen from the mail car, nor is there any clue to the thieves The robberry took place between the depet and Gray's ferry. The mail agent is much ceusured. The amount of money taken is variously estimated at from $20,000 to $100,000.

Whig Reformers.

☞ The Elizabethtown Journal (Whig) in noticing a late primary meeting held in that Whig stronghold, says:

"We looked in and saw eight persons, including the one having charge of the room, and this was the whole number presesent at any time during the evening. The meeting (!) was organized by the appointment of Mr Elias Darby as chairman, and John R. Crane, Esq., Secretary, and when we saw them, they were gravely balloting for delegates to the Hackensack Convention. Of course, none of the progressive young Whigs who faver a reform in the school system, the abolition of the property qualification, a revision of the exemption law, the equalization, of taxxs, &c. &c., had any part or lot in the matter."

Of course not. The action of the late Whig Convention has disgusted the reform Whigs. They had been led to believe, by the palaver of such whig journals, as the one above mentioned, the Jersey City Telegraph, and some others, that the Whig party were ready to adopt refor measures, as their cardinal principales. Apparently, these journals were so sincere in their advocacy of the working man's rights, that they felt it could but produce a sensible effect upon the Whig Convention. But alas! they have depended in the hour of trial, upon a broken reed. The Whig Convention met and adjourned, without a murmur of hope, or a whisper of encouragement, to the reform Whigs.

Can the reformers support John Runk, the nominee of the Convention? If they are men of principle, as they profes, they cannot. Tney have not the least assurance, that he favors the doctrines and measures they advocate. They stultify themselves, by voting for a man whose principles are not only unknown, but who dare not openly avow himself, either for or against these measures. If this desire for School Reform, Equalization of Taxes, a Homestead Exemption Law, and Abolition of Property Qualification, is anything more than skin deep, it can be easily proven this fall. If Dr Fort and the Democracy dre defeated, then are all these measures defeated also. There is no chance of avoiding these questions. They are placed, plainly, and squarely before the people. The Whig party remain non commital on these doctrines, and no matter how many private pledges Whig candidates may give, they can, with equal facility, as heretofore, be repudiated. It matters not what party a man belongs to, if he truly desires the success of these great measures, he must vote, this time at least, with the Democratic party. Turn and twist the matter over as you please, this is the dilema, in which all reform Whigs find themselves Come out then, and act independently, for once in your lives You know these measures are for the good of the State You know that they are just, equal, and beneficial Do not then, allow the ties of party, to force you to vote against your better judgment! You profess to love and venture these principles. Prove your affection, by voting for the the men the Democracy present you,—men, who are unequivocally and openly, pledged to support and maintain them—men who you know will carry them into effect.

Have you not been deceived and betrayed, by the Whig party, often enough? Did not the Democratic party to a man, in the last and previous Legislatures, stand upon your platform? How many whigs did you then find, to support your theories? Did not almost all the Whig legislators, then and there, prove recreant to their private pledges, by means of which they had secured an election? Did they not spurn your petitions with contempt? Did they not ridicule you, and call you agrarians, and charge you with desiring to upheave the foundations of society?

Who sympathized with you, and aided you with all their efforts, but the united Democratic phalanx? How can you then remain longer, supporters of the Whig party? We appeal to you as honest men, who earnestly and truly desire the accomplishment of the measures of right and justice, to forget party in the coming contest, and vote for principles—vote in such manner, as your consciences shall approve to the latest hour of your lives!—Rahway Republican.

New Jersey National Reform State Convention.

This body, comprising some fifty delegates from different sections of the State, assembled at the room No. 142 Market street, in Newark, Thursday afternoon, when they were called to order by I. B. Bannister, of Newark, and organized by the appointment of AARON DOUGLASS, of Passaic President; J. B Robison, of Monmouth, and William Rowe, of Hudson, Vice Presidents, and D. H. Tichenor of Essex, Secretary.

On motion of Mr. G. H. Evans, Monmouth, they proceeded to nominate a candidate for Governor, pledged to carry out the Land Reform principles, and on the first ballot, Moses Jaques, of Rahway, was unanimously chosen, with the understanding that he shall be withdrawn if the other candidates will pledge themselvas in favor of their principles.

Resolutions were adopted urgeing "the emancipation of labor from capital," the abolition of Land Monopoly, &c, and reccommending withholding from any party that does not adopt these doctrines.

The Convention unanimously nominated ISAAC P. WALKER, U. S. Senator from Wisconsin., as their candidate for President.

Workings of the Fugitive Slave Law.

DETROIT, (Mich) Oct 12.

The excitement caused by the confinement in jail of an alleged fugitive from the South continues The Jail is strongly guarded by the Military, in case an an attempt should be made to rescue the negro, whose trial is abuut to take place under the new law.

Three hundred negroes have crossed over to Sandwich, C. W. opposite Detroit, who are just as anxious to hear the result of the trial, as the people of Detroit have always been notorious for helping off the runaways.

The house of the man who informed of the negroes was attacked last night, and guns and pistols fired by both the assailants and assailed, and some blood shed.

The friends of Freedom, without distinction of party have held a large meeting, remonstrating against the infamous Reclamation Bill, and calling for its nullification, over which Mayor Ladue, the Chief Magistrate of the city, presided, who also addressed the meeting, together with Hon. Kinsley S. Bingham, M. C. James F. Joy and H. H. Emmons, eminent members of the legal profession.

In case the fugitive is not liberated, a subscription has been raised sufficient to purchase his liberty should an attempt be made to take him back—Trouble is anticipated when the negro is taken from the jail to be tried. He is now awiting his papers.

☞ CENSUS OF NEWARK,—The Assistant Marshals for taking the census of this city, have just completed their work, and the results shows that our population is 38,882 In 1840, it was 17,290, and in 1830, 10,995; an increase in 10 years of 21,592 or 125 per cent. It will also be observed, that our population has nearly quadrupled in 20 years:—Daily Advertiser

TRY ONE—YES, TRY BOTH.

SOMETHING NEW!

THE Subscriber would say to his friends and customers that he has the sole agency for the sale of Crane's Patent Compound Wash Mixture, for Plainfield, also for the North American Electric Washing Fluid, both great labor saving articles in washing, warranted not to injure clothing, and fully to answer the purpose represented. Money will be refunded to those using this fluid and finding it not to answer the purpose intended. All that is needed to recommend the above article is a trial; those who have tested them approve them much. Try one—yes, try both.

Just as I finished writing the above and raised my eyes, I see lying on my shelves and counters, some new and elegant plain and figured DeLaines, Silk and worsted and Silk and Cotton Poplins, of various shades, and some splendid Wool Shawls, to which the attention of the ladies is most respectfully requested. MECHANICNL MEDICINE.

Dr. Bandin, formerly of this city, asks to announce that he has returned to 341 Broadway; for consultation and management of weakneses of the vocal, pulmonary, digestive, nervous, spinal and female systems; and also of the drooping, languor and physical deformities, which are so destructive of both health and beauty at the present day.

As these and kindred maladies are usually the result of a violation of the laws of physical organization, he will treat them chiefly by those exercises, mechanical appliances and reformatory habits of body, in conjunction with hydropathy galvanism and other discoveries of the day, which, united with the cooperative efforts of the subject, are calculated to relieve and restore the energies of the suffering and neglected organs.

Having spent several years in traveling for investigation and practical experiment on the subject, he has, at length, greatly improved and multiplied his surgical and mechanical appliances for the purpose. In addition to his new supports for female and spinal weaknesses, are some combining the properties of a universal hernial truss and an effective general support, with which he challenges cases of general debility, constipation, piles and prolapsus, ani, leucorrhea, prolapsus uteri and every variety of hernia.

The distinctive peculiarity of these devices is, that they do not weaken or restrain the motions or growth of the suffering parts, but act imitatively and concordantly with the mathematical genius of the body's forces. Hence, by a most comfortable and gentle pressure, they at once give great support and render the oppressed system eligible to its own restoration

Feeble invalids coming from a distance will command prompt and faithful attention.

For more definite information, see his revised edition of "Animal Mechanics," and also his circular, which will be sent gratuitously when requested.

His improved body-braces, spinal supports and supporter trusses applied at his office (341 Broadway) and to be had wholesale and retail. City and country physicians and druggists are invited to call and examine Office hours from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. [121

HERNIA.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.—This disorder, of very frequennt occurrence, may be considered as arising through weakness of the abdominal walls, inducing an enlargement in the natural openings formed therein for the transmission of blood and other vessels; such openings being enlarged, permit the escape of bowels or other viscera of the abdomen, devolving hernial swellings or rupture, which most generally occur outwardly, as at the navel, groins and thighs.

The complaint is likely to happen at birth, and therefore should be carefully looked for by those having the charge of children, that it may be arrested and cured promptly. It also occurs at any period of life, to either sex, without regard to the condition or mode of living, and when found, should be attended to without delay—the final penalty being death, and that may be induced through strangulation at any momennt.

RUPTURES, are always to be treated with the surgical instruments known as Trusses and Supporters, and these require to be skillfully applied. With this view, the HULL'S TRUSS OFFICE, now established some thirty years, has under the various managers, presented to the public both male and female attendants to apply its instruments directly to the persons, which is preferable in all cases, and has also made improvement at different times, showing that advancement which study and practice only yield toward the relief of this malady.

With much pleasure the fact is now published, that recent improvements BUTLER'S TRUSS PADS have been made, and sufficiently tested upon numerous cases to warrant, through the cures already affected, their submission to the public, as being in adaptation and efficiency superior to any heretofore made known.

These improvements, recently patented, are now being applied at this office, 4 Vesey street, in cases of rupture, gravitation of the bowels, prolapsus uteri, prolapsus ani and piles.

The public may rely upon that care being made in their application, which will most likely tend to the final cure of the several complaints.

Hull's Truss Office, 4 Vesey street, Astor House, opposite St. Paul's Church, New-York.

FRED'K M BUTLER, Proprietor.

N. B.—The ladies' department is attended by a female qualified to fit the instruments, having so attended this office for many years.

Children trussed when only two weeks old, and invariably cured. [145is.

GREAT.

SPRING & SUMMER MEDICINE.

BRISTOL'S COMPOUND EXTRACT OF SARSAPRILLA. The value of this great American Specific for all diseases and disorders generated by impure blood, is universally known and appreciated.

TWENTY-FIVE PHYSICIANS,

among the most eminent in this country, have recently signed and caused to be published, a document certifying that BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA was the best preparation of the kind in existence, and that they

USED IT DAILY IN THEIR PRACTICE,

with the happiest effects. Remember that for

MORE THAN TWENTY YEARS

it has been before the public, performing in that time

MILLIONS OF CURES!

During that period multitudes of Sarsaprilla, so called, have been palmed upon the public, but no other has

STOOD THE TEST OF TIME!

Every year has added thousands upon thousands of bottles to its sales, its cures, and the

IMMENSE MASS OF CERTIFICATES

Which, if printed and bound would form a library of themselves! The victim of

HEREDITARY SCROFULA

with suppurating glands, honey-combed flesh, and caries eating into his bones, finds in BRISTOL'S SARSAPRILLA a balm for his afflictions. His horrible torments are assuaged and his malady not only relieved, but,

PERMANENTLY CURED!

It may be safely asserted from the results of nearly a quarter of a century's experience, that

BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA,

is beyond all comparison the

MOST WONDERFUL REMEDY ON EARTH

for the following diseases and all others proceeding from.

VITIATED BLOOD.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, Rheumatism, Obstinate Cutaneous Eruptions, Pimples or Pustules on the Face, Blotches, Boils, Chronic Sore Eyes, Ring Worm or Tetter, Scald Head, Enlargement and Pains of the Bones and Joints, Stubborn Ulcers, Syphilitic Symptoms, Sciata or Lumbago, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury.

Acites, or Dropsy

Exposure, or

Imprudence in Life, Liver Complaint, Ague and Fever, Intermitting Fever, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Plethora of Blood in the Head, Piles, Pains in the Back, Side, Breast or Loins, and all forms of Muscular, Glandular, and Skin Diseases.

It is also a sovereign specific for General Debility and the best renovator of a broken constitution. It braces and reinvigorates every organ, promotes activivity and regularity in every function, and produces that condition of the whole physical system which is the best security for ☞ LONG LIFE!

Let all who wish to purge the blood from the impurities contracted from the free indulgence of the appetite during the winter, and to prepare the system to

RESIST SUMMER EPIDEMICS,

Resort now to

BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA

the gentle aperient, the powerful tonic, the unrivalled antiseptic, and great builder up and

FORTIFIER OF THE SYSTEM!

The record which has been kept since the introduction of Bristol's Sarsaparilla, twenty odd years ago, exhibits an aggregate of known cures which established its invaluable properties. Among the recorded facts are the following, in round tumbers:

Cured of Summer Complaints, 10,000.

100,000 Cured of Scrofula.

Cured of Rheumatism, 58,000

150,000 Cured of Diseases of the Skin.

Cured of Liver Complaints, 35,000.

27,000 Cured of Diarrhœa and Dysentery.

There is not space in an advertisement for a full enumeration, but the cures amount to

A GRAND TOTAL OF ONE MILLION.

The public faith in it has never wavered—never can waver! for it is founded on experience, just as their want of faith in other spurious compounds is also founded in experience. They

FLY FROM MINERAL NOSTRUMS

to seek hope, life, and vigor from this

PURELY VEGETABLE REMEDY.

And are Never Disappointed!

Therefore, however broken in health and spirits, however loathsome to himself and others, let no man despair of recovery. Let the patient only understand that Bristol's Sarsaparilla is an infallible remedy for only persuade him for his own life's sake to try it, and those who know what it has acomplished will have no hesitation in predicting his speedy rostoration to health.

A LEGION OF DISEASES,

As a means of regulating all the functions of

WOMAN'S DELICATE ORGANIZATION

it has no equal in the materia medica, and at that critical period of life, when the first stage of her decline commences, its cordial and invigorating properties will enable her to

PASS THE CRISIS SAFELY.

READ, AND SATISFY YOURSELVES:

Read the following from an eminent Physician:

The undersigned being acquainted with some of the ingredints of HUTCHINGS' VEGETABLE DYSPEPSIA BITTERS, and having used it for some time in his practice with every desired effect, here commends this medicine from the certainty of its effect and gives it a preference over all preparations in medicine for that distressing complaint, Dyspepsia.

T. HARDENBERGH, M. D., No. 1 Beach street N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half; during a greater portion of this time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself until he was recommended to try HUTCHINGS' DYSPEPSIA BITTERS: he very soon derived a benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of HUTCHINGS' BITTERS for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine. L B. WYMAN. 23 Burling Slip.

New York, September 3. 1849.

The following certificate is from M. B. Brady, the celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness. I was advised to take Hutching's Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease, and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia.

M. B. BRADY, No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

The proprietor of this med cine has received many other certificates of cures, equally remarkable, of the various diseases for which this preparation is applicable; but the above are deemed necessary to satisfy any unprejudiced mind of its value and superiority above all other preparations.

CHERRY PECTORAL:

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, ASTHMA, WHOOPING-COUGH AND CONSUMPTION.

The uniform success which has attended the use of this preparation—its salutary effect—its power to relieve and cure affections of the Lungs, have gained for it a celebrity equalled by no other medicine. We offer it to the afflicted with entire confidence in its virtues, and the full belief that it will subdue and remove the severest attacks of disease upon the throat and Lungs. These results, as they become publicly known, very naturally attract the attention of medical men and philanthropists everywhere.—What is their opinion of CHERRY PECTORAL may be seen in the following:—

VALENTINE MOTT, M. D.,

Prof. Surgery Med. College, New York, says:—

"It gives me pleasure to certify the value and efficacy of Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL, which I consider peculiarly adapted to cure diseases of the Throat and Lungs."

THE RT. REV. LORD BISHOP FIELD

writes in a letter to his friend, who was fast sinking under an affection of the Lungs:—"Try the CHERRY PECTORAL and if any medicine can give you relief, with the blessing of God that will."

CPIEF JUSTICE EUSTIS,

of Louisiana, writes "That a young daughter of his was cured of several severe attacks of Croup by the "CHERRY PECTORAL."

ASTHMA AND BRONCHITIS.

The Canadian Journal of Medical Science states, "That Asthma and Bronchitis so prevalent in this inclement climate, has yielded with surprising rapidity to Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL, and we cannot too strongly recommend this skilful preparation to the Profession and public generally."

Let the relieved sufierer speak for himself:—

HARTFORD, Jan. 26. 1847.

Dr. J. C. Ayer—Dear Sir:—Having been rescued from a painful and dangerous disease by your medicine, gratitude prompts me to send you this acknowledgment, not only in justice to you, but for the information of others in like affliction.

A slight cold upon the lungs, neglected at first became so severe that spitting of blood, a violent cough and profuse night sweats followed and fastened upon me. I became emaciated, could not sleep, was distressed by my cough, and a pain through my chest, and in short had all the alarming symptoms of quick consumption. No medicine seemed at all to reach my case, until I providentially tried your CHERRY PECTORAL, which soon relieved and now has cured me.

Yours with respect. E. A. STEWART.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 17, 1848

Dr. Ayer, Lowell—Dear Sir:—I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form; so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breath on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my Physician prescribed, as an experiment, your CHERRY PECTORAL.

At first it seemed to make me worse, but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

BLAKE'S PATENT

FIRE PROOF PAINT.

THE original and only genuine article, that can be obtained, without subjecting the purchaser to a prosecution for an infringement of my Patent. It has not yet been two year since the first counterfeit, was got up, but in that short time has proved itself, entirely worthless, as will be seen by the statement of more than twenty of the most respectable inhabitants of Sharon Ohio where mine as well as the Counterfeits are made. They say that we have examined recently, a house that was painted, with

Blake's Patent Fire Proof Paint,

SIX YEARS since (as an experiment) and now find the coating as hard as slate or stone. The action of the weather having no effect than to indurate and harden the substance. We will farther state that it has been such a complete failure in all the other kinds of stuff got up, and sold here, called Fire Proof paint (except Blakes) that his only is considered worth useing.

(Signed) Barnabus Crane and 20 others.

Hon. Daniel Webster has recently examined the patent and at the close of his report says, "I have no doubt whatever, but Mr Blake's Patent is good and valid. [104.

The genuine kept constautly on hand of different colors ground in oil or dry powder at the general depot No 84 Pearl-st. N Y.

MARRIAGE:

WHY SO OFTEN UNHAPPY.

THE CAUSES AND THE REMEDY!

MANY and many a wife endures years of bodily suffering and of mental anguish, prostrate and helpless, embittering her life, that of her husband, and hazarding the future welfare of her children, arising from causes which, if known, would have spared the suffering, the anguish to the wife, and to the husband embarrassments and pecuniary difficulties having their origin in the mind being weighed down and harassed in consequence of the sickness of the companion of his bosom.

How important that the causes should be known to every wife, to every husband, that the dreadful and harrowing consequences to the health and happiness of both may be avoided! Life is too short and health too precious to admit any portion of the one to be spent without the full enjoyment of the other. The timely possession of a little work entitled as follows has been the means of saving the health and the life of thousands, as over copies have been sold since the first edition was issued.

The author has been induced to advertise it by the urgent and pressing request of those who have been indebted to its publication for all they hold dear (that all may have an opportunity of obtaining it), and who have favored him with thousands of letters of encomium, some of which are annexed to the advertisement.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

Twentieth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, $1.00.

THIS WORK IS INTENDED ESPECIALLY FOR THE MARRIED, or those contemplating marriage, as it discloses important secrets which should be known to them particularly.

Here, every female—the wife, the mother—the one either budding into womanhood, or the one in the decline of years, in whom nature contemplates an important change—can discover the causes, symptoms, and the most efficient remedies and most certain mode of cure, in every complaint to which her sex is subject.

The revelations contained in its pages have proved a blessing to thousands, as the innumerable letters received by the author (which he is permitted by the writers to publish) will attest.

SICKLY AND UNHAPPY WIVES.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Dayton, O.

"DAYTON, May 1, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU—My Dear Sir: 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion,' for which I enclosed one dollar to your address, came safely to hand. I would not have troubled you with these few lines, but that I am impelled by a sense of gratitude, for myself and wife, to give utterance to our sincere and heartfelt emotions.

"My wife has been perceptibly sinking for some three years or more, in consequence of her great anguish and suffering some months before and during confinement; every successive one more and more debilitated and prostrated her, putting her life in imminent danger, and which was, on the last occasion, despaired of. I supposed that this state of things was inevitable, and resigned myself to meet the worst. At this time (now about two months) I heard your book highly spoken of, as containing some matters reaching my case. On its receipt and perusal, I can not express to you the relief it afforded my distressed mind and the joy its pages imparted to my wife, on learning that the great discovery of M. M. Desomeaux provided a remedy. It opened a prospect to me which I little conceived was possible. No pecuniary consideration can ever repay the obligations I am under to you for having been the means of imparting to us the matters contained in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' But for this, ere another year would have passed over my head, in all human probability my wife would have been in her grave, and my children left motherless."

Extract from a Letter.

Competence and Health.

"LANCASTER, PA., Oct. 24, 1847.

"MY DEAR SIR: I know you will have the kindness to bear with me in encroaching upon your time, while I acknowledge (in behalf of myself and wife) the obligations we feel ourselves under to you in having made known certain matters, contained in your most invaluable 'Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' It has been worth its weight in gold to me. If I express myself rather warmly, you will see that I can not do so too warmly, when I inform you of the extent to which I have, through it, been benefited. I will state my situation when I obtained your book through the merest curiosity I look upon it as one of the most fortunate events of my life. I had been married some ten years, and was the father of seven children. I was long struggling unceasingly, to the end that I might gain a moderate competency, but the results of my utmost exertions at the end left me about where I was at the beginning of each year; and that only, with the most stinted economy, sufficing with barely the necessaries of life. Finally, this constant effort was beginning to have its effect upon my health: I felt less capable to endure its continuance, while I felt the necessity of perseverance.

"This constant, unceasing struggle on my part was imperative, in consequence of the prostrated condition of my wife (with occasional intermission) for six years, much of the time confined to her bed, and of course incapable of taking the charge and management of household affairs. Her condition arose from causes of which I was ignorant. Oh! what would I have given had I the six years to live over again! What would my wife have given to have been spared the long days and still longer nights prostrate on a bed of sickness!—all of which would have been avoided, had I then seen a copy of 'THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION.'"

From a Physician.

DANGEROUS DELIVERIES,

OBSTRUCTIONS, IRREGULARITIES, &C.

How many are suffering from obstruction or irregularities peculiar to the female system, which undermine their health, the effects of which they are ignorant, and for which their delicacy forbids seeking medical advice! How many suffer from prolapsus uteri (falling of the womb), or from fluor-albus (weakness, debility, &c., &c)! How many are in constant agony for many months preceding confinement! How many have difficult if not dangerous deliveries, and whose lives are jeoparded during such time, will find in its pages the means of prevention, amelioration, and relief!

Extract from a Letter.

To those just Married.—"Had I known!"

"PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU: Had I known of the important matters treated of in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion' some years ago, how much misery I might have escaped! I have suffered years from causes which you point out in your book, without knowing what to do. I obtained a copy, and found my case treated of. I trust every female will avail herself of the information contained in its pages."

Letters are daily received of this character, unnecessary to present.

To those yet unmarried, but contemplating marriage, or perhaps hesitating as to the propriety of incurring the responsibilities attendant upon it, the importance of being possessed of the revelations contained in these pages, so intimately involving their future happiness, can not be appreciated.

It is, of course, impracticable to convey more fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage; neither is it necessary, since it is every one's duty to become possessed of knowledge whereby the sufferings to which a wife, a mother, or a sister, may be subject, can be obviated.

FOR FEMALES AND MALES

Dr. Lazetti's Juno Cordial, or Protective Elixir.

This is the only actual remedy ever discovered for impetency, Genital Debility, Nocturnal Emissions, and all diseases occasioned by certain secret habits; and many of the nostrums recently recommended for the same complaints are worthless imitations which its unrivalled excellence, fame and popularity have brought into the market. The Medical Faculty of Europe and the United States are unanimous in their recommendations of the Juno Cordial and have not given their sanction in a single instance that has been authenticated, to any compound for the same purposes. The nature of the maladies relieved by the Juno Cordial are generally such as to leave the publication of certificates of cures out of the question, or the proprietor could produce a host of the most conclusive testimony to show that the great reputation that it enjoys was not accidentally obtained, but is firmly based upon its positive, and apparently miraculous virtues. In all directions are to be found the happy parents of healthy offspring, who would not have been so, but for this extraordinary preparption. And it is equally potent in the many diseases for which it is recommended. Objection has been naturally made to the price of the Juno Cordial, because the trash that has been thrown into the market in opposition to it is sold cheaper; but the fact is, the Cerd al cannot be afforded for less, and ought to be much dearer, as many of the ingredients which compose it are among the costliest things in nature; whereas the others are made up of cheap drugs, worth but little in money, and less in merit. We assure the reader that the utmost reliance may be placed on the Juno Cordial in the cure of the maladies mentioned above, and also those that follow, viz: Loss of Muscular Energy, Physical Lassitude and General Prostration, Irritability, and all Nervous Affections, Indigestion, Sluggishness of the Liver, Gleet, Lucorrhoea or Whites, and Flour Albus and every disease in any way connected with the disorder of the Procreative Functions—in all of which it will afford almost immediate relief, and, if used as directed, is almost certain to produce a positive and permanent cure. Persons about to marry, if conscious of any weakness or disability of a certain nature, should take this Cordial, as it will infallibly restore health and vigor in a brief period, and where want of offspring is a cause of regret, if recourse be had to it the most beneficial results may be anticipated with confidence. It is of priceless value to those without offspring. It has taken the precedence in Italy and will in all other countries where it may become known.

It also possesses the unrivalled qualities of curing incipient Consumption, and I have administered it with great success to patients who have sought our delightful climate for the restoration of their health and the result is that a medicine has been added to the catalogue for the cure of insipient consumption.

To spread wide the blessings of this medicine, I have appointed Messrs. Judson & Co., of the City of New York, in the United States of America, my sole Agents for its sale; and none can be genuine unless it comes through them, and their signature is on the weapper.

Temperance.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—Dear Sirs—I wish to make a few remarks through the medium of your paper, to the public, on the subject of temperance; to suggest the means whereby this great evil may be subdued.

By the powerful efforts of the Sons of Temperance, have the degraded become affectionate sons and brothers, kind husbands and parents, useful and elevated citizens. It therefore behooves all classes of society to encourage it for the welfare of the human race—the advancement of Zion's cause.

We as Sons of Temperance are well aware that there are prejudices and objections to the society—it is called a secret society—absurd stories of riding of goats, and climbing of poles, and horrid oaths and unlawful secrets have been invented and circulated, which have created prejudice in the public mind; let it be my duty to disabuse it and set it in its true light, one of the most beneficial institutions of the land. Our secrets then are a pass word; which, on being given to the door-keeper will admit its possessor to any Division in the country, whether personally acquainted or not. The ceremony of Initiation is an introduction into a company of gentlemen with his eyes wide open, upon which the evil effects of intoxicating drinks are vividly portrayed in a simple lecture. He there obligates neither to make, buy, sell or use any spirituous or malt liquors, wine or cider as a beverage, and to observe the constitution and regulations of the society—to promote its harmony and advance its interests. He is charged to use his influence to induce others to adopt the principle of entire abstinence from strong drink—to pursue a life of integrity—to keep inviolate the pledge and do good to all.

But says an objector a member may not divulge private affairs. Certainly not; but what are they other than the above enumerated? If a brother is so unfortunate as to break the pledge, that is a private affair; and he is not at liberty to retail the facts about the streets. If a brother is in want or distress we relieve him—this is also private and no brother has a right tell it out of the Division. So with all our privacies; they are of just such a nature as every well regulated family adopts. Now this is the character of our secrets; is there anything alarming in them? Candor will answer no. Every person that thinks proper to examine our Constitution and By-Laws can see the whole plan of our business transactions, in regular rotation.—So far from secrecy being an objection to our order, we claim it as a recommendation. It is the mystic tie that binds us together in indissoluble brotherhood—prompting us to deeds of virtue and benevolence. We challenge any one to point out a single nation or people whose career is sketched on the page of history among whom there did not exist secret institutions. Even in our own country, under our own constitution, Congress can close its doors and sit days and weeks concocting measures of vital importance to seventeen millions of freemen; and should any member of that body dare reveal its operations he would subject himself to the severest censure if not expulsion. So with every family, they have their privacies concealed within their own household. Churches of every denomination have their private meetings and consultations in which none are admitted but members thereof; what excuse is rendered or considered necessary for them to render as a society? None, none is necessary—public good requires it; all societies have them and all we presume use them for their own and the public welfare. All if worthy that have a desire to become acquainted with the secrets of the Sons of Temperance have the opportunity to do so by joining. I for one think it the duty of the pastors of churches, there being many of their members that are members of the Sons of Temperance, to appoint a committee to join them, to see if there is any transactions that does not comport with the strictest sense of christian duty, virtue and honor; if there is to expose the order as unworthy the confidence of the community. We would be pleased to have such a committe join us, it shall be no expense to them; if they are not satisfied that it is one of the noblest societies ever instituted by man, and as well calculated to advance the progress of the church of Christ as any other in existence then are we deceived.

I have a word to say to those that do not think the society composed of members sufficiently popular to become fashionable; I would say to such it is your duty as christians and gentlemen of popularity to come forward and join us in this great cause; then will your objections vanish, and you will be enabled to do good to your fellow beings—perhaps your own near connections, fathers, brothers, sons may be benefitted—led from a life of intemperance and shame to virtue and happiness. We will warrant no bad instructions inculcated in the Division room of the Sons of Temperance—all our charges are founded on the Scriptures and conducted with the strictest order and solemnity. Every parent in this Village ought to be thankful that there is such a society among us; they ought to encourage it with all their influence. It is a society that has progressed with unexampled rapidity; the order was instituted Sept. 29. 1842, in the city of New York. Its wonderful progress during the seven years elapsed is as follows: From the above date to March 31. 1849 there was instituted 35 Grand divisions; 4,398 subdivisions; 225,478 contributing members—and at the last national meeting at Boston there were over 300,000 people assembled on the occasion; and we are proud to say that we have over 1500 preachers of the Gospel connected withthe society—some of the most eminent in the land. The order has also found its way to California and progressing with great rapidity. I would say again that it is a cause deserving our sincere regard and worthy our greatest encouragement—being the only society of the kind that can prevail to any great extent. A wide field is open to us, a power of good can be accomplished in this Village and surrounding country if our citizens would connect with us, forming one society, based upon principles that can stand the test; instead of having two societies on different principles and in opposition to each other. If we want to do good to our fellow beings let us join together in "Love, Purity and Fidelity," and then we can accomplish our aim with certain good and success.

The good effect produced by the order in other places have been thought so favourably of by the ladies that they have presented the society with a Bible or other suitable token of their approbation; I would also recommend the ladies of our village be up and doing while it is to-day, follow their sisters example in other towns and villiages in trying to do good, by organizing a Division of the Daughters of Temperance; their influence would be powerful in promoting the cause of temperance—what can be more to your interest and happiness; you are very often the sufferers of intemperance—thousands have been rescued from a drunkards grave and placed on the road to prosperity and happiness by their influence; will you give it your serious consideration? Who can be so lost in their duty to their fellow men as to not encourage us in so noble so righteous a cause for their relief and rescue? In what better manner, to what more noble purpose can we appropriate our time and our money and talent than the reclamation of the poor inebriate from shame and disgrace, and place him a new man by his heart broken wife and children their protector and guide? How their hearts will leap for joy while he aids and protects the one and guides and instructs the other—teaching them to shun the quick sands of intemperance and vice and points them to the paths of virtue and peace? The overflowing gratitute of one family so raised up more than repays the benevolent heart, and is a sufficient inducement for us to redouble our labors in so holy a cause. We ask for encouragement; give us but your countenance and support and we will spread the hallowed influence of our glorious and benevolent cause from the Atlantic to the Pacific Oceans—the tyrant that has kept us bond so long shall be forever banished from our happy land.

The Shaker and the Deacon.

Landlord—Friend there is a traveller who has put up with me who does not wish to be with the multitude in the bar-room or sitting-room, and as my house is now full, I cannot accommodate him unless you will obligingly permit him to sit in your room until he retires.

Shaker—Yea, if he be a sober man, I have no objection.

Landlord—Thank you, I will introduce him. [Exit Landlord.]

(Enter Landlord and Deacon,)

Landlord.—This is the gentleman, Sir, for whose introduction you gave consent. [Landlord retires.]

Shaker—Be seated, friend, before the fire. [The deacon sits down.]

Deacon—It's a cold night.

Shaker—Yea.

Deacon—I abominate a tavern. No answer from the Shaker.]

Deacon.—I sometimes think a tavern a meeting-house for the ungodly. [No answer from the Shaker]

Deacon—The church to which I belong, and in which I hold the office of Deacon, condemns dancing as the worst of sins. [No answer from the Shaker.]

Deacon—You belong to the Shaking Quaker Society, I take it?

Shaker—[After a pause]—Yea, I am a member of that people.

Deacon—Do you hold any office amomong them?

Shaker—Yea, that of Brother.

Deacon—I suspected that you belonged to the Shaker Society, and that you were the man they called Deacon Ed———ly.

Shaker—I belong to that Society.

Deacon—Your people, I understand, dance on the Sabbath-day.

Shaker—We labor bofore the Lord on the first day of the week.

Deacon—In either case it is a pro-dig-ious abomination, and our missionaries ought to be sent to enlighten you.

Shaker—Friend, dost thou confide in thy faith?

Deacon—Yes.

Shaker—So do I in mine.

Deacon—But you are in a state of moral devastation, of sin, and of rebellion against God and his Revelation, Shaker—Friend, I have not a gift to converse with thee at this time. I will not condemn thy faith—permit me and mine to remain in peace.

Deacon—I feel it my solemn duty to warn you to beware of dancing as you would of the wrath to come. [No answer from the Shaker.]

Deacon—You are in a state of sin and moral darkness; will you shut your eyes against the light of Revelation?

Shaker—Nay, friend.

Deacon—Then how can you dance, or labor as you call it, without Scripture authority, and on that day that our churches sanctify?

Shaker—Art thou a Deacon, and hast thou a Bible, friend?

Deacon—Yes, I am a Deacon, duly "set apart" according to the ordinance of the church of God, and have a Bible, which I understand from Genesis to Revelations.

Shaker—Then I cannot give any additional information to thee, who understandingly the whole of the law of Ood; and we will cease to speak further thereof.

Deacon—If you can produce one text in the whole book to countenace dancing, I will cease to speak further.

Shaker—Friend thou art kinder than I expected; I will answer thy request threefold upon thine own condition; and first, for the dancing of a prophetess;—"And Miriam, the prophetess;—"And Miriam, the prophetess, the sister of Aaron, took a timbrel in her hand, and all the women went out after her with timbrels and dances."—[Exodus xv. 20.] Dost thou think, friend if dancing were not acceptable to Israel's God that Moses and Aaron would have suffered the sisters to have danced before the Lord the moment they had escaped the Egyptians and miraculously passed through the Red Sea?

Deacon—I have no reccollection of that text; I will take it down, and, after reading it, shew it to our minister; but you will proceed with the rest.

Shaker—"And Jepthah came to Mizpah into his house and behold his daughter came out to meet him with timbrels and with dances, and she was his only child, besides whom he had neither son nor daughter.' —[Judges xi.34.]-Jepthah was a Judge in Israel and favored of the Lord. Canst thou believe he allowed his only child to dance if it was wicked? And would she go forth to meet her father in a manner not truly acceptable to him?

Deacon—I have noted it down with the other. I have heard that the shakers had a Bible for themselves—but proceeded.

Shaker—"And it came to pass as they came, when David was returned from the Philistines, that women came out of all the cities of Israel singing and dancing, to meet King Saul with tabrets, with joy and with instruments of music."—(1st Samuel xviii. 6.) Now, friend, Israel was a favored people of the Lord, and would the women have come out of all the cities of Israel singing and dancing" before Saul and David for the great victory, unless it was approved by their God? Nay, friend, they would not sinned against God for the victory and deliverance which he had given.

Deacon—Admit your texts are from our true Christian Bible, they do not prove that men or boys were allowed to dance; it was only the women, and they are allowed to dance; it was only the women, and they are allowed to do almost any thing, and if I find those passages in my Bible, I shall think they have always been a prodigious abomination from old mother Eve down to the fag end of them.

Shaker—Dost thou believe, with thy Bible, that, David was holy, and a man after God's own heart, friend?

Deacon—Yes, to be sure I do, most solemnly-

Shaker—Take care, friend, for verily, thou wilt make thy God a dancer, if David was after his heart, for "David danced before the Lord with all his might, and David was girded with a linen ephod."—(2d Samuel vi. 15.) Now canst thou believe, friend, that holy David would have danced before the Lord if the Lord was not fond of dancing?

Deacon—This is an abomination of abominations!—worse and worse! Oh! I can smell sulphur already in this room!

Shaker—Not unless thou hast it about thee, friend; for my people neither make it nor have any occasion to use it.

Deacon—Your Scriptures I now flatly deny. I can't recollect a word of it; if it is to be found any where, it must be in Ann Lee's revelation!

Shaker—Nay, friend, be not offended that I repeat thy own Bible to thee—thou wilt find all therein. I fear thy memory does not quite reach from Genesis to Revelations.

Deacon—Well, if such passages are to be found in the Bible, like the old dispensation they are outlawed and not now binding nor ever will be again.

Shaker—Verily, I would fain ask thee a question:—dost thou believe that Israel will be gathered together?

Deacon—Yes, for it's the promise of God.

Shaker—Yea, Verily; and hast thou faith that thou art one of the ransomed of Israel?

Deacon—Yes, I have the evidence in the church.

Shaker—Then, friend, if thy Bible deceive not, thou thyself will yet have a merry long time of dancing!

Deacon—This is the worst of all! You may make all the womeu of Israel dancers, and King David to boot; but mind! you have now got a Deacon of an Orthodox church to deal with?—You nor any other power can make me consent to dance—take that for an answer!

Shaker—Then thou already deniest thy faith in being one of the ransomed in Israel, for God hath said, "Again I will build thee, and thou shalt be built, O virgin of Israel; thou shalt again be adorned with thy tabrets, and thou shalt go forth in the dances of them that make merry."

Deacon—Well, I tell you, again, I will not dance with them—so there!

Shaker—Verily, friend, I may say, "According to thy faith be it unto thee."

Deacon—I now believe every word in Mary Dyer's book concerning you.

Shaker—Yea, friend, it seemeth strange unto me, that thou shouldst follow the councils of Mary concerning us, and denounce the examples of Miriam the prophetess of God?"

Deacon—I hold it my duty not to say one more word to you!

Shaker—Thou hast my thanks, friend, if steadfastly thou keepest thy promise. Thou wilt find thy silence more useful to thee than thy accusations, and more conformable to the character of a deacon, who should be, at least decent in his deportment, and also an honest seeker after the truth.

Deacon—I'll leave this accursed room as soon as I can get my hat and coat.

Shaker—Friend, thou hast spoken again—and sworn too!

Deacon—I don't thank the landlord for putting me into this room. [Runs out in a rage.]

Shaker—Thou wilt dance soon, I fear, thou Deacon of this world? [Exit Shaker to bed.]

PROGRESS.

Would ye stand still when nature's law is change?
All things move toward perfection or decay.
Man now is climbing to a higher range
Of thought, of action, morals and display.
Ye would not stop him? Stand from out his way!
And see him soar in triumph to the sun.
Let him make knowledge as the light of day.
And conquer the world's evils one by one—
Cut down the hills to give his engines play,
And push his steamships to the farthest zone—
Lace the broad earth with thought's mysterious wires,
And do whatever else his destiny inspires.

Education—Free Schools.

Education we consider to be the only safe, certain guarantee of Liberty. Indeed, the history of all governments conclusively prove that they are indissolubly connected; where the one dwells their dwells the other also. Keep the mass of the people ignorant and they are serfs, slaves; educate them and they are free. How important then that the rising generation should be educated—they will soon fill our places in the busy scenes of life. Their welfare and prosperity depends upon the provision we make for their instruction—ignorance, degradation, loss of virtue and of liberty will be the consequences of our neglect; while virtue, liberty, prosperity and happiness will be the result of a liberal provision for educating the mass. How important then that this subject should receive the attention it merits. We regret the want of interest on this important subject among those who are most to be benefitted by it—they do not see its value; it is our duty therefore who feel its benefits, who know its inestimable value, its great blessings, to lend our aid for its universal diffusion. By what other means by so small an outlay individually can we accomplish so great an amount of good—how so easily and effectually advance the happiness of man, the cause of liberty—the cause of God—as by universal education? Who does not feel the blush of shame at the amount of ignorance degradation and misery throughout our State, and indignation at the apathy and indifference of our law makers on this important subjected? Let us one and all then—Whigs and Democrats, or by whatever other political or social name known, with one universal accord, unite to lay this foundation of Liberty both broad and deep, that the alter erected thereon may defy the combined tyranny of the earth. How better, how so well can this be accomplished as thorugh the medium of free schools; they are yet to be made the sheet anchor, the firm hope, the sure foundation whereon to build the great temple of Republican Liberty, which shall disenthrall and regenerate the world.

Profession—Practice.

The time is fast approaching when the People of New Jersey will again be called upon to choose by whom they would prefer the prerogatives of its government should be exercised. The last act of a Democratic government in New Jersey was to do away with a British Charter, under which special privileges to the rich were the most prominent, aye, the all important feature; denying to the poor his equal prerogative, a participation in the elective franchise. This glorious boon, this inalienable and inestimable right of man, contrary to the spirit and principles of republicanism for which our forefathers contended, was denied and withheld by this charter which was upheld and perpetuated by the Whigs of New Jersey. Since the adoption of the present Constitution, which the perseverence of the Democracy accomplished, the Whigs have been our rulers, have had the power to have passed the reform measures the people have demanded, yet what has been the result? Not a single measure of reform which has been demanded has been granted; and why? Because all their sympathies, habits, feelings and associations have been against them.

The leading Whig journals of the State, the Newark Advertiser and State Gazette have attempted to hush the agitation of these questions by their journals—denouncing those of more liberal sentiments, as the Jersey City Telegraph, Elizabethtown Journal, Newark Mercury, &c., who feeling the iron hand of the cliques who have oppressed the people have attempted to throw off the yoke and advocate the people's cause; but this will not be permitted and they must and have already succumbed to the powers that be, with all their subordinates who never dare have, much less express an opinion of their own, echoing the mandates of their masters in full chorus.

The People of New Jersey, the honest yeomanry of the State, those who toil, those by whose energies the wealth of the State is produced, have repeatedly demanded the following measures of reform. The abolition of a Property Qualification; General instead of Special Laws; Equalization of Taxes; Limitation of the Hours of Labor; A judicious system of Common or Free Schools; An Exemption Law for the Poor and Unfortunate, and an economical expenditure of the public money.

The Newark Advertiser on two several occasions recently, in two or three lengthy articles, attempts to show that the Whigs are in favor of these measures! It asks under the most innocent guise, expressive of the most profound astonishment, "who are not in favor of these measures?" Thus subtilly insinuating by this artful sophistry that they, the Whigs, i. e. governing cliques are the friends of these measures. But notwithstanding all this sophistry the cloven foot will show itself, "actions speak louder than words;" "by their works ye shall know them" We would reiterate again that the Whigs since the adoption of the Constitution have had the power but have perseveringly refused to use it but for their own aggrandisement; saying to the poor man by their unequivocal acts, you do not possess property therefore you cannot be entrusted with rights—you cannot be permitted, whatever your talents may be, to sit on juries or to hold office in the State of New Jersey; these privileges pertain, not to the producers but to the owners of property! This is New Jersey Democratic Whig Republicanism! This is a matter of history, indisputably established. Can it be then that those whom this tyranical law deprives of their rights will elevate those as their rulers by whom it has ever been sustained? Never, surely, will men commit so suicidal an act. What, elect men as rulers who prefered the Charter of a British king, which deprived them of a franchise! No, never let it be said that the sophistries of the tyrants were specious enough to do away the recollection of their tyranical acts.

Our Candidate.

The people of New Jersey now have it in their power to prove whether the reforms that public opinion has so long demanded shall be carried out. The nomination of GEORGE F. FORT was not only intended an honor to him personally, but was accompanied by a declaration of principles, which, as the head of the party, he should carry out. The Convention that nominated him declared those principles to be "Equal Taxation"—"Equal Rights and no monopoly"—"No Freehold Qualifications"—"Public or Common Schools." With these distinct issues, they will meet the foe, and to save all doubt, Dr. FORT has on two several occasions—once at Trenton, in the presence of one thousand Democrats, and again at Camden, at our district convention—openly avowed that he adopted those principles, and pledg- himself to stand by them. Now let us enquire when the whig candidate has ever declared himself in favor of those principles? The proceedings of the whig State Convention are silent;—not one resolution did they pass in favor of equal taxation—equal rights—common schools, or the other principles of the Democratic Reform Creed. Here, then, is a striking differenee between the two candidates. We say that John Runk and his friends are opposed to the whole of these reforms—we say that the whig party has had power for years, and not one step have they taken to produce this reform—we say that they have opposed it by their votes, and the proceedings and Journal of the Legislature prove it. —Salem Sunbeam.

Who Are Responsible.

It is a fact almost too well known to need reiteration that the Whig Legislature of 1846 revised the statute laws of New Jersey, in order that all laws coming in conflict with the new constitution, might be blotted out and erased from its pages. The Whig party are then responsible for all the obsolete, bigoted laws which are in violation of the constitution responsible for the re-enactment of the Property Qualification law, which the constitution had rendered null and void.

Having the revision of the statute laws in their own hands, they might have amended them, in an enlightened and liberal manner, and are sorely and deeply responsible for this direlection of duty. We want the people to remember this fact, and when Whigs profess about election times, to be so, very liberal in their ideas, just ask them why their representatives never happen to be so, when an opportunity is given them to benefit the people?—Rahway Republican.

☞ "RAMBLES AND SKETCHES," by Rev. J. T. Headly, 12mo. illustrated. Published by John S. Taylor 143 Nassau-st N. Y.

This is a very neatly printed volume and as interesting as it is neat. The happy gift of the author in investing his subject with a most lively interest is rarely exceeded. "Rambles and Sketches" are the happy impressions of the authors mind as received from life, while rambling for his health through Italy, France, England and Whales—drawing life like pictures of the manners, customs and scenes through which he passed, with interesting reflections thereon. Knowledge and entertainment are happily combined.

This work treats of a subject all men are interested in. Although we differ on many points from the author, we nevertheless reccommend the work to all interested in the subject.

The true Farmer's Friend

The whig candidate for Governor is dubbed "Farmer" Runk, and, therefore the whig papers say, the "farmers" should vote for him. The "farmers" of New Jersey, are too intelligent to be deluded by a shadow, when there is substance at stake. The "farmers" desire to have an Equalization of Taxes, which will save them money every year, by fairly distributing the State, county, and township expenses. From the pursuit of this object they cannot be turned aside, by talked about "Farmer Runk!". They have endeavord year after year, to procure this reform from a whig legislature, and time after time, they have been defeated. It is utterly vain to expect any different conduct if the whigs succeeded in the State this fall, for the same managers who have directed things at Trenton for ten years past, will in that case, be more firmly seated in power and influence, and will treat even more contemptuously than last year, the request of the people. John Runk's party is opposed to the farmer's measure—the Equalization of Taxes.—by which the money lender will be compelled to pay his proper proportion of the public expenses—and this the intelligent farmer regards as the main thing.—Somerset Messenger.

GOOD HIT.—Hon. Daniel Webster, expecting some distinguished visitors at his house in Marshfield, sent to Mr. J. B. Smith, a colored gentleman of Boston, who makes a business of assisting entertainers on such occasions, and desired to engage Mr. Smith's professional services. Mr. Smith, having a very decided opinion of his own respecting the Fugitive Slave law and some other acts that Mr. Webster has lately had a hand in, sent word to Mr. W. that he would not go to his house for $100 per day, and that there was not a colored man in Boston mean enough to enter the service for one day of the enemy of the human race. Mr. Webster tried to get other colored men, but failed.—Free Soiler.

How well merited the above; what a rebuke to the man who is termed, par excellence, the "expounder of the constitution"—Expounding the Constitution of Republican America to subvert the first and fundamental principle of Liberty! How contemptible to the lover of freedom does the Representative of Free Massachusetts,—of the Boston Tea-Party—of Bunker Hill appear as the subverter of the principles, as a rebuker of the acts of those who gained a nation's, aye, who ushered in the natal day of freedom to the world!

How consoling the contrast, the reflection, that while the United States government are repudiating the doctrines of the Declaration of Independence, which was extorted from Great Britain by force of arms, by shackling the limbs of those who have adopted its doctrines, the government of that country has adopted its fundamental basis as the inalienable right of man! Had our forefathers ever anticipated in their struggles for freedom, the hypocritical pretences by which their labors have been made vain the blow would never have been struck. The universal anathema of every lover of freedom awaits those who would thus bargain man's birthright for a messs of potage.

☞ A party of thirteen fugitive slaves passed through Tamaqua, Schuylkill county, last Friday, en route for Canada. The next day they were followed by two individuals, who, engaging the assistance of our constable, followed on in their pursuit. The pursuers succeeded in overtaking the slaves at Wilksbarre, but owing to the strong expression of feeling manifested by the people in their favor, they were forced to beat a hasty retreat. The constable was induced to follow them under the impression that they were horse thieves, but on learning otherwise, he refused to render any further co-operation. —Phila. Ledger.

INCREASE OF BAPTISTS.—In 1840 there were, in New-York and the immediate vicinity 22 Baptist churches, 17 pastors, and 6,272 members. In 1850 there are 44 churches, 42 pastors and 10,979 members; an increase of 4,707 members, 25 pastors and 22 churches.—Tribune.

AN IMPORTANT CHURCH CASE DECIDED.—Wesley Chapel on Warrenton Circuit, Virginia, has been in litigation for some time past, between the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and the Methodist Episcopal Church; and, on the 8th instant, we learn that the Hon. Judge Tyler delivered his decision in favor of the latter church. The terms of the decision prospectively secure the Sudley Church, and the circuit parsonage, to the Methodist Episcopal Church. Since the great sectional division in the Methodist Episcopal Church, a great many cases similar to this have arisen, and it is to be presumed that the principles of this decision will embrace all the other actions still pending.—*Eve. NEW JERSEY TRANSIT DUTIES.—The receipts for transient duties from the Camden and Amboy Railroad Co. during the quarter ending Sept 30th, were $12,447 27, being $3,247 55 more than during the same period last year.

The transcript duties from the N. J. Railroad Co during the same period were $3,801, being $786 29 more than last year.

The Signal states that a large number of dwellings are in course of erection, the first story of the Court House is completed, and they are building a new lattice bridge across Tom's River. There are also two large class schooners on the stocks nearly completed.

☞ The Monmouth Democrat says that a Catamount was shot within two miles of the village of Tom's River, on Saturday last, by Mr. Garret Bailey, while hunting coons. It measured 5 feet 4 inches in length and 2 feet 2 inches in hight. It is said to be the first animal of the kind ever killed in those parts.

PEACHES.—New-Jersey sent into the City of New-York during the season 1,338,500 baskets of peaches, which sold for about $350,000.

☞ The Savannah Republican states that rice of the new crop is now all cut. The crop is most abundant, and the grain of a superior quality.

☞ A U. S. Commissioner under the Fugitive Slave law has been appointed, says the Advertiser, for the New Jersey District. And who so contemptible as accept the office, we would enquire.

The Telegraph Case—Morse's and House's Lines—Important Decision.

BOSTON, Oct. 17, 1850.

The case of Morse's Telegraph vs. House, was decided by Judge Woodbury this morning. The Judge went into the history of Telegraphing at great length. He contended that as the Patent of Morse extended only to the mode and not to the principle of telegraphing, and as the modes are entirely different, no infringement is proved.

The Counsel for Morse gave notice of appeal to the full Court, Animals Feigning Death.

During a visit to Cumberland (England), we found several hedgehogs in Inglewood forest. One of these, in order to destroy it, we put in the pond. It swam about in a circular direction for some time, and reached the shore. After putting it into the water a second time, it remained motionless, and apparently dead and we left it on the grass. During the night, however, it walked away. The spider will imitate death to save itself; and canaries have been taught by some showmen to look as if they were dead. The most curious case, however, is that of a fox in the north. A farmer had discovered that he came along a beam in the night to seize his poultry, He accordingly sawed the end of the beam nearly through, and in the night the fox fell into a place whence he could not escape. On going to him in the morning, the farmer found him stiff, and, as he thought, lifeless. Taking him out of the building he threw him on the dunghill, but in a short time reynard opened his eyes, and seeing that all was safe and clear galloped away to the mountains, showing more cunning than the man who ensnared him.

☞ Warren township Somerset Co. contains 2155 inhabitants—in 1840 it had 1601—an increase of 554, more than one-third. In 1830 its population was 1561.

WARREN COUNTY.—In 1850, 22,164. In 1840, 20,366. In 1830, 18,634. A regular increase of nearly 1800 each 10 years.

☞ Trenton has according to the census just finished, a population of 10,766 inhabitants. The result disappoints the Trentonians somewhat.

The valuatiou of Massachusets will exceed fiive hundred millions of dollars. The valuation of Boston for 1849 was as follows:—Real estate, $102,829,500; valuation of personal estate, $71,352,700. Total, $174,180,200.

"Well, what is your name, my old friend?

"Harry, sir-ole Harry, sir," said the other, touching his sleepy hat.

"Old Harry!" said Biddle, "why that is the name that they gave to the Devil, is it not?"

"Yes sir," said the colored gentleman, "sometime ole Harry and sometime ole Nick."

GREAT MEDICAL WORK.—W. HOLDREDGE, 140 FULTON-STREET, NEW-YORK, Bookseller and Stationer, has just published a new book, entitled "Medical Information for the Million, or the True Guide to Health," on reformed principles; containing a new theory of life and death; with nearly one hundred fine illustrations. Price in leather and cloth, $1 50; paper $1; 12mo 528pp.—By Chas. D. Hammond, M. D. Member of the Electric School of Medicine &c. Being plain advice to both sexes, in the treatment of Nervous, Consumptive, Scrofulous and other complaints. To which is added an Essay on Sexual Diseases, including the symptoms and treatment of Syphilitic complaints, Masturbation, Seminal Debility, Barrenness, &c, We are assured, on the highest medical authority that the volume here offered to the public, is of a character that claims the attention of every intelligent person in the land, that has any regard for the welfare and happiness of the human family. It unfolds information of the most vital importance to the sickly and unhappy of all classes and conditions in life, whether Male or Female, Married or Single, Old or Young. They will here find a life-like portrait of their individual case—the cause, symptoms, accurate prescriptions and directions, by which a safe and speedy cure can be accomplished; thus saving the delicate wife, mother or daughter, from the recessity and expense of becomeing graduates of the recently founded female medical college, in order to save their sex from the dangerous practice of ignorant quacks. The time has come when young and old of both sexes should make themselves acquainted with the fearful and wonderful workmansdip of the Divine Architect in the anatomy of the human system. He has made nothing but what its study was designed to make us wise, good, and happy. Is it not for the want of a knowledge of the structure and uses of the human system, that we see and experience so much sickness sorrow, and distress? and is it not for the want of this necessary information, that thousands of our youth are led astray by delusive habits of vice, and annually go down to a premature grave? A thousand times the cost of this work bears no comparison to the awful consequences of such misfortunes. We believe in the old proverb, that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." "We regard it as an important work, and doubt not it will find its way into every family in the Union."—Atlas. "It has evidently a good purpose; aims to accomplish an object highly desirable and purely benevolent—There is a degree of both physiological and pathological information, which may not only be safely, but with the highest utility, communicated indiscriminately to the bulk of readers."—Evangelist.

In order to give everybody an opportunity of possessing this valuable book, it has been neatly bound in paper, and as an inducement to clubs and others, thirteen copies will be sent as per order, on the receipt of $10; six on the receipt of $5; and single copies for $1. Postage, any distance in the United States, 15 1-2 cents. Cloth and leather bound at the same rates of discount. Agents wanted.

MECHANICAL MEDICINE.

Dr. Banning, formerly of this city, asks to announce that he has returned to 341 Broadway; for consultation and management of weaknesses of the vocal, pulmonary, digestive, nervous, spinal and female systems; and also of the drooping, languor and physical deformities, which are so destructive of both health and beauty at the present day.

As these and kindred maladies are usually the result of a violation of the laws of physical organization, he will treat them chiefly by those exercises, mechanical appliances and reformatory habits of body, in conjunction with hydropathy galvanism and other discoveries of the day, which, united with the cooperative efforts of the subject, are calculated to relieve and restore the energies of the suffering and neglected organs.

Having spent several years in traveling for investigation and practical experiment on the subject, he has, at length, greatly improved and multiplied his surgical and mechanical appliances for the purpose. In addition to his new supports for female and spinal weaknesses, are some combining the properties of a universal hernial truss and an effective general support, with which he challenges cases of general debility, constipation, piles and prolapsus, ani, lencorrhea, prolapsus uteri and every variety of hernia.

The distinctive peculiarity of these devices is, that they do not weaken or restrain the motions or growth of the suffering parts, but act imitatively and concordantly with the mathematical genius of the body's forces. Hence, by a most comfortable and gentle pressure, they at once give great support and render the oppressed system eligible to its own restoration.

Feeble invalids coming from a distance will command prompt and faithful attention.

For more definite information, see his revised edition of "Animal Mechanics," and also his circular, which will be sent gratuitously when requested.

His improved body-braces, spinal supports and supporter trusses applied at his office (341 Broadway) and to be had wholesale and retail- City and country physicians and druggists are invited to call and examine Office hours from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. [121.

HERNIA.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.—This disorder, of very frequennt occurrence, may be considered as arising through weakness of the abdominal walls, inducing an enlargement in the natural openings formed therein for the transmission of blood and other vessels: such openings being enlarged, permit the escape of bowels or other viscera of the abdomen, devolving hernial swellings or rupture, which most generally occur outwardly, as at the navel, groins and thighs.

The complaint is likely to happen at birth, and therefore should be carefully looked for by those having the charge of children, that it may be arrested and cured promptly. It also occurs at any period of life, to either sex, without regard to the condition or mode of living, and when found, should be attended to without delay—the final penalty being death, and that may be induced through strangulation at any momennt.

RUPTURES, are always to be treated with the surgical instruments known as Trusses and Supporters, and these require to be skillfully applied. With this view, the HULL'S TRUSS OFFICE, now established some thirty years, has under the various managers, presented to the public both male and female attendants to apply its instruments directly to the persons, which is preferable in all cases, and has also made improvement at different times, showing that advancement which study and practice only yield toward the relief of this malady.

With much pleasure the fact is now published, that recent improvements BUTLER'S TRUSS PADS have been made, and sufficiently tested upon numerous cases to warrant, through the cures already affected, their submission to the public, as being in adaptation and efficiency superior to any heretofore made known.

These improvements, recently patented, are now being applied at this office, 4 Vesey street, in cases of rupture, gravitation of the bowels, prolapsus uteri, prolapsus ani and piles.

The public may rely upon that care being made in their application, which will most likely tend to the final cure of the several complaints.

Hull's Truss Office, 4 Vesey street, Astor House, opposite St. Paul's Church, New-York.

FRED'K M BUTLER, Proprietor.

N. B.—The ladies' department is attended by a female qualified to fit the instruments, having so attended this office for many years.

READ, AND SATISFY YOURSELVES:

Read the following from an eminent Physician:

The undersigned being acquainted with some of the ingredints of HUTCHINGS' VEGETABLE DYSPEPSIA BITTERS, and having used it for some time in his practice with every desired effect, here commends this medicine from the certainty of its effect and gives it a preference over all preparations in medicine for that distressing complaint, Dyspepsia.

T. HARDENBERGH, M. D., No. 1 Beach street N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half; during a greater portion of this time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself until he was recommended to try HUTCHINGS' DYSPEPSIA BITTERS; he very soon derived a benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of HUTCHINGS' BITTERS for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine. L B. WYMAN. 23 Burling Slip.

New York, September 3. 1849.

The following certificate is from M. B. Brady, the celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness. I was advised to take Hutching's Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease, and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia.

M. B. BRADY, No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

The proprietor of this medicine has received many other certificates of cures, equally remarkable, of the various diseases for which this preparation is applicable; but tbe above are deemed necessary to satisfy any unprejudiced mind of its value and superiority above all other preparations.

CHERRY PECTORAL:

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, ASTHMA, WHOOPING-COUGH AND CONSUMPTION.

The uniform success which has attended the use of this preparation—its salutary effect—its power to relieve and cure affections of the Lungs, have gained for it a celebrity equalled by no other medicine. We offer it to the afflicted with entire confidence in its virtues, and the full belief that it will subdue and remove the severest attacks of disease upon the throat and Lungs. These results, as they become publicly known, very naturally attract the attention of medical men and philanthropists everywhere.—What is their opinion of CHERRY PECTORAL may be seen in the following:—

VALENTINE MOTT, M. D.,

Prof. Surgery Med. College, New York, says:—

"It gives me pleasure to certify the value and efficacy of Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL, which I consider peculiarly adapted to cure diseases of the Throat and Lungs."

THE RT. REV. LORD BISHOP FIELD

writes in a letter to his friend, who was fast sinking under an affection of the Lungs:—"Try tbe CHERRY PECTORAL and if any medicine can give you relief, with the blessing of God that will."

CPIEF JUSTICE EUSTIS,

of Louisiana, writes "That a young daughter of his was cured of several severe attacks of Croup by the "CHERRY PECTORAL."

ASTHMA AND BRONCHITIS.

The Canadian Journal of Medical Science states, "That Asthma and Bronchitis so prevalent in this inclement climate, has yielded with surprising rapidity to Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL, and we cannot too strongly recommend this skilful preparation to the Profession and public generally."

Let the relieved sufierer speak for himself:—

HARTFORD, Jan. 26. 1847.

Dr. J. C. Ayer—Dear Sir:—Having been rescued from a painful and dangerous disease by your medicine, gratitude prompts me to send you this acknowledgment, not only in justice to you, but for the information of others in like affliction.

A slight cold upon the lungs, neglected at first became so severe that spitting of blood, a violent cough and profuse night sweats followed and fastened upon me. I became emaciated, could not sleep, was distressed by my cough, and a pain through my chest, and in short had all the alarming symptoms of quick consumption. No medicine seemed at all to reach my case, until I providentially tried your CHERRY PECTORAL, which soon relieved and now has cured me.

Yours with respect. E. A. STEWART.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 17, 1848

Dr. Ayer, Lowell—Dear Sir:—I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form; so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breath on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my Physician prescribed, as an experiment, your CHERRY PECTORAL.

At first it seemed to make me worse, but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

BLAKE'S PATENT

FIRE PROOF PAINT.

THE original and only genuine article, that can be obtained, without subjecting the purchaser to a prosecution for an infringement of my Patent. It has not yet been two year since the first counterfeit, was got up, but in that short time has proved itself, entirely worthless, as will be seen by the statement of more than twenty of the most respectable inhabitants of Sharon Ohio where mine as well as the Counterfeits are made. They say that we have examined recently, a house that was painted, with

Blake's Patent Fire Proof Paint,

SIX YEARS since (as an experiment) and now find the coating as hard as slate or stone. The action of the weather having no effect than to indurate and harden the substance. We will farther state that it has been such a complete failure in all the other kinds of stuff got up, and sold here, called Fire Proof paint (except Blakes) that his only is considered worth useing.

(Signed) Barnabus Crane and 20 others.

Hon. Daniel Webster has recently examined the patent and at the close of his report says, "I have no doubt whatever, but Mr Blake's Patent is good and valid. [104.

The genuine kept constautly on hand of different colors ground in oil or dry powder at the general depot No 84 Pearl-st. N Y.

MARRIAGE:

WHY SO OFTEN UNHAPPY.

THE CAUSES AND THE REMEDY!

MANY and many a wife endures years of bodily suffering and of mental anguish, prostrate and helpless, embittering her life, that of her husband, and hazarding the future welfare of her children, arising from causes which, if known, would have spared the suffering, the anguish to the wife, and to the husband embarrassments and pecuniary difficulties having their origin in the mind being weighed down and harassed in consequence of the sickness of the companion of his bosom.

How important that the causes should be known to every wife, to every husband, that the dreadful and harrowing consequences to the health and happiness of both may be avoided! Life is too short and health too precious to admit any portion of the one to be spent without the full enjoyment of the other. The timely possession of a little work entitled as follows has been the means of saving the health and the life of thousands, as over copies have been sold since the first edition was issued.

The author has been induced to advertise it by the urgent and pressing request of those who have been indebted to its publication for all they hold dear (that all may have an opportunity of obtaining it), and who have favored him with thousands of letters of encomium, some of which are annexed to the advertisement.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

Twentieth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, $1.00.

THIS WORK IS INTENDED ESPECIALLY FOR THE MARRIED, or those contemplating marriage, as it discloses important secrets which should be known to them particularly.

Here, every female—the wife, the mother—the one either budding into womanhood, or the one in the decline of years, in whom nature contemplates an important change—can discover the causes, symptoms, and the most efficient remedies and most certain mode of cure, in every complaint to which her sex is subject.

The revelations contained in its pages have proved a blessing to thousands, as the innumerable letters received by the author (which he is permitted by the writers to publish) will attest.

SICKLY AND UNHAPPY WIVES.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Dayton, O.

"DAYTON, May 1, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU—My Dear Sir: 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion,' for which I enclosed one dollar to your address, came safely to hand. I would not have troubled you with these few lines, but that I am impelled by a sense of gratitude, for myself and wife, to give utterance to our sincere and heartfelt emotions.

"My wife has been perceptibly sinking for some three years or more, in consequence of her great anguish and suffering some months before and during confinement; every successive one more and more debilitated and prostrated her, putting her life in imminent danger, and which was, on the last occasion, despaired of. I supposed that this state of things was inevitable, and resigned myself to meet the worst. At this time (now about two months) I heard your book highly spoken of, as containing some matters reaching my case. On its receipt and perusal, I can not express to you the relief it afforded my distressed mind and the joy its pages imparted to my wife, on learning that the great discovery of M. M. Desomeaux provided a remedy. It opened a prospect to me which I little conceived was possible. No pecuniary consideration can ever repay the obligations I am under to you for having been the means of imparting to us the matters contained in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' But for this, ere another year would have passed over my head, in all human probability my wife would have been in her grave, and my children left motherless."

Extract from a Letter.

Competence and Health.

"LANCASTER, PA., Oct. 24, 1847.

"MY DEAR SIR: I know you will have the kindness to bear with me in encroaching upon your time, while I acknowledge (in behalf of myself and wife) the obligations we feel ourselves under to you in having made known certain matters, contained in your most invaluable 'Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' It has been worth its weight in gold to me. If I express myself rather warmly, you will see that I can not do so too warmly, when I inform you of the extent to which I have, through it, been benefited. I will state my situation when I obtained your book through the merest curiosity I look upon it as one of the most fortunate events of my life. I had been married some ten years, and was the father of seven children. I was long struggling unceasingly, to the end that I might gain a moderate competency, but the results of my utmost exertions at the end left me about where I was at the beginning of each year; and that only, with the most stinted economy, sufficing with barely the necessaries of life. Finally, this constant effort was beginning to have its effect upon my health: I felt less capable to endure its continuance, while I felt the necessity of perseverance.

"This constant, unceasing struggle on my part was imperative, in consequence of the prostrated condition of my wife (with occasional intermission) for six years, much of the time confined to her bed, and of course incapable of taking the charge and management of household affairs. Her condition arose from causes of which I was ignorant. Oh! what would I have given had I the six years to live over again! What would my wife have given to have been spared the long days and still longer nights prostrate on a bed of sickness!—all of which would have been avoided, had I then seen a copy of 'THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION.'"

From a Physician.

DANGEROUS DELIVERIES,

OBSTRUCTIONS, IRREGULARITIES, &C.

How many are suffering from obstruction or irregularities peculiar to the female system, which undermine their health, the effects of which they are ignorant, and for which their delicacy forbids seeking medical advice! How many suffer from prolapsus uteri (falling of the womb), or from fluor-albus (weakness, debility, &c., &c)! How many are in constant agony for many months preceding confinement! How many have difficult if not dangerous deliveries, and whose lives are jeoparded during such time, will find in its pages the means of prevention, amelioration, and relief!

Extract from a Letter.

To those just Married.—"Had I known!"

"PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU: Had I known of the important matters treated of in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion' some years ago, how much misery I might have escaped! I have suffered years from causes which you point out in your book, without knowing what to do. I obtained a copy, and found my case treated of. I trust every female will avail herself of the information contained in its pages."

Letters are daily received of this character, unnecessary to present.

To those yet unmarried, but contemplating marriage, or perhaps hesitating as to the propriety of incurring the responsibilities attendant upon it, the importance of being possessed of the revelations contained in these pages, so intimately involving their future happiness, can not be appreciated.

It is, of course, impracticable to convey more fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage; neither is it necessary, since it is every one's duty to become possessed of knowledge whereby the sufferings to which a wife, a mother, or a sister, may be subject, can be obviated.

FOR FEMALES AND MALES

Dr. Lazetti's Juno Cordial, or Protective Elixir.

This is the only actual remedy ever discovered for impetency, Genital Debility, Nocturnal Emissions, and all diseases occasioned by certain secret habits; and many of the nostrums recently recommended for the same complaints are worthless imitations which its unrivalled excellence, fame and popularity have brought into the market. The Medical Faculty of Europe and the United States are unanimous in their recommendations of the Juno Cordial and have not given their sanction in a single instance that has been authenticated, to any compound for the same purposes. The nature of the maladies relieved by the Juno Cordial are generally such as to leave the publication of certificates of cures out of the question, or the proprietor could produce a host of the most conclusive testimony to show that the great reputation that it enjoys was not accidentally obtained, but is firmly based upon its positive, and apparently miraculous virtues. In all directions are to be found the happy parents of healthy offspring, who would not have been so, but for this extraordinary preparption. And it is equally potent in the many diseases for which it is recommended. Objection has been naturally made to the price of the Juno Cordial, because the trash that has been thrown into the market in opposition to it is sold cheaper; but the fact is, the Cerdial cannot be afforded for less, and ought to be much dearer, as many of the ingredients which compose it are among the costliest things in nature; whereas the others are made up of cheap drugs, worth but little in money, and less in merit. We assure the reader that the utmost reliance may be placed on the Juno Cordial in the cure of the maladies mentioned above, and also those that follow, viz: Loss of Muscular Energy, Physical Lassitude and General Prostration, Irritability, and all Nervous Affections, Indigestion, Sluggishness of the Liver, Gleet, Lucorrhoea or Whites, and Flour Albus and every disease in any way connected with the disorder of the Procreative Functions—in all of which it will afford almost immediate relief, and, if used as directed, is almost certain to produce a positive and permanent cure. Persons about to marry, if conscious of any weakness or disability of a certain nature, should take this Cordial, as it will infallibly restore health and vigor in a brief period, and where want of offspring is a cause of regret, if recourse be had to it the most beneficial results may be anticipated with confidence. It is of priceless value to those without offspring. It has taken the precedence in Italy and will in all other countries where it may become known.

It also possesses the unrivalled qualities of curing incipient Consumption, and I have administered it with great success to patients who have sought our delightful climate for the restoration of their health and the result is that a medicine has been added to the catalogue for the cure of insipient consumption.

To spread wide the blessings of this medicine, I have appointed Messrs. Judson & Co., of the City of New York, in the United States of America, my sole Agents for its sale; and none can be genuine unless it comes through them, and their signature is on the weapper.

The Slaver's Last Cargo.

BY A FORETOPMAN.

Not many years since. one of the finest specimens of a clipper built brig I ever stepped on board of, had successfully run large cargoes of Africans into sly ports on the Brazilian, coast, in the very teeth of lynx-eyed British and American cruisers—and after discharging, she would sweep in by the Sugar Loaf and come to in the placid and romantic harbor of Rio de Janerio, divested of every appearance of the regular "black bird." Her repeated sucess was no flattering compliment to those employed in the suppression of the "traffic," and corresponding exertions were made by several naval gentleman who sported the gold band, to capture the slippery slaver.

About three days sail to the southward of Mozambique, on the coast of Africa, is a noted slave pen, so admirably bulwarked by rocks and quicksand bars, that not one save an adept at negro stealing would suppose a vessel could be safely piloted through the doubtful entrance. One of light draught, however, might pass the bar when the tide was full—but should a flaw strike her head sails, it would send her keel beyond hope of escape, for the ebb tide would beat the ribs out of a seventy-four. The entrance was critical, and for the purpose to which it had been devoted, it was invaluable.

Under the covering of so lowering a sky, the "black bird" referred to, effected her entrance through the contracted channel one night, and running up the the creek to which it led, a short distance, dropped her anchor. The process of taking in an "assorted cargo" was speedily executed, and forty-eight hours from the time her long raking masts hovered back of the towering cocoa-nut grove, skirting the narrow stream in which she lay secure from observation by sea, the gaskets confining her head sails were cast off, and she was gradually edging her way towards the dangerous entrance, her middle deck crowded to suffocation with the manacled forms of over three hundred beings, "cursed with a skin darker than Christian white man's." As intimated, she, was a model craft—and Baltimore built clipper. Her ability to beat to windward was equal to that of most vessels for running free—and as for a chase nothing pleased her handsome captain so well—for so succesful had he ever been, that a spy glass view of the "ginger-bread work" adorning her cabin windows was all her pursuers had ever been able to. gain. The main dependence of the Sea Bird was the long tapering engine of death hung on a pivot amidships, although for an emergency she carried guns capable of doing, execution in close quarters. The splintered bulwarks of more than one slave chaser bore testimony to the accuracy of her gunner's practised eye.

Having an unusually valuable cargo on board, the captain of the Sea Bird felt solicitous of makig short work of it, and to that end he kept his brig trimmed to her best sailing point, and nobly she requitted the care. For several days a vessel had been seen hovering on their bows, but too far ahead to be made out with certainty watching their movements. Did the slaver alter his course a point, the phantom-ship ahead followed suit—was sail-shortened in order to inerase the distance between them, the vessel ahead did the same. As they approched the Brazilian coast, every nautical feint was called into requisition to mislead the curious sail, forever lowering on the horizon's verge, but in vain.

Thus situated, land was made, and by the aid of his glass the slaver was enabled to recognise in the strange vessel the far-famed English man-of-war-brig, whose captain knew from observation almost every slave pen on the African coast, and who had taken into Rio more prizes than any other two government vessels afloat. The snare into which the slaver had been decoyed was enhanced in danger from its being in the thoroughfare of transcient cruisers, sent up and down the coast by the commanders of the naval stations at Rio for the purpose of exercising the men. No alternative remained but to lead for the land, and if interrupted fight his was through.

Early the next morning the two brigs were under easy sail, the Englishman ahead to windward. The Sea Bird speedily lessened the distance between them. As they neared each other, not more than two or three of the crew of the slaver were visible from the Englishman's deck, and the ugly customer aft of her foremast was screened by a tarpaulin.—Her Majesty's brig clewed her top gallant sails which soon brought them in speaking distance, and she dropped under the lee of the slaver, a clear voice hailed:

"Brig ahoy!"

"Aye, aye."

"What brig's that?"

"The Sea Bird, at your service," returned the slaver captain.

"Send your boat aboard," said her Majesty's officer.

"Aye, aye," was echoed back from the slaver, but no effort made to lower a boat. Well knowing the character he had to deal with, an iron messenger from the english brig intimated to the slaver that her Majesty's officer was in earnest. But the smoke from the discharge had sereely lifted from the breech of the gun, before a broadside from the Sea Bird came crash along the deck, prostrating three noble sailors! Incensed at the piratical rojoinder of the "black bird," the deck of the English brig was cleared for action. Bracing his yards sharp up, he positioned himself to speak to her to some purpose. A shot from one of his forward guns sent the head of the Sea Bird's foretopmost flying from its place, which brought thundering upon her deck, her top gallant and royal mast yards, top-hamper and all, so effectually crippling her head sails that she refused to obey her helm, and paying off before the wind was in momentary danger of running the English brig abroad.

Taking advantage of her disabled condition, the Englishmen luffed up just in time to swing clear, and while running by each other the grapplings were thrown, and in a twinkling the two vessels were fast. Above the crash of the meeting brigs, and the hurrying to and fro of men, arose the order of—"Boarers away!" But the desperate slavers were ready for the charge, and hand to hand, disputed every inch the boarders advanced. The contest was all in favor of the English, when suddenly the slavers retreated aft in a body, just in time to escape the discharge of the "Long Tom," which had been loaded with spikes and chain links by the gunner during the melee in anticipation of the result. The match was applied, and a mangled mass of flesh and blood strewed the forward deck of the slaver. The rolling of the two vessels snapped the graplings at this moment, and they slowly seperated only to renew the conflict in another form. As the English brig settled down in the trough of the sea, a shot from the Sea Bird shivered the head of the mainmast.

Both vessles were terribly cut up. The slaver's starboard bow was entirely shot away, and the light shone through her bulwarks fore and aft, while the Englishman's boats were completely annihilated, his mainmast in danger of falling, several of his men killed or disabled, and his vessel leaking badly. So intent were they upon the mutual destruction of each other, that a large sloop-of-war hearing the firing several miles to windward, bore down upon them, and was within two miles of the scene of action before her presence was observed. The silky folds of the meteor flag of England wooed the breeze from the mizzen peak, and while its appearance was hailed with wild and prolonged cheers from the English brig's deck, hope yielded precedence to despair in the hearts of the slavers.

The conflict had been desperate and fearfully destructive, but the most heart-sickening scene was in reserve. After the survivors on board the Sea Bird had been cared for, the tightly battened cover of the main hatch was removed, and a spectacle more revolting to humanity never greeted human eyes, than was disclosed by the bright sunlight as it penetrated the dark and densely packed hold of the slaver. The poor slaves had been placed in rows along the decks, as closely as they could be crowded together, and all ironed. The rolling and tumbling of the vessel had thrown them together, in an undistinguishable mass, while the shots from the English brig ploughed the piles of helpless living beings, rending bodies and severing links, until the deck become slippery with the crimson tide of life, and dismembered bodies of the dead and dying were heaped up with the living and breathing survivors.

Libraries have been written, tracts distributed, and sermons preached to set in bright colors the infinite train of evil emanating from this traffic in blood, but could those who deal in human flesh like goods, and chattles, who contend for the white man's right to dispose of his dark skinned neighbor—could they have looked in upon the scene I have attempted to describe, the auctioneer's arm would drop nerveless by his side, the lash of the slave-driver would never again disfigure the persons of the injured sons of Africa.

One hundred of the unhappy wretches incarcerated in that living sepulchre, gazed upon the clear sky and respired the free air to appreciate their worth, the remainder furnished a choice banquet for the monsters of the deep.

Years rolled away and I was again a landsman. One pleasant afternoon I stood admiring the glittering throng as it swept by, forever ebbing and flowing through that mighty artery of New York—Broadway—where, who should I observe approaching, the gayest of the gay, his really elegant figure decked in the extreme of fashion, but the derperado whose hand applied the match to "Long Tom" in the terrible conflict between the English brig and the slaver! It was the Captain of the Sea Bird.—He was now a Spanish Co[illegible]t, rolling in all the luxury wealth could purche[illegible]. Two years later, painful surmises as to the fate of a relative introduced me to the coroner of New York. I visited the dead house, and among the cold, white votaries for the lurid tomb, exposed for recognition, I beheld the corpse of the slaver captain! He who had fettered so many in life, had been forced to yield an unconditional surrender to the grim messenger whose key unlocks the portals to eternity.

A Good Story.

The following capital story we extract from a letter to the Alabama Journal, by J. J. Hooper:

Shall I tell you a bit of a story, having no connection with politics, this hot, dry weather? By permission—

Old Col. D——, of the Mobile District, was one of the most singular characters ever known in Alabama. He was testy and eccentric, but possessed many fine qualities, which were fully appreciated by the people of the district. Many of his freaks are fresh in the memory of the "old 'uns" of Mobile—and all of them will tell you, that the Colonel though hard to beat, was once terribly taken in by a couple of legal tyros. It is George Woodward, I believe that tells the story; but, however, that may be, it is in keeping with others related of the old gentleman.

It seems that Col. D——had a misunderstanding with the two gentlemen alluded to, and was not on speaking terms with them, although all of the three were professionally riding the circuit pretty much together. The young ones being well aware of the Colonel's irrascible nature, determined as they left one of the courts for another, to have some sport at his expense, by the way. They accordingly got about half an hour's start in leaving, and presently arrived at a broad, dark stream that looked as if it might be a dozen feet deep, but which in reality was hardly more than as many inches. Crossing it, they alighted, pulling off their coats and boots, and sat down quietly to watch for the old "Tartar."

Jogging along, at length up came the old fellow. He looked at first at the youngsters who were gravely drawing on their boots and coats, as if they had just had a swim—and then he looked at the broad creek that flowed before him like a fluent translucent star. The Colonel was awfully puzzled.

"Is this creek swimming?" he growled after a pause of some moments.

No reply was made—the young men simply mounted their horses and rode off some little distance and stopped to watch our hero.

The Colonel slowly divested himself of boots, coat, pantaloons and drawers. These he neatly tied up in his handkerchief, and hung them on the horn of the saddle.—Then he remounted; and as he was a fat, short man, with a paunch of inordinate size rather inadequate legs a face like a withered apple, and a brown whig, there is no doubt he made an interesting picture as he bestrode his steed, with the breeze holding gentle dalliance with the extremeties of his only garment.

Slowly and cautiously did the old gentleman and his horse take the creek. Half a length—and the water was not fetlook deep; here the horse stopped to take a drink. A length and a half and the creek no deeper! Thirty feet further, and a decided shoaling!

Here then the Colonel reined up.—"There must," said he, "be a swift, deep chanel betwen this and the bank. See how the water runs! We will dash thro'."

A sharp lash made the horse spring the watery waste, and another carried the horse and rider safely to the opposite bank. The creek was nowhere more than a foot deep. A wild yell from the young 'uns announced the appreciation of the sport, as they galloped away.

On—on—they sped, pursuers and pursued. The youngsters laughed, yelled and screamed, the Colonel dammed with mighty emphasis, while his shirt fluttered and cracked in the wind like a loose flying jib.

On—on—and the pursued passed a farm house on the road side. Their passing startled a flock of geese from a fence corner which, as the Colonel dashed up, met him with outspread wings and elongated necks, and hisses dire; his horse swerved suddenly, and the Colonel in a moment, was upon the ground, in a most romantic 'heap' with his bundle of clothes scattered around!

The white headed children of the house came out first, and took a distant view of the monster—as it seemed to them and then returned to report progress. After a little the father of the family came, and the affair being explained, assisted the Colonel in making his toilette, the Colonel swearing and the countryman laughing all the while.

Dressed and remounted, our hero started on with a woful phiz, and was soon out of sight.

A CONSCIENTIOUS DOG.—My father had a dog of the spaniel breed, whose name was Ponto. Now Ponto, though decidedly waggish in one point, had always given evidence of being more religious than many of his less canine neighbors. True, he would never turn the "other cheek;" and consequently, though he had a good character with the Peace Society, he was scouted by the non-resistants. But Ponto was always regular at church; and in one instance at least, gave evidenee that he went there with an idea that honesty and religion had some connection with each other. He was safe enough in this notion, for a more honest dog than he, never barked. Ponto always walked into church with the family, though he invariably took his seat on the lower stair of the sacred desk, and none but the oldest in the congregation remembered when his seat was vacant.

I ought to have remarked sooner, that Ponto had but one enemy in the wide world; and who was that but the deacon of the church, and our next neighbor! I forget the cause—perhaps some slander against Ponto in the days of his puppyhood, when it must be confessed he was too much addicted to fun to comport with a deaconish idea of propriety. Be that as it may, Ponto growled at nobody but Deacon Drury, and the deacon threw stones at nothing so furiously as at Ponto. If either exemplified the golden rule towards the other, it was Ponto. So things stood at a certain time when the good pastor was called away for a long journey. But, parson or no parson, the family all went to church as usual the following Sabbath: and none with a longer face or more gracious step than Ponto. His accustomed seat was taken—and when the congregation rose for the early morning prayer, Ponto rose with the rest—as he had always done—and stood with closed eyes and open ears, waiting for the first word of supplication. To the utter astonishment of nobody but the sanctimonious Ponto, that word came in the voice of his old enemy, the pious deacon! If the big Bible had fallen on Ponto's tail, he could not have looked for the cause with a more rapid glance than he cast upward to the pulpit. He fixed his eyes on the face of the deacon, as if to be sure of the sacrilege; and then, with a look of pious horror I shall never forget, and a step as fast as the sanctity of the place would allow, he passed out of the house, and took a bye-path home across the field. From that day forth, as long as Ponto lived, he could never be flattered or exhorted to enter the church door again; and whenever from necessity he passed it on week days, it was with a look that said, to all that knew him as I did, "If Deacon Drury prays, the church may count Ponto among the backsliders."

CURING A NIBBLER.—Some people have a very ugly way of laying violent hands on small trifles that don't belong to them, which cost others money, and which they don't think of paying for. Now, it is very well known that greceries pay about the smallest profit of any merchandize; hence the habit of some folks of going into a store to purchase ten or twenty-five cents worth of groceries—to be sent home, too—and while they wait for the goods to be put up, they amuse themselves by a mouthful of sugar, gormandize an apple or two, or guzzle a bunch of raisins, figs, slice of cheese, plug of tobacco, biscuit or whatever else lies around temptingly exposed to view. You may rest assured that people don't trade or traffic for the fun of it, and if you gouge the grocer, he will be justified in keeping square with you, by sending light weight and scant measures. A facetious old mercantile friend of ours up town, was thus bled by a customer, who used to come in daily to order something or other in the grocery line, and who having an amazing sweet tooth in his head, thought nothing of nibbling chunks of sugar, bunches of raisens, &c. One morning, Nibble came into the store before breakfast, evidently disturbed in mind.

Mr. ——, you sent my quarter bill last night?"

"Yes. Sir, I did."

"Well, there's one item I don't understand,—'Nibbles, 3 mos., daily $3.' What the dickens do you mean by that?"

"You keep a dry goods store, Mr. ——?"

"Yes, I do."

"Now, suppose I came in every day to buy two or three shillings' worth of goods, and each time I should levy on a spool of cotton, a paper of needles, or a piece of tape, which I never, of course, thought of accounting for—"

"Oh, ah, yes, yes, I take the force of what you are about to say; those little things do count up. You've got me now."

The bill was paid. The dry goodist did not take the matter as an insult, and, what is more strange—has quit nibbling.

Election.

☞ The election is on Tuesday next; every man then has a duty to perform. He who enjoys the privilege and neglects this duty, the duty to do all in his power that all men may enjoy the same privileges, cannot be a republican; and he who would not, if he was able, walk twenty miles if necessity required it, at night, without a light, thorugh an equinoxial storm, to cast a vote against such imbecile, disingenuous and inviduous legislation as we had last winter deserves, if punishment is ever deserved, forever to be a slave.

Do your own Thinking.

The time has come, if indeed it had not long since arrived, when man, the working man, he who toils for his daily bread, should do his own thinking. Too long has the laboring class been the serfs, the slaves in mind of corrupt and designing men. Our forefathers declared that all men are entitled to liberty, to free thought and free speech on all subjects which concern his welfare; that these thoughts, that this speech is only circumscribed by the equal rights of his fellow man—that it is the sacred duty of every son and daughter of Adam to protect and to be protected in these their inalienable rights. But alas! how far, how very far from this is their present condition? Instead of that mutuality of protection and enjoyment which the sacred rights and true and permanent interests of each enjoins, a few monopolise the privileges which belong alike to all; such is his present condition in this boasted land of Liberty! The few, the cunning and designing few, usurp through the ignorance and the prejudices of society all man's dearest and most sacred rights. Is he poor, though possessing the mind of a Hanock, of an Adams, a Gerry, a Franklin, though possessed of the virtues of a Washington, he is denied in many of these United States, and especially in New Jersey, the rights which they declared an Almighty God had endowed him with. How is this, and why is this? It is because they would barter that noble gift of God—their free and independent thoughts and actions consequent thereon for a miserable mess of potage—for the miserable principle of self, the beastly comforts of indolence and vice, the sensualities and pride and trappings of the fool, rather than the enobling virtues of the mind, the self denying principles of the gospel of the everliving God, as indelibly imprinted on that mind by the Almighty Maker of heaven and earth—to be good and to do good to our fellow man. If we prefer the sophistries, the bland smile and fawning sycophancy of bawling politicians and the self eulogised teachings of hypocritical and time serving priests to a more laborious investigation and thought of our own, then have we none to blame but ourselves if they usurp our rights in this world, and monopolise, in expectancy at least, the tickets for the next.

Man is but a man as he makes use of the faculties that God has endowed him with—as he makes use of that which distinguishes him above the brutes; food and shelter does not do that, it is the thinking sentient faculties of the mind or the operations of these in reflection and comparison and conclusion with the independent action which such reflection and comparison produce which constitutes man, and makes him the image and reflection of his maker. Now the question is, how many are there who thus enjoy the birthright with which he was endowed by his God? The irrestible conclusion is forced upon the mind that there are indeed but few. Look abroad upon our political and religious organizations and see who they are and what they are and how many there are who do the thinking for the entire community; in the one the political party demagogue entirely usurps what properly it is the duty of the people, the mass, to perform; in the other the secrarian partisan and the Pharisee is most conspicuous; thus it is left for the few, men who mostly prefer self aggrandisement and man worship to the good of the people or the advancement of morality and virtue, to do that which properly belongs to every thinking being to perform for himself. Can we justly expect then that these automatons, these beasts of burthen, that these empty immages that lack that essential part which constitutes him a man in the immage of his Maker—mind, thought—that they should enjoy these rights? No, never; they must possess the qualifications which constitute them men; they must first throw off the yoke that binds them—think, and act, and investigate for themselves—read their Bibles, their histories, and examine their Constitutions and their laws, and resolve to become men, freemen, to think, to act and TO BE—then, and never until then, will they become men—men free and independent in mind, with free thoughts and free speech, exercising those charities and virtues which so essentially constitute them men—and which irresistibly impel them to be good and to do good.

God never intended man for the miserable being we see him, he was created upright in the immage of his Maker, and endowed by Him with faculties and perceptions which will, if made use of, bring him back and continue him in this condition; it is by the abuse of these faculties, the neglect to exercise them that man has become the degraded being we too often see him. If we would regain this condition we must make use of these faculties, not like the ape or baboon by a mechanical imitation or mimiery of those who choose to lead, or to teach us, but by an active employment of the faculties of the mind, by an examination into the constituent principles of the actions of men and things; "There is no other way given under heaven whereby men can be saved"—whereby they can enjoy the inalienable rights which pertain to thinking, sentient beings.

Men indeed have been groping their way in darkness for ages, shackeled by worse than iron bands, by the manacles of superstition and ignorance, and thus made the willing tools, the degraded slaves of a pampered and haughty priesthood, and of corrrupt and tyranical kings, until liberty, God endowed liberty has well nigh been banished from off the earth; but thanks, ten thousand thanks to the bold spirits who suggested the idea of thinking, who dared to employ what Almighty God had endowed them with, the free actions which his free thoughts had inspired him with; dare think aloud, dare act out before the self annointed and self appointed kings and priests ofthe earth, the free inspirations of their thoughts. What is Christianity, what is Liberty without free thougnts and free speech? Liberty had been known only by name on the earth, Christianity had flourished pure and undefiled, but had been corrupted and banished the earth, by the suppression of free thought and free speech until darkness and the shadow of death overspread the Land. How great our obligations to those bold spirits who dare assert their right to free thoughts and free speech, who dare face to face with the tyrant question his right to the keys of the kingdom of heaven and his appointment of God's vicegerent on earth. Will men return to this state of things by ceasing to think for themselves, will they thus yield up the benefits these bold men have at great sacrifices procured? Will they yield up the benefits that has accrued to us by the exercise of these principles by our forefathers and return to that miserable vassalage from which they rescued us? such indeed will soon be our condition unless men exercise their rights. Let the haughty tyrants know that you think, that you are determined to enjoy your God endowed rights by assuming the character of men, by assming by the exercise of thought the likeness of Him by whom they were created. How great the blesings which has thus flowed, which is yet to flow by free thought and free speech.

There can be no proxy substituted in liberty or religion; every man must pertake of the benefits and privileges of the one or the comforts and consolations of the other, personally, or else are they as though they were not. We trust therefore that all men, by whatever political, social, or religious name known, in the coming and in all future elections or occasions for the exercise of these his sacred privileges will act in accordance with these suggestions, that they will have the independence to act or more especially to think for themselves, for then shall the fetters of our tyrants fall harmless at our feet, and Liberty and Christianity lift us up to the position which God designed men created in his image should occupy.

☞ Of all contemptible resorts to prejudice and influence the public against a candidate that of traducing his private character is about the meanest and more especially when it relates to his religious opinions. We hold in utter contempt the individual or the Press that resorts to so illiberal so base an act. What, shall a man be decried because he belongs to this, that or the other church, or because he will not assume the hypocracy of some who do! Has not a man a right to reject them all or to belive in any which his conscience may dictate to him is right? If not, which is most orthodox and which shall be made the established religion? Is this indeed a free, liberal and independent country when such vile trash is made use of as argument to advance a cause! Our government professes to make no distinction on account of religious opinions, it professes to regard alike the christian and the infidel; in this respect, in all respects their rights are equal, they are alike eligible to its honors; the history of all governments conclusively prove the wisdom and juitice of such a course. A liberal and enlightened community we trust will sustain the equal rights of all men by frowning indignatly on all attempts to create a distinction by so illiberal, so bigoted, so unjust a course.

A Little too Late.

The whigs have held all their conventions and passed resolutions, but in all cases they have kept entirely mute on the meassures of reform which the Democracy have proposed for public consideration. Nine-tenths of the whig press have kept silent, opposed or ridiculed those measures. But now within two weeks, their speakers, in some places, and some of their presses have made the discovery, and now, with serious faces, proclaim it to the world, that the whigs are the originators and only friends of Educational reform, abolition of frehold qualification, equal taxation, homestead exemption, general instead of special laws, the Union now and forever, and about these subjects some of them affect all the zeal peculiar to new converts. They see that the people are determined to carry those measures and then, all of a sudden they discover that they are champions of those very measures. Such pretences however, are to specious to deceive any one. The people well remember how, year after year, as the democrats brought those measures in at one door of the legislature, the whigs kicked them out at the other. It will not do—such death-bed repentance is suspicious—it is brought about by fear and dread, and will only last till the fear of defeat is past; and besides all that, it is only a portion of the party that espouses those measures. They are committed to nothing and intend, if elected to do nothing except parcel out the spoils of office. 'Let no such men be trusted.'—Morristown Banner.

Cheering Signs.

The signs of the times clearly indicate that the Democratic party and its measures in this state, are rapidly gaining ground in the confiidence of the public. The Newark Daily Advertiser, the organ of the whig party, and index of its hopes, fears and policy, has been sadly puzzled for the last week or more, what to do and where to go in hope to day in fear to morrow, whirling about like the vane on the church steeple, north, east, south and west. One instane will illustrate and explain both the fact and its cause. In its leading article of the 11th, it denounces in one sweep, the democratic party of this state and all its proposed measures, fairly ridiculing and hooting at them with genuine delight. You could see it was the true feeling of the heart, so full, and bitter. It points right East. But lo! on the 14th, its humor, or rather policy, is changed and to the very opposite direction, and in favor of those very measures of reform inscribed on the dem ocratic banner. It has found out that the current is too strong to stem, and so boldly whirls about, and goes with, instead of against it, singing and warbling reform with the vociferations of a Jenny Lind. It now points due West. Nay, it labors hard and with most honied words, to prove that it always did point exactly, in the same direction, and that all these measures of reform spring from the whig party, their early, true and fast friend, their very father, and that every former denunciation or opposition was a mere feint to draw the democratic party on. Good, very good, and although the old adage says, that you can't blow hot and blow cold with the same breath, yet we wont quarrel with the editor on this account, whilst he is helping us forward. Only one piece of advice we will give him, and that is, stick as you are—you face in the right direction now—and we promise you a sight in November next, (that will gratify to the heart, if not you, it will us, which is still better,) of that same banner borne aloft by a victorous Fort.

Democrats, rejoice, be up and doing; dout, uncertainty and fear distracted the ranks of your political opponents, and the signs of your approaching victory are most cheering and evident.—Newbrunswick Union.

Fugitive Slave Law.

For the Plainfield Gazette.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—I received your paper of the 17th instant through the Post Office this day, probably intended to notify me of the proceedings of the National Reform Convention lately held at Newark; for this mark of attention I return many thanks, although I have long since retired from active political life and have no desire to return. My object in writing at this time is to notice an article in the Gazette under the caption, "Fugitive Slave Law." I very much regret that you have thought proper in that article to address yourselves to the passions, the prejudices, and religious feelings of your readers rather than to their good sense, their patriotism, and their calm, sober, and dispassionate judgment.

We profess to be a law abiding people, we make our own laws, and they generally reflect the degree of intelligence, virtue and patriotism of a majority of our fellow citizens, and when our laws have passed through all the forms of the different departments of legislation and received their sanction we are bound to obey them until constitutionally repealed, however objectionable some persons may suppose them to be. It is true we have the right to express our opinion of all laws, and to expose their errors, their wrongs, their injustice or oppression, and if we can satisfy a majority that such laws are injurious to society, they will demand their repeal, but all violent or unreasonable opposition to our laws must be considered as treasonable or revolutionary.

Now the laws in question was passed upon by the best, most intelligent, and patriotic men of our country, of both political parties, has received the sanction of the President of the United States, its constitutional affirmed by the highest legal authority, the attorney general and the judges of the courts who have been called on to act under the law, after having received the sanction of such high authority, most assuredly the law is entitled to respectful consideration and trial, if its provisions prove injurious then let it be repealed.

The White and the Black are evidently two distinct races of men placed on different or separate portions of the earth, and in climates suited to their respective constitutions, and never have, nor can they live in harmony in the same community upon political and social equality. The governments in St. Domingo, and on the coast of Africa do not admit the white men to citizenship or a participation in their governments, this is natural and proper. In Mexico the two races have amalgamated for more than a century past, the consequence is, that the mixed breed has degenerated, it has inherited most of the bad qualities of the parent stocks, hence the continual revolutions, wars, assassinations and crimes among that people.

"The wide difference between the different classes of the human race are not to be disregarded by human laws. The laws of our nature will prevail in the end against the weaker enactments of those who seek to frustate and equalize the two races in the United States. What God has sanctioned it is useless for man to war against. As we cannot then hope to see political and social equality between the two races under the same government, if the African race ever get their freedom they must have a government of their own, insolated from the white race." We have no slavery in the state of New-Jersey, we long since performed what we supposed to be our duty, and abolished slavery by law. We have nothing to do with slavery in other states, and are bound by the Constitution to return them to the states and owners from whence they may have fled.

Our ancestors committed a great wrong in bringing the Negro from his own country to this, and it has imposed the duty on us their posterity to instruct them, and restore them to their own country. This duty has already been commenced by the colonization societies, and must and will receive the aid of government until we have atoned for the transgression of our ancestors in bringing them here. We may differ in our views of providential events or interpositions in the actions of men. I believe in one general law which governs all physical, and moral nature, that all actions of men whether as individuals, or as a community will be right or wrong in proportion to their conformity, or departure, to that one law, and the effect will be good, or evil, (upon the principle of cause and effect, and not from any special interposition of providence.) We therefore when we discover that we have committed an error, we have an opportunity, and the ability to forsake the wrong, and make amends as far as possible by discovering the right, and pursuing it. It is the obstinate perseverance in wrong which produces oppression, injustice, political convulsions, revolutions and wars. The people under our form of government have it in their power by a wise conformity to the laws of nature in all our acts of legislation, to avoid all such evils as a nation or as individuals.

I must bespeak a place in your columns for the above remarks, that your readers may see other views, and other counsels. M. JAQUES.

Rahway, Oct. 21. 1850.

Remarks.

We give place to the above communication criticising our remarks on the Fugitive Slave Law with pleasure—our motto is "Freedom to all opinions candidly expressed"—that "other views and other councils" may be seen. We will remark that we should be pleased to hear from the writer again, either on this or any other subject, at his convenience.

We should have been pleased to have had the above criticisms side by side with the article they condemn, being satisfied that their juxta position is all that is necessary to convince the "good sense, the patriotism, the calm, sober and dispassionate judgment" of our readers of their justice and truth. But rather than a repetition of that to our readers we will make a few comments on the above.

It is true "We profess to be a law abiding people," but not to the loss of our rights. It is a debateable question whether "we make our own laws" or that this law "was passed upon by the best, most wise, most intelligent and patriotic men;" at least they evidently showed as their motives party and self aggrandizement, particplarly the latter; it was too lightly screened to deceive the most casual obsesver; this shows neither wisdom nor patriotism; that it is unconstitutional we do not hesitate to say, notwithstanding it is "sanctioned by the president and the highest legal authority." It abrogates the habeas corpus act, denies trial by jury, and even if it did not, the constitution of the United States has no more power to abrogate or alienate man's rights than the crown of Great Britian had; "Whenever" is the language that conveys the self-evident proposition of that immaculate and immortal charter of our liberties, the Declaration of Independence, "any government becomes destructive of these ends, (to protect life and liberty) it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles, and organising its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness." This, it continues to say "it is their right, it is their duty to throw off such government, and to provide new guards for their future security." Thus it will be perceived that if our article is considered "as treasonable or revolutionary" (the doctrine that tyrants always advance) that we are backed by most excellent most satisfactory authority; authority that we trust will ever be proudly acknowledged, and which we shall ever be but too happy, to the extent of our humble abllities to follow, and we trust to God (more "appeals to the passions") that every sentient being who was and is endowed with inalienable rights to lose, will adopt this doctrine, which was made by our forefathers the fundamental basis of our government, and which is the only safeguard to the rights and liberties of mankind.

We would have it distinctly understood therefore by all whom it may concern, (which is every man it the community) that we have and shall make no hesitation in resisting this law, even unto the sacrifice of life, should opportunity and necessity require it; and we would call upon all in the language of those who for our sakes risked the consequences, "it is their duty" to resist such abrogation of the first principle of our government—for the only principle for which they with tyrants contended

"The white and the black race are evidently two distinct races of men." This is also a debateable question and one which has nothing to do with the question at issue—their rights, the rights of man.—It is enough for us to know that they are thinking beings, created by the same God, endowed by him with the same passions, nourished by the same fond parents, suffer from the same pains, partake of the same enjoyments; liberty is as sweet to them, Slavery is the same degrading and desponding bondage; they are amenable to and should be protected by the same laws, as they are amenable to and are protected and punished by the same "general law" of God.

As for social equality, that by no means follows; the rights of men, even the social rights of white men do not imply an equality—an amalgamation of all classes and degrees; this is not now nor can be their condition until they all equally enjoy by fulfilling the conditions of their being, by becoming by the cultivation of their minds, men in the image of their Maker. Henry Clay and Lewis Cass have both equal political rights, they have both aspired to be president of these United States, but the people have said nay; it does not therefore follow that that they do not enjoy equal political rights with those who have filled that office; neither does it follow that Sambo must, or that he must marry the daughter of the white man. So much for the bugaboo of amalgamation, and so much therefore for its consequences which occupy nearly all that follows of the above criticisms.

"What God has sanctioned it is useless for man to war against." This our critique very wisely omits to sustain by argument; God never sanctioned Slavery; we defy the proof; the days of supersaition has gone by, priests and kings no longer through its horrid rites and unmeaning ceremonies possess the power to corrupt and enslave the minds and bodies of men; "the powers that be" are no longer "ordained of God;" thanks to the bold and indomitable spirit of our forefathers who dared to think, the powers that be are now claimed to be ordained by the People.

It is finally admitted in the summing up all we contend for, and which our forefathers made the fundamental basis, the only condition of our support, of the support of all men to the government—the inalienable right of all men to life and Liberty, and to be protected in their enjoyment. The wrong to this people is admitted, our duty to remedy the wrong is admitted, but the how and the when is too indefinite. To living thinking beings an hour may be too late. Let us therefore while it is to-day agitate and organize to extend the principles and blessings of Liberty. Let us cease to be a reproach and a bye-word to the nations of the earth; let us cease to be hypocrites in the sight of God and man; let us in fact and in deed as we do in name only, enjoy, extend and perpetuate the inestimable and inalienable right of all men to Liberty.

☞ Great excitement still prevails in Boston in relation to the Fugitive Slave Law. Writs still remain in the Sheriff's hands unexecuted. The following resolutions were passed at a large meeting of colored people held at Belknap-st church.

Resolved, "That God willed us free: Man willed us Slaves. We will as God wills: God's will be done."

Resolved, That our oft repeated determination to resist oppression is the same now as ever—and we pledge ourselves at all hazards, to resist unto death, any attempt upon our liberties.

Resolved, That as South Carolina seizes and imprisons colored seamen from the North, under the plea that it is to prevent insurrection and rebellion among her population—the authorities of this State and City in particular, be requested to lay hold of, and put in prison, immediately, any, and all Fugitive Slave hunters who may be found among us, upon the same ground, and for similar reasons.

☞ The Democrats of this District held their Convention at Elizabethtown on Wednesday last, and nominated Rodman M. Price, of Jersey City, as their candidate for Congress.

Sheriff—William H Pierson of Orange.

☞ Wholesale and Retail Carpet and Oil Cloth Warehouse, 136 William Street, N. Y. Mr WILLIAM McGRORTY Proprietor.—Is favorably known to the community and the merchants in many parts of the Union The system by which he is governed in the purchase and sale of goods, has for a series of years afforded such advantages to those who were in the habit of procuring their supplies at his establishment—either for public sale or domestic use—have invariably been continued by them to the present time; and is conclusive evidence of the superiority of his goods, and the smallness of his profits.

The politeness and gentlemanly attention of himself and his indifatigable assistants, to give that satisfaction to a discriminating community which the great patronage extended to him naturally calls forth, fully demonstrates that the proprietor is justly aware of the duties which his business engagements imposes upon him, and is determined that no exertion on his part shall be wanting to merit the countenance and support of his friends, and the public generally.

MECHANICAL MEDICINE.

Dr. Banting, formerly of this city, asks to announce that he has returned to 341 Broadway; for consultation and management of weaknesses of the vocal, pulmonary, digestive, nervous, spinal and female systems; and also of the drooping, languor and physical deformities, which are so destructive of both health and beauty at the present day.

As these and kindred maladies are usually the result of a violation of the laws of physical organization, he will treat them chiefly by those exercises, mechanical appliances and reformatory habits of body, in conjunction with hydropathy galvanism and other discoveries of the day, which, united with the cooperative efforts of the subject, are calculated to relieve and restore the energies of the suffering and neglected organs.

Having spent several years in traveling for investigation and practical experiment on the subject, he has, at length, greatly improved and multiplied his surgical and mechanical appliances for the purpose. In addition to his new supports for female and spinal weaknesses, are some combining the properties of a universal hernial truss and an effective general support, with which he challenges cases of general debility, constipation, piles and prolapsus, ani, lencorrhea, prolapsus uteri and every variety of hernia.

The distinctive peculiarity of these devices is, that they do not weaken or restrain the motions or growth of the suffering parts, but act imitatively and concordantly with the mathematical genius of the body's forces. Hence, by a most comfortable and gentle pressure, they at once give great support and render the oppressed system eligible to its own restoration.

Feeble invalids coming from a distance will command prompt and faithful attention.

For more definite information, see his revised edition of "Animal Mechanics," and also his circular, which will be sent gratuitously when requested.

His improved body-braces, spinal supports and supporter trusses applied at his office (341 Broadway) and to be had wholesale and retail. City and country physicians and druggists are invited to call and examine Office hours from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. [121.

JESSEE VAIL.

GREAT MEDICAL WORK.—W. HOLDREDGE, 140 FULTON-STREET, NEW-YORK, Bookseller and Stationer, has just published a new book, entitled "Medical Information for the Million, or the True Guide to Health," on reformed principles; containing a new theory of life and death; with nearly one hundred fine illustrations. Price in leather and cloth, $1 50; paper $1; 12mo 528pp.—By Chas. D. Hammond, M. D. Member of the Electric School of Medicine &c. Being plain advice to both sexes, in the treatment of Nervous, Consumptive, Scrofulous and other complaints. To which is added an Essay on Sexual Diseases, including the symptoms and treatment of Syphilitic complaints, Masturbation, Seminal Debility, Barrenness, &c. We are assured, on the highest medical authority that the volume here offered to the public, is of a character that claims the attention of every intelligent person in the land, that has any regard for the welfare and happiness of the human family. It unfolds information of the most vital importance to the sickly and unhappy of all classes and conditions in life, whether Male or Female, Married or Single, Old or Young. They will here find a life-like portrait of their individual case—the cause, symptoms, accurate prescriptions and directions, by which a safe and speedy cure can be accomplished; thus saving the delicate wife, mother or daughter, from the necessity and expense of becoming graduates of the recently founded female medical college, in order to save their sex from the dangerous practice of ignorant quacks. The time has come when young and old of both sexes should make themselves acquainted with the fearful and wonderful workmanship of the Divine Architect in the anatomy of the human system. He has made nothing but what its study was designed to make us wise, good, and happy. Is it not for the want of a knowledge of the structure and uses of the human system, that we see and experience so much sickness sorrow, and distress? and is it not for the want of this necessary information, that thousands of our youth are led astray by delusive habits of vice, and annually go down to a premature grave? A thousand times the cost of this work bears no comparison to the awful consequences of such misfortunes. We believe in the old proverb, that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." "We regard it as an important work, and doubt not it will find its way into every family in the Union."—Atlas. "It has evidently a good purpose; aims to accomplish an object highly desirable and purely benevolent—There is a degree of both physiological and pathological information, which may not only be safely, but with the highest utility, communicated indiscriminately to the bulk of readers"—Evangelist.

In order to give everybody an opportunity of possessing this valuable book, it has been neatly bound in paper, and as an inducement to clubs and others, thirteen copies will be sent as per order, on the receipt of $10; six on the receipt of $5; and single copies for $1. HERNIA.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.—This disorder, of very frequent occurrence, may be considered as arising through weakness of the abdominal walls, inducing an enlargement in the natural openings formed therein for the transmission of blood and other vessels; such openings being enlarged, permit the escape of bowels or other viscera of the abdomen, devolving hernial swellings or rupture, which most generally occur outwardly, as at the navel, groins and thighs.

The complaint is likely to happen at birth, and therefore should be carefully looked for by those having the charge of children, that it may be arrested and cured promptly. It also occurs at any period of life, to either sex, without regard to the condition or mode of living, and when found, should be attended to without delay—the final penalty being death, and that may be induced through strangulation at any moment.

RUPTURES, are always to be treated with the surgical instruments known as Trusses and Supporters, and these require to be skillfully applied. With this view, the HULL'S TRUSS OFFICE, now established some thirty years, has under the various managers, presented to the public both male and female attendants to apply its instruments directly to the persons, which is preferable in all cases, and has also made improvement at different times, showing that advancement which study and practice only yield toward the relief of this malady.

With much pleasure the fact is now published, that recent improvements BUTLER'S TRUSS PADS have been made, and sufficiently tested upon numerous cases to warrant, through the cures already affected, their submission to the public, as being in adaptation and efficiency superior to any heretofore made known.

These improvements, recently patented, are now being applied at this office, 4 Vesey street, in cases of rupture, gravitation of the bowels, prolapsus uteri, prolapsus ani and piles.

The public may rely upon that care being made in their application, which will most likely tend to the final cure of the several complaints.

Hull's Truss Office, 4 Vesey street, Astor House, opposite St. Paul's Church, New-York.

FRED'K M BUTLER, Proprietor.

N. B.—The ladies' department is attended by a female qualified to fit the instruments, having so attended this office for many years.

THOUSANDS

Have tested its efficacy, and thousands more are now under treatment; and not one solitary case of failure has yet been reported. Volumes could be filled with certificates of those who have been permanently cured; but it is considered that the testimony of a few well known citizens will answer every purpose. The reader will find, on looking TESTIMONIALS, they are not 'got up' for the occason; but that they are bona fide letters from gentlemen living in our midst, and who can be seeen daily at their places of business.

READ, AND SATISFY YOURSELVES:

Read the following from an eminent Physician:

The undersigned being acquainted with some of the ingredints of HUTCHINGS' VEGETABLE DYSPEPSIA BITTERS, and having used it for some time in his practice with every desired effect, here commends this medicine from the certainty of its effect and gives it a preference over all preparations in medicine for that distressing complaint, Dyspepsia.

T. HARDENBERGH, M. D., No. 1 Beach street N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half; during a greater portion of this time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself until he was recommended to try HUTCHINGS' DYSPEPSIA BITTERS: he very soon derived a benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of HUTCHINGS' BITTERS for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine. L. B. WYMAN. 23 Burling Slip.

New York, September 3. 1849.

The following certificate is from M. B. Brady, the celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness. I was advised to take Hutching's Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease, and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia.

M. B. BRADY, No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

The proprietor of this medicine has received many other certificates of cures, equally remarkable, of the various diseases for which this preparation is applicable; but the above are deemed necessary to satisfy any unprejudiced mind of its value and superiority above all other preparations.

Circulars, containing the Certificates of Remarkable Cures and the high estimation in which this Medicine is held by the Public Press, can be had of the Agent, free. ☞ Price 50 cents per Bottle.

CHERRY PECTORAL:

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, ASTHMA, WHOOPING-COUGH AND CONSUMPTION.

The uniform success which has attended the use of this preparation—its salutary effect—its power to relieve and cure affections of the Lungs, have gained for it a celebrity equalled by no other medicine. We offer it to the afflicted with entire confidence in its virtues, and the full belief that it will subdue and remove the severest attacks of disease upon the throat and Lungs. These results, as they become publicly known, very naturally attract the attention of medical men and philanthropists everywhere.—What is their opinion of CHERRY PECTORAL may be seen in the following:—

VALENTINE MOTT, M. D.,

Prof. Surgery Med. College, New York, says:—

"It gives me pleasure to certify the value and efficacy of Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL, which I consider peculiarly adapted to cure diseases of the Throat and Lungs."

THE RT. REV. LORD BISHOP FIELD

writes in a letter to his friend, who was fast sinking under an affection of the Lungs:—"Try the CHERRY PECTORAL and if any medicine can give you relief, with the blessing of God that will."

CPIEF JUSTICE EUSTIS,

of Louisiana, writes "That a young daughter of his was cured of several severe attacks of Croup by the "CHERRY PECTORAL."

ASTHMA AND BRONCHITIS.

The Canadian Journal of Medical Science states, "That Asthma and Bronchitis so prevalent in this inclement climate, has yielded with surprising rapidity to Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL, and we cannot too strongly recommend this skilful preparation to the Profession and public generally."

Let the relieved sufierer speak for himself:—

HARTFORD, Jan. 26. 1847.

Dr. J. C. Ayer—Dear Sir:—Having been rescued from a painful and dangerous disease by your medicine, gratitude prompts me to send you this acknowledgment, not only in justice to you, but for the information of others in like affliction.

A slight cold upon the lungs, neglected at first became so severe that spitting of blood, a violent cough and profuse night sweats followed and fastened upon me. I became emaciated, could not sleep, was distressed by my cough, and a pain through my chest, and in short had all the alarming symptoms of quick consumption. No medicine seemed at all to reach my case, until I providentially tried your CHERRY PECTORAL, which soon relieved and now has cured me.

Yours with respect. E. A. STEWART.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 17, 1848

Dr. Ayer, Lowell—Dear Sir:—I have for years been afflicted with Asthma in the worst form; so that I have been obliged to sleep in my chair for a larger part of the time, being unable to breath on my bed. I had tried a great many medicines, to no purpose, until my Physician prescribed, as an experiment, your CHERRY PECTORAL.

At first it seemed to make me worse, but in less than a week I began to experience the most gratifying relief from its use; and now, in four weeks, the disease is entirely removed. I can sleep on my bed with comfort, and enjoy a state of health which I had never expected to enjoy.

BLAKE'S PATENT

FIRE PROOF PAINT.

THE original and only genuine article, that can be obtained, without subjecting the purchaser to a prosecution for an infringement of my Patent. It has not yet been two year since the first counterfeit, was got up, but in that short time has proved itself, entirely worthless, as will be seen by the statement of more than twenty of the most respectable inhabitants of Sharon Ohio where mine as well as the Counterfeits are made. They say that we have examined recently, a house that was painted, with

Blake's Patent Fire Proof Paint,

SIX YEARS since (as an experiment) and now find the coating as hard as slate or stone. The action of the weather having no effect than to indurate and harden the substance. We will farther state that it has been such a complete failure in all the other kinds of stuff got up, and sold here, called Fire Proof paint (except Blakes) that his only is considered worth useing.

(Signed) Barnabus Crane and 20 others.

Hon. Daniel Webster has recently examined the patent and at the close of his report says, "I have no doubt whatever, but Mr Blake's Patent is good and valid. [104.

The genuine kept constantly on hand of different colors ground in oil or dry powder at the general depot No 84 Pearl-st. N Y.

MARRIAGE:

WHY SO OFTEN UNHAPPY.

THE CAUSES AND THE REMEDY!

MANY and many a wife endures years of bodily suffering and of mental anguish, prostrate and helpless, embittering her life, that of her husband, and hazarding the future welfare of her children, arising from causes which, if known, would have spared the suffering, the anguish to the wife, and to the husband embarrassments and pecuniary difficulties having their origin in the mind being weighed down and harassed in consequence of the sickness of the companion of his bosom.

How important that the causes should be known to every wife, to every husband, that the dreadful and harrowing consequences to the health and happiness of both may be avoided! Life is too short and health too precious to admit any portion of the one to be spent without the full enjoyment of the other. The timely possession of a little work entitled as follows has been the means of saving the health and the life of thousands, as over copies have been sold since the first edition was issued.

The author has been induced to advertise it by the urgent and pressing request of those who have been indebted to its publication for all they hold dear (that all may have an opportunity of obtaining it), and who have favored him with thousands of letters of encomium, some of which are annexed to the advertisement.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S

Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

Twentieth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, $1.00.

THIS WORK IS INTENDED ESPECIALLY FOR THE MARRIED, or those contemplating marriage, as it discloses important secrets which should be known to them particularly.

Here, every female—the wife, the mother—the one either budding into womanhood, or the one in the decline of years, in whom nature contemplates an important change—can discover the causes, symptoms, and the most efficient remedies and most certain mode of cure, in every complaint to which her sex is subject.

The revelations contained in its pages have proved a blessing to thousands, as the innumerable letters received by the author (which he is permitted by the writers to publish) will attest.

SICKLY AND UNHAPPY WIVES.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Dayton, O.

"DAYTON, May 1, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU—My Dear Sir: 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion,' for which I enclosed one dollar to your address, came safely to hand. I would not have troubled you with these few lines, but that I am impelled by a sense of gratitude, for myself and wife, to give utterance to our sincere and heartfelt emotions.

"My wife has been perceptibly sinking for some three years or more, in consequence of her great anguish and suffering some months before and during confinement; every successive one more and more debilitated and prostrated her, putting her life in imminent danger, and which was, on the last occasion, despaired of. I supposed that this state of things was inevitable, and resigned myself to meet the worst. At this time (now about two months) I heard your book highly spoken of, as containing some matters reaching my case. On its receipt and perusal, I can not express to you the relief it afforded my distressed mind and the joy its pages imparted to my wife, on learning that the great discovery of M. M. Desomeaux provided a remedy. It opened a prospect to me which I little conceived was possible. No pecuniary consideration can ever repay the obligations I am under to you for having been the means of imparting to us the matters contained in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' But for this, ere another year would have passed over my head, in all human probability my wife would have been in her grave, and my children left motherless."

Extract from a Letter.

Competence and Health.

"LANCASTER, PA., Oct. 24, 1847.

"MY DEAR SIR: I know you will have the kindness to bear with me in encroaching upon your time, while I acknowledge (in behalf of myself and wife) the obligations we feel ourselves under to you in having made known certain matters, contained in your most invaluable 'Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' It has been worth its weight in gold to me. If I express myself rather warmly, you will see that I can not do so too warmly, when I inform you of the extent to which I have, through it, been benefited. I will state my situation when I obtained your book through the merest curiosity I look upon it as one of the most fortunate events of my life. I had been married some ten years, and was the father of seven children. I was long struggling unceasingly, to the end that I might gain a moderate competency, but the results of my utmost exertions at the end left me about where I was at the beginning of each year; and that only, with the most stinted economy, sufficing with barely the necessaries of life. Finally, this constant effort was beginning to have its effect upon my health: I felt less capable to endure its continuance, while I felt the necessity of perseverance.

"This constant, unceasing struggle on my part was imperative, in consequence of the prostrated condition of my wife (with occasional intermission) for six years, much of the time confined to her bed, and of course incapable of taking the charge and management of household affairs. Her condition arose from causes of which I was ignorant. Oh! what would I have given had I the six years to live over again! What would my wife have given to have been spared the long days and still longer nights prostrate on a bed of sickness!—all of which would have been avoided, had I then seen a copy of 'THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION.'"

From a Physician.

DANGEROUS DELIVERIES,

OBSTRUCTIONS, IRREGULARITIES, &C.

How many are suffering from obstruction or irregularities peculiar to the female system, which undermine their health, the effects of which they are ignorant, and for which their delicacy forbids seeking medical advice! How many suffer from prolapsus uteri (falling of the womb), or from fluor-albus (weakness, debility, &c., &c)! How many are in constant agony for many months preceding confinement! How many have difficult if not dangerous deliveries, and whose lives are jeoparded during such time, will find in its pages the means of prevention, amelioration, and relief!

Extract from a Letter.

To those just Married.—"Had I known!"

"PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU: Had I known of the im portant matters treated of in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion' some years ago, how much misery I might have escaped! I have suffered years from causes which you point out in your book, without knowing what to do. I obtained a copy, and found my case treated of. I trust every female will avail herself of the information contained in its pages."

Letters are daily received of this character, unnecessary to present.

To those yet unmarried, but contemplating marriage, or perhaps hesitating as to the propriety of incurring the responsibilities attendant upon it, the importance of being possessed of the revelations contained in these pages, so intimately involving their future happiness, can not be appreciated.

It is, of course, impracticable to convey more fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage; neither is it necessary, since it is every one's duty to become possessed of knowledge whereby the sufferings to which a wife, a mother, or a sister, may be subject, can be obviated.

FOR FEMALES AND MALES

Dr. Lazetti's Juno Cordial, or Protective Elixir.

This is the only actual remedy ever discovered for impetency, Genital Debility, Nocturnal Emissions, and all diseases occasioned by certain secret habits; and many of the nostrums recently recommended for the same complaints are worthless imitations which its unrivalled excellence, fame and popularity have brought into the market. The Medical Faculty of Europe and the United States are unanimous in their recommendations of the Juno Cordial and have not given their sanction in a single instance that has been authenticated, to any compound for the same purposes. The nature of the maladies relieved by the Juno Cordial are generally such as to leave the publication of certificates of cures out of the question, or the proprietor could produce a host of the most conclusive testimony to show that the great reputation that it enjoys was not accidentally obtained, but is firmly based upon its positive, and apparently miraculous virtues. In all directions are to be found the happy parents of healthy offspring, who would not have been so, but for this extraordinary preparption. And it is equally potent in the many diseases for which it is recommended. Objection has been naturally made to the price of the Juno Cordial, because the trash that has been thrown into the market in opposition to it is sold cheaper; but the fact is, the Cerdial cannot be afforded for less, and ought to be much dearer, as many of the ingredients which compose it are among the costliest things in nature; whereas the others are made up of cheap drugs, worth but little in money, and less in merit. We assure the reader that the utmost reliance may be placed on the Juno Cordial in the cure of the maladies mentioned above, and also those that follow, viz: Loss of Muscular Energy, Physical Lassitude and General Prostration, Irritability, and all Nervous Affections, Indigestion, Sluggishness of the Liver, Gleet, Lucorrhoea or Whites, and Flour Albus and every disease in any way connected with the disorder of the Procreative Functions—in all of which it will afford almost immediate relief, and, if used as directed, is almost certain to produce a positive and permanent cure. Persons about to marry, if conscious of any weakness or disability of a certain nature, should take this Cordial, as it will infallibly restore health and vigor in a brief period, and where want of offspring is a cause of regret, if recourse be had to it the most beneficial results may be anticipated with confidence. It is of priceless value to those without offspring. It has taken the precedence in Italy and will in all other countries where it may become known.

It also possesses the unrivalled qualities of curing incipient Consumption, and I have administered it with great success to patients who have sought our delightful climate for the restoration of their health and the result is that a medicine has been added to the catalogue for the cure of insipient consumption.

To spread wide the blessings of this medicine, I have appointed Messrs. Judson & Co., of the City of New York, in the United States of America, my sole Agents for its sale; and none can be genuine unless it comes through them, and their signature is on the weapper.

The Cup of Cold Water.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

Henry Green was a reformed man. He had been a most abandoned drunkard, and in the years of his sad decedence, had shamefully wronged and abused his family. But, in a lucid moment, he perceived, with startling distinctness, the precipice, upon the very brink of which he was standing, and started back therefrom.

For his suffering wife and children, the waste places became green again, and the desert blossomed as the rose. After a long, long night of weeping, the sun came forth and his light and gladness to their spirits. The husband and father was a man once more, with the heart of a man. He turned no longer away from them in debasing self indulgence, but toward them in thoughtful affection.

How quickly is perceived a chance for the better in everything appertaining to the inebriate's family, when the head of it abandons his sin and folly, and returns to his affection and duty. All this change was apparent in the family of Henry Green. They had suffered even to the deprivation of every comfort; but of these one and another were now restored until every part of their humbled dwelling seemed to smile again. How happy they were!

And yet, the wife of the reformed man often felt a sense of insecurity. She understood too well that, for her husband, temptation lurked at every point. How often did she await his return home, as evening approached, with trembling anxiety; and mark, while yet afar off, his steps, to see if they were firmly taken.

It was early in the fall of the year when Henry Green took the pledge. Through the winter, he had worked industriously; and, as he could earn good wages, his income had given them, as just mentioned, very many comforts. He had not been much tempted of his old appetite during the cold weather, nor did he feel its active return at the opening spring. But, with the fervent heat of summer, the slumbering desire awoke.

Active bodily labor produced free inspiration.—Frequent thirst was the consequence: and, whenever this was felt, the thoughts of the reformed man dwelt upon the pleasure a cool glass of some mixed liquor would give With an effort, and often with fear at his heart, would he thrust aside the alluring images drawn by his truent imagination. And yet, they would ever and anon return; and there were times when he was tempted almost beyond his strength.

Green was a carpenter. Early in the spring a gentleman offered him a good contract for putting up two or three frame buildings, which he gladly accepted; and, as the lot upon which his house stood was large, he erected a shop thereon.

More cheerfully and hopefully than ever did the reformed man now work. He saw a clearer light ahead. He would, ere long, recover all he had lost, and even get beyond the point of prosperity from which he had fallen.

Time wore on. Spring passed and the summer opened. July came in with intensely hot weather. Already had Henry Green felt the cravings of his awakened appetite, and it required strong efforts at self-denial to refrain from indulgence.

About eleven o'clock one day—it was a hotter day than usual—Green's thoughts were dwelling, as was too often the case, upon the "refreshing glass," once so keenly enjoyed. A little way from his shop, though not in view, was a tavern, the bar room of which memory was picturing to the eyes of his mind with tempting distinctness. He had often been there in times past—often drank there until thought and feeling were lost. He saw, in imagination, the rows of alluring decanters, with their many colored liquors; he heard the cold ice as it rattled in the glasses; he almost felt the cooling beverage upon his lips. So absorbed did he at length become that he paused in his work, and leaned over his bench, his eyes half closed, like one in a dreamy reverie.

It was a moment upon which his future, for good or for evil, hung, trembling in an even balance that a hair might turn.

For as long a time as five minutes did Henry Green stand leaning over his work-bench, a picture of the neighboring bar-room distinctly before his mind, while he was conscious of an intese thirst—that it seemed as if nothing but a glass of mixed and iced liquor could possibly assuage.

With a deeply drawn breath he at length raised himself, the struggle that was going on in his mind more than half decided in favor of self indulgence

"Papa!" spoke a low, familiar voice by his side.

Green started and turned suddenly. A child, not over four years old, stood by him—a fair child, with a countenance full of innocence and affection. She held a tin cup in both her hands.

"Have a drink of cool water, papa!"

"Yes, dear," replied the father, in a low voice that was unsteady from the rush of a sudden emotion, and he caught the cup from the child's hands, and, raising it to his lips, drank it eagerly.

Instantly the picture of the bar room, with all its allurements, faded from the mind of Green. He was a man again, in the integrity of a firm purpose. His child, led to him by the hand of a good providence, had saved him. The cup of cold water had fully assuaged the violence of his burning thirst; and he was no longer under temptation.

"Thank you, dear!" he murmured, as he lifted his child in his arms, and kissed her tenderly.

"Shall I bring you another cool drink after awhile?" asked the little one, as she pressed her father's cheeks with both her hands.

"Did any one tell you to bring me the cup of water?" asked Mr. Green.

"No, sir. But I thought you would like a cool drink," innocently replied the child.

"Yes, dear, bring me another drink after awhile." Then kissing the little angel who had been the means of saving him when about to fall in temptation, he replaced her upon the ground, and once more turned to his work; and as he bent his body in labor, he mused thus—

"I did not think of the water when I felt that intense desire for a glass of liquor—it did not seem to be what I wanted. But, the cooling draught sent me, (by heaven, I will say,) so opportunely, has quenched the morbid appetite, and I feel it no longer. Water, pure, health-giving water, you are all I need to give entire strength to my good resolutions! When the old desire comes again, I feel safer now. There is medicine for the inebriate's craving appetite, and it is—water. Freely will I use it! Thank God for water!"

Yes, water is the medicine that cures the sickly craving for strong drink. Let the reformed man keep this ever in his thoughts, and the moment he feels the old desire, drown it, as did Henry Green in pure cold water. Let him do this, and he is safe. He should watch the beginnings of thirst, and be quick to allay the uneasy sensation, lest he fall unawares into danger.

How to Live.

Said an old man once to us, "Fact is, people ain't more than partly larnt how to live." We thought then that the old man was right, and we have since been convinced of the fact. For to live rightly, implies that we do rightly towards all.

When we see a man, with money in his pocket, refusing with lying pretences and sneaking subterfuges to pay a small bill, justly due, we think he has but partly learned her to live.

When we see a family who make great pretension to fashion and gentility, and are clothed sumptuously in purple and fine linen, putting off from day to day the payment of a poor dressmaker who comes feebly and timidly knocking at the door for her due, we think, little have they learned how to live.

When we see a man endeavoring to bolster up pride at his front door, while poverty enters boldly in the rear; squandering his small income on fine furniture and "company," borrowing of his neighbors and never returning without insult or injury, we are sure he has but partially learned how to live.

When we see another, laboring like a slave, to acoumulate wealth, not to extract happines from, but to hoard, starving his own soul, pinching his family, and making all miserable around him, we think he has not at all learned how to live.

When we see a man wholly given up to the pleasures of appetite, reveling in licenteousness and debaucheries, while the higher plesures of the intellect are wholly neglected, we think, how poorly has he learned to live.

When we see a young man, born to wealth, neglecting his great opportunities, squandering time and money on trifling things, and, employing the best years of his life in laying up misery for the future, we think how sadly is he neglecting the things which teach how to live.

When we see a child of misery and want treading almost unconciously the dark path which leads to crime and utter ruin, we sigh as we exclaim, he has never been taught how to live.

And when we see a subscriber to a newspaper sneaking out of the back door when he sees the collector coming with the bill, and when caught denying that he has received the paper, disputing the bill asserting that he never subscribed, that he ordered it stopped, and finally declaring that he has got nothing, and nothing can be got from him, we set him down as a hopeless case, for surely such a man will never learn how to live.

The Outside Passenger.

Some years ago a young lady who was traveling, took a seat in a stage coach. For some miles she rode alone; but there was enough to amuse her in the pleasing anticipations that occupied her mind. She had been engaged as governess to the grandchildren of an earl, and was noy traveling to his seat. At midday the coach stopped at an inn, at which dinner was provided in good style, and she alighted and sat down at the table. An elderly man followed and sat down also. The young lady rose and rang the bell, and addressing the waiter said, "Here is an outside passenger; I cannot dine with an outside passenger." The stranger bowed, saying, "I beg your pardon, madam; I can go into another room," and immediately retired. The coach soon after resumed its course, and the passengers their places.

At length the coach stopped at the gate leading to the castle to which the young lady was going; but there was no such attention as she expected. All eyes seemed directed to the outside passenger who was preparing to dismount. She beckoned, and was answered, "As soon as we have attended to his lordship, we will come to you." A few words of explanation ensued, and to her dismay she found that the outside passenger, with whom she had thought it beneath her dignity to dine, was tho nobleman in whose family she hoped to be an inmate. What could she do? How could she bear the interview? She felt really ill, and the apology she sent for not appearing that evening, was more than a mere pretence.

The venerable peer was a considerate man, and who knew the way in which the scriptures speak of the going down of the sun. "We must not allow the night to pass thus," said he to the countess; "you must send for her, and we must talk to her before bedtime." He reasoned with the foolish girl respecting her conduct, insisted upon the impropriety of the state of mind it evinced, assured her that nothing could induce him to allow his grandchildren to be taught such notions, refused to accept an apology that did not go the length of an acknowledgment that the thought was wrong, and when right impression appeared to be produced, gave her his hand.

☞ The longer I live, the more I am certain that the great difference between men, the great and the insignificant, is energy—invincible determination—an honest purpose once fixed—and then death or victory. That quality will do anything that can be done in the world; and no talents, no circumstances, no opportunity will make a two legged creature a man without it.

LEARNING, it is said, may be an instrument of fraud; so may bread, if discharged from the mouth of a cannon, be an instrument of death.

SILENCE never shows itself to so great an advantage as when it is made the reply to calumny and defamation.

FASHIONABLE society generally has but two faults: first, in being hollow-headed; and secondly, hollow-hearted.

'TIS of ourselves that we are thus.

Mistakes in the Market.

OR, MYSTERIES OF IRISH COOKING.

A Catholic lady living in Camp street, who, in obedience to the command of the church, abstains from flesh meat on certain prohibited days, called her servant up, who happened to be of a recent importation from the "gim" of the sea, on Friday morning, and said, "Biddy, can you make market?"

"Faith, an' to be sure I can ma'am," replied Biddy; "and isn't it meself that ought to know how—didn't I sell butther an' eggs in me time at the great Fair of Ballinasloe, an' buy eels at the foot of the big bridge of Arklone (Athlone)?"

"Then, Biddy," said her mistress, "you certainly must be qualified to make market for me in Tchoupitoulas street. Go to the market and buy a couple of good sheep-head for dinner."

Biddy.—But don't you know, ma'am, that this is Friday?

Mrs. W.—Yes, I kow it is, and that is why I wished you to get the sheep-head.

Biddy, [Aside.]—O, the Lord presarve us, but this is a quare counthry, intirely; Catholics atin a sheep's head on Friday, undher the pretince that it's not mate (meat,) like people that take the pledge and get dhrunk be soakin' their bread in brandy.

Mrs. W.—Well, Biddy, what delays you?

Biddy.—Wouldn't one sheep's head be enough, at any rate, ma'am?

Mrs. W.—No; I wish to have two—besides, I don't see what difference it makes to you.

Biddy.—O, faiks, that's thrue, ma'm, nor to you aither, for, as Ned Byrne used to say, "One may as well be hung for a sheep as a lamb;" and as Owen Daily said when he was caught stealin' the cabbage, "Two heads is betther than one."

Mrs. W.—No more illustrations, Biddy. I am now going out, and shall be home at three. I will have a couple of lady friends to dine with me, so have dinner ready at that hour.

Biddy went to market, but instead of going to the fishmonfier's stand and buying a pair of sheep-head she went to a bucher's stall and purchased a sheep's head, the only one in the market. * * * *

Mrs. W.—Well, Biddy, is dinner ready?

Biddy.—Yis, ma'am, but I searched the market over and could get but one sheep's head; but its' a pretty large one, ma'am. I think you'll have enough in it.

Mrs. W.—O, I don't care what you think; how did you dress it?

Biddy.—Oh, you had betther see it, ma'am, before you find fault with the way I dressed it. It 'ud cum to a purty hour of the day with me, indeed, if I didn't know how to dress a sheep's head, or sheep-head, as you call it, and me grandfather himself a butcher. But find fault with it if you can, said Biddy, running out to the kitchen and hurrying in with the head of a venerable, veritable sheep, on a dish, looking something like the cranium of a decapitated negro, with the two leaden eyes swelling out, and the lips apart, as if it was laughing at Biddy or her mistress, or both.

Biddy has not been sent to make the marketing since.—N. O. Delta.

Educate Yourself.

Knowledge is its own exceeding great reward.—It is not the gift of a college, particularly. It is what the mind produces whenever it acts. Great schools are chiefly appliances for the lazy, to furnish substitutes for knowledge by which to make their way in the world. A youth who has a noble thirst for science, is not so much benefitted by a "liberal education" as he is apt to imagin that he will be, before trying it. If your parents are rich, and have nothing better to do with their money, let them board you at Cambridge or Yale for four years. But if they are poor, laboring people, stay with them and labor. But don't the less sirive for a liberal education. Be liberal in supplying yourself with books and time. Journey on foot and study nature and men. Ask questions of everybody and everything.

Thus doing, you will probably acquire more satisfactory and useful knowledge, and what is more, sounder character and firmer health—you will be more of a man than if you distress your parents to have knowledge put into your mouth with a pap-spoon. It is thus that the greatest and best men are made in every country.

Work if you would Rise.

Richard Burke being found in a revery, shortly after an extraordinary display of powers in the House of Commons by his brother Edmund, and questioned by Mr. Malone as to the cause, replied, "I have been wondering how Ned has contrived to monopolize all the talents of the family, but then, again, I remember, when we were at play, he was always at work." The force of this anecdote is increased by the fact that Richard Burke was considered not inferior, in natural talents, to his brother. Yet the one rose to greatness, while the other died compareitively obscure. Don't trust to your genius, young man, if you would rise; but work! work! work!

Law and its Whims.

When Judge Parsons was a practising lawyer, he was once employed to plead two cases in court, which were precisely alike, but in one he was engaged for the defendent, and in the other for the plaintiff. It happened that both cases were tried the same day; he spoke for half an hour to the first jury, and the case was given to them and they had retired. When he appeared before the second jury he made use of very differeet arguments from those employed by him before, of which the court took notice, reminding him that he seemed to have changed his tune, and repeated to him what he had said but a few minutes before. Mr Parsons fixed his keen eye upon the judge and replied: "May it please your honor, I might have been wrong half an hour ago, but now I know I am right." He proceeded; and when the juries returned, it was found he had gained a verdict in both cases!

Election Returns.

We give below all we can obtain of election returns; as it is uncertain when we could give the entire result we have not delayed our paper therefor.

Essex Co.—Plainfield 75 Whig majority. Westfield 79 Dem. majority.

Somerset Co.—87 Whig majority. 1 Member Assembly, Sheriff and Clerk, Democrats, elected.

Hunterdon Co.—1197 Democratic majority.

George F. Fort is undoubtedly elected Governor of New Jersey by a respectable majority.

Temperance Address.

The Rev. Wm. Whittaker will deliver an address before the "Sons of Temperance" at their Division Room on Saturday Evening, Nov. 9th at 7 o'clock. ☞ The public are respectfully invited to attend.

☞ A full attendance of the members is requested at 6 1-2 o'clock.

☞ As our independence may compromise some of our brethren of the press we would suggest the propriety of their crediting the articles they copy from us. Our cogitations on several subjects recently have appeared in different journals without acknowledgement, some have been credited to others. The Sussex Herald, one of the most able and influential journals in the State, copies one article from our columns and gives us credit, while another article which it copies at the same time, and from the same column, it credits to the Trentonian. Why is this? We are willing to labor in a good cause without fee or reward other than that which its advocacy bestows, but we are not willing that others should be awarded the credit, whatever there may be, which belongs exclusively to ourselves.

☞ Chirography.—Those who would acquire this useful art and most beneficial accomplishment would do well to attend the classes of Mr. Enos W. Runyon. There are but few who possess in a more eminent degree this distinctive art of civilization and refinement. Could our readers appreciate, as we are made to do, the benefits and advantages of a neat and legible handwriting they would not be long in transforming their "pot-hooks and trammels" into his beautiful hand. No art is of more universal value; avail yourself of E. W. R's assistance and none is more easily acquired.

☞ The "Illustrated Domestic Bible" by the Rev. Ingram Cobbin, M. A.

We have received the eighth number of this superb Bible. The commendations this edition of the scriptures has received from the clergy of nearly every denomination of christians, and also from the press generally, is a sufficient guarantee of its superiority. The importance of its illustrations, notes and comments, to a proper understanding of the life, manners and customs of the people among whom its scenes were laid, and consequently of the inspired page itself, are of great value. Published by Samuel Hueston, 139 Nassau-st. N. Y. Numbers can be had at the office of this paper, we being authorized agents for the work.

☞ Harpers New Monthly Magazine.—Although only six months in existence, this Magazine has already reached in its regular issue, Fifty Thousand Copies. Each number contains 144 pages octavo, double columns. The volumes of a single year, therefore will present nearly two thousand pages of the choisest of the Misselaneous Literature of the age. A carefully prepared Fashion Plate, and other Pictorial Illustrations,, will accompany each number. In our estimation this is the very best family Magazine published, it not only gives more matter but also that of superior quality. It may be obtained at the office of this paper.

☞ There are rumors that the President has authorised the Marshall to employ a portion of the standing army to enforce the Fugitive Slave Law, and to "punish" offenders. We do not believe he has done, or intends to do any such thing. He knows that the whole standing army of the United States, which took Monterey and Mexico, cannot break down a poor man's outer door to serve a civil process, or 'punish' any citizen for any crime whatever. It will be perceived therefore that the Fugitive has only to make his house his castle, and to sell his liberty only with his life. Standing armies were once employed to enforce the Alien aad Sedition laws; they are used for similar purposes in France; derision and contempt met the former and awaits the latter; a similar contempt awaits their employment to suppress the doctrines of the Declaration of Independence.

The Nobleness of a True Life.

BY HON. HORACE MANN.

Whoever yields to temptation debases himself with debasement from which he can never arise. This, indeed, is the calamity, of calamities the bitterest dreg in the cup of bitterness. Every unrighteous act tells with a thousand fold more force upon the actor than upon the sufferer. The false man is more false to himself than any one else.—He may despoil others, but himself is the chief loser. The world's scorn he might sometimes forget, but the knowledge of his own perfidy is undying. The fire of gulty passions may torment whatever lies within the circle of its radiations; but fire is always hottest at the centre, and that centre is the profligate's own heart.

A man can be wronged and live; but the unresisted, unchecked impulse to do wrong is the first and second death. The moment any one of the glorious faculties with which God has endowed us is abused or misused, that faculty loses, forever, a portion of its delicacy and its energy. Every injury which we inflict upon our moral nature in this life, must dull, for ever and, ever, our keen capacities of enjoyment, though in the midst of infinite bliss, and weaken our power of ascension, where virtuous spirits are ever ascending.

It must send us forward into the next stage of existence maimed and crippled, so that, however high we may soar, our flight will always be less lofty than it would otherwise have been; and however exquisite our bliss, it will always be less exquisitely blissful than it was capable of being

Every instance of violated conscience, like every broken string in a harp, will limit the compass of its music, and mar its harmonies forever. Tremble, then, and forbear, oh man; when thou wouldst forget the dignity of thy nature and the immortal glories of thy destiny; for if thou dost cast down thine eyes to look with complacency upon the tempter, or lend thine ear to listen to his seductions, thou dost doom thyself to move for ever and ever through inferior spheres of being; thou dost wound and dim the very organ with which alone thou canst behold the spledors of eternity.

The world is entering upon a new moral cyrcle. The great heart of humanity is heaving with hopes of a brighter day. All the higher instincts of our nature prophesy its approach; and the best Intellects of the race are struggling to turn that prophecy to fulfillment. Thoughts of freedom, duty, benevolence, equality, and humanity brotherhood agitate the nations: and neither the pope with his cardinals nor the czar with his Cossacks, can suppress them.

Were these thoughts imprisoned in the centre of the earth, they would burst its granite folds, speed onward in their career, and fulfill their destiny.—They are imbued with a deathless vigor. They must prevail, or the idea of a Moral Governor of the universe is an imposture, and the divine truths of the Gospel a fable.

Here, then, is opened a new and noble career for the ambition of emulous youth; not the ambition of subduing men into slaves, but the holy ambition of elevating them into peers; not for usurping principality or kingdom, but for building himself up into principality and kingdom; not merely for gathering renown, as it were, star by star, to be woven in a glittering robe for his person, or to make a crown of glory for his head; but to expand his own soul into grander proportions, to give it angelic and archangelic loftiness of stature, and to fill it perpetually with that song of joy which even the morning stars could not but sing when they heheld the splendor of the Godhead reflected from the new creation.

Here are opportunities, means, incitements, through which the young man may build himself up more and more into a likeness of the universe in which he dwells, and configure himself more and more to the Infinite Perfection that governs it.

In a physical and in a spiritual sense, the universe around us is full; and as we cannot go beyond the circumference of present physical discoveries without discovering new theatres of being, so also we cannot go beyond the circumference of existence spiritual relations without finding new spiritual relations.

Columbus was devoted to the study of geography. As the result of that study, he felt that there was a continent to be discovered; and he discovered it.—The mind of Newton pondered on astronomical truths. His contemplations engender the belief that some cohesive principle bound together the worlds on high; and he demonsrrated the law of gravitation. Washington was a patriot. He yearned for liberty; and by his valor and his wisdom our republic was established.

So new moral blessings and beauties are certain to reward the efforts of new moral power, whatever direction that power may take. Grander discoveries than any which have yet been made, revelations that lay beyond the ken of Bacon's far-seeing vision, and beauties that shone outside the imagination of the vast-minded Shakspeare, await the evoking power of philanthropic genius.

Benevolence is a world of itself, a world which mankind, as yet, have hardly begun to explore.—We have, as it were, only skirted along its coasts for a few leagues, without penetrating the recesses, or gathering the riches of its vast interior. Hostile nations and repugnant races of men are wayward and devious orbs, yet to be brought into a system of brotherhood by the attractions of love. Justice, honor, love, and truth, are the corner-stones of the holy government which is yet to be organized upon earth.

For all true-hearted adventurers into these new realms of enterprise, there are moral Edens to be planted, such as Milton with his celestial verse could never describe, and there are heights of moral sublimity to be attained, such as Rossee with his telescope could never descry.

Glowing with a vivid conception of these truths, so wonderful and so indisputable, let me ask, whether, among all the spectacles which earth presents, and which angels might look down upon with an ecstacy too deep for utterance, is there a nearer and more enrapturing to the sight than that of a young man, just fresh from the Creator's hands, and with the unspent energies of the coming eternity wrapped up in his bosom, surveying and recounting, in the solitude of his closet or in the darkness of midnight, the mighty gifts with which he has been endowed, and the magnificent career of usefulness and of blessedness which has been opened before him; and resolving, with one all-concentrating and all-hallowing vow, that he will live true to the noblest capacities of his being, and in obedience to the highest law of his nature!

If aught can be nobler or sublimer than this, it is the life that fulfills the vow. Such a young man reverences the divine skill and wisdom by which his physical frame has been so fearfully and wonderfully made; and he keeps it pure and clean, as a fit temple for the living God. For every indulgence of appetite that would enervate the body, or dull the keen sense, or cloud the luminous brain, he has a "Get thee behind me!" so stern and deep, the balked satans of temptation slink from before him in shame and despair.

Hypocrisy and pharisaical pride are loathsome to the young man of a true heart, yet he rejoices to be known, at all times and everywhere, as a religious man; for, not less in the marts of business and the hilarities of a social intercourse, than in the sanctuary or on the death-bed, he feels how infinitely unmanly it is to be ashamed of the noblest and divinest attribute in all his nature.

And when, in the fullness of patriarchal years, crowned with clustering honors, and covered with the beatitudes, as with a garment, he brings his heroic life to a triumphant close, the celestial light that bursts from the opened and welcoming gates of heaven, breaking upon his upturned countenance, is reflected into the paths of all surviving men; and the wings of his spirit, as it ascends, fan the earth with odors from the upper paradise.

Lying.

Never tell a whole lie, or a half a lie, or a quarter of a lie, or any part of a lie. Many boys who know well enough what a sneaking, mean thing it is to lie, yet will twist the truth, or deceive a little bit. This is about as bad as a plump falsehood. If a boy does something wrong, either through ignorance, carelessnes or accident, and then tells one-half lie about it, he might almost as well have told the whole untruth. Now see how the spirited, manly, true hearted, clear-tongued boy will do, after an error. He resolutely determines to acknowledge it, without being afraid of anybody's anger—tell it just as it was. I never in my life knew any one to be injured by telling the truth in this way, but I have seen many a boy, and man too, who were looked upon with contempt, and thought poorly of, because they would tell sneaking lies, or quarter lies. The worst of untruths—those which are deliberately made up, stories about people, or little stories magnified into big ones—prove the teller of them to be a a most worthless, impure and mean person. The liar is indeed despicable both to God and good men. on the other hand, nothing is more beautiful than a strictly truth-telling person—one who never varies from the truth, who is open, candid and above deceit. To become so, a boy should strive hard, should determine to become so, and he will become so, Besides it is so easy always to speak the truth, and so very hard to arrange a very plausible untruth, which even then will in all likelihood be found out, nine times out of ten.

The Priest and the Nut.

A Polish Priest Right Reverend—his name
I quiet forget (but then its all the same,
Since true my tale, and happened long ago,
Whether I reccollect his name or no)—
Descanting long the merits of his cause,
Grew warm, affirmed it true, then made a pause.
Next, looking round, 'In short,' says he, 'my friend,'
This nut together all religious blend.
The burr, 'tis rough, and black, and fit for naught,
And by it we are Paganism taught;
The Protestants, they are of course the shell,
Stubborn, fit but to feed the fires of hell;
But now, if this hard shell we break quite through,
We have the meat, and this is I and you—
Yes, this is the only good the nut doth hold—
And this the only Roman Church of old!'
What next he said I now have quite forgotten,
For then he cracked the nut, and lo! 'twas rotten!

[Christian Times.

If most of the Protestant priests were to crack their own sectarian nuts they would find them quite as rotton as this polished one. The Protestant churches sprung from the same mother at Rome; they quarreled with the old woman about forms, ceremonies, church ornaments, trinkets, &c., and came off and sat up in business for themselves; but they brought the chain the whip, the prison, the sword and the gun with them, and most of them only want the power and money to equal in wickedness, the old woman at whom they are continually making up faces,—Portland Pleasure Boat.

Friendship is more firmly secured by lenity towards failings, than by attachment to excellencies. The former is valued as a kindness which cannot be claimed, the latter is exacted as the payment of debt to merit.

There never was a better founded observation than that of the late Mr. Cobbet, that no one should be trusted with the care of the nobler animals, who had not been habituated to treat the lessser ones with kindness.

MARRIED.

On the 28th of September, by the Rev. Mr. Ambler, Mr. Archibald C. Beard, of Baskenridge, to Miss Freelove W. daughter of Mr. Restores V. Cox, of Washington Valley.

Oct. 31st, by Rev. W. E. Perry, Wm. Randolph Marsh, of Rahway, to Miss Hannah Ann Marsh, of Plainfield.

DIED.

In Piscataway, on Saturday, Nov. 2d. Diannah Staats, aged about 101 years.

At Rahway, on Tuesday the 5th inst., after a long and painful illness, which he bore with perfect resignation, William Marsh, in the 65th year of his age.

The friends and acquaintances of the family are invited to attend the funeral at his late residence on Thursday at 10 1-2 o'clock.

The deceased was formerly a citizen of this place, known and respected by all for his unassuming and unblemished character, he will long be held in grateful remembrance for his many virtues by a large circle of acquaintance and mourning friends. An honest man, an exemplary and kind husband and parent, a kind neighbor and faithful and steadfast friend, he descends to the tomb bearing the true image of God's noblest work, a bright example to all.

Table and Piano Forte Covers.—A great and choice variety of these elegant furniture adornments have just been received, together with a magnificent stock of Carpeting and Oil Cloths, which upon a careful inspection we found to transcend in point of richness, styles, patterns, colors and shades, any similar goods that we ever had the pleasure of examining, and are now on sale at 136 William street. Some of the Table and Piano Forte Covers are embossed on Cassimere, others composed of worsted and linen, they are gorgeous patterns. Here also may be found superior India Matting, and Window Shades, painted by skillful artists, in all the various styles that are now in demand. At this Depot may also be found an excellent assortment of low-priced Table Coths of English and German manufacture. Anxious at all times to be doing a good business, he, the proprietor, invariably asks the minium price he can afford his goods at, and thus secures to the purchaser an equivalent for his outlay. It would be well for the public if there were other McGrorty's besides the one at 136 William street, New-York.

Industry and economy will get rich, while sagacity and intrigue are laying their plans.

THE NEW JERSEY

HORSE POWER

Manufacturing Company.

HAVING improved, strengthened and perfected A. D. CRANE'S Patent Horse Power, are now prepared to furnish the same to all who may want.

This Power consists of an endless floor running over a series of pulleys, connected by cranks, without a rack or cog wheel about it: none being required from the fact, that the weight of the horse on the floor or platform causes sufficient adhesion between it and the pulleys to transmit all the power he is able to give. Also by this arrangement the chain is freed from the draught or strain (which cannot be avoided in any other Stall Power.) except, what is reqired to pass the floor around. The requisite speed is obtained direct from the machine thereby avoiding a great amount of friction and wear, and lessening the liability to get out of order. They run so easily as to require less than an inch elevation to the foot. A self acting brake is attached by which the motion is kept regular and uniform even when the work is unsteady and irregular.

From the above description it is evident that this is the most simple and efficient Power known.

They are highly recommended by those who have used them, for driving Circular Saws, Lathes, Drilling Machines, Threshers, Grist Mills, Pumps, &c.

The Company have certificates to prove the above and also to show that the Two Horse Power will grind 40 bushels of Corn to Meal (with Platt's Patent Mill,) in a day of ten hours, making it an invaluable Power for the Southern planter as well as others.

It has taken Silver Medals at the different Fairs where exhibited, and the only one given to Horse Powers by the American Institute last fall.

They also furnish Threshers of the most approved construction.

Price of Single Power with Belt, $75: Double do. with Belt, $110: Thresher and Separator, $35.

CHERRY PECTORAL:

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, ASTHMA, WHOOPING-COUGH AND CONSUMPTION.

The annals of medical science, affording as they do ample proof of the power and value of many medicinal agents, have furnished no examples to compare with the sultary effects produced by 'AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL."

The remarkable cures of diseases of the Lungs which have been realized by its use, attested as they are by many prominent professors and physicians in this and foreign lands, should encourage the afflicted to persevere with the strong assurance that the use of the "CHERRY PECTORAL" will relieve and ultimately cure them.

We present to the public unsolicited testimonials from some of the first men in our country, upon whose judgment and experience implicit confidence may be placed.

Norwich April 26, 1846

DR. J. C. Ayer—Dear Sir:—Agreeable to the request of your agent, we will cheerfully state what we have known of the effects of your CHERRY PECTORAL, and they have been astonishing indeed. Mrs. Betsy Streeter had been afflicted with a severe and relentless cough, which reduced her very low; so low that little hope could be entertained of her recovery. Numerous remedies had been tried without effect before the CHERRY PECTORAL And that has cured her. George Watkinson Esq., had to our knowledge ben afflicted with Asthma, for eleven years, and grown yearly worse, until the CHERRY PECTORAL has now removed the disease and he is as free from any of its symptons as we are. The Rev. Mark Dane had been so severely attacked with the Bronchitis, as to disable him from his duties, and nothing had afforded him relief until I (Mr. Thorning) carried him a bottle of your PECTORAL, which cured him at once, and he now officiates as usual in his place.

These are three of the cases in which we have known it succesful, but never to fail. We have great pleasure in certifying to these facts; and are, respected sir, your humble servants.

REV. DAVID THORRING.
HON. JOSEPH BATTLES.

Among the distinguished authorities who have given their names to recommend CHERRY PECTORAL, as the best remedy that is known for the Affections of the Lungs, are "The Loudon Lancet," "Canadian Journal of Medical Science," "Boston Medical and Surgical Journal," "Charleston (S. C.) Medical Review," "New Jersey Medical Reporter," Prof. Webster, Harvard College, Prof. Bartlett, Transylvania University of Medicine, President Perkins, Vermont Medical College, Dr. Valentine Mott, New York City, Parker Cleveland, Bowdoin College, Prof. Butterfield, Willoughby College, Ohio, Prof. Braithwaite, Leeds (Eng.) Medical School, Sir Richard Kane, Queen's College, Ireland, Prof. Rosenbaum, Leipsic.

The public have but to know the virtues and astonishing success of the "CHERRY PECTORAL," in curing diseases of the Lungs, when they will feel secure from these dangers, whenever this remedy can be obtained.

GREAT MEDICAL WORK.—W. HOLDREDGE, 140 FULTON-STREET, NEW-YORK, Bookseller and Stationer, has just published a new book, entitled "Medical Iuformation for the Million, or the True Guide to Health," on reformed principles; containing a new theory of life and death; with nearly one hundred fine illustrations. Price in leather and cloth, $1 50; paper $1; 12mo 528pp.—By Chas. D. Hammond, M. D. Member of the Electric School of Medicine &c. Being plain advice to both sexes, in the treatment of Nervous, Consumptive, Scrofulous and other complaints. To which is added an Essay on Sexual Diseases, including the symptoms and treatment of Syphilitic complaints, Masturbation, Seminal Debility, Barrenness, &c, We are as sured, on the highest medical authority that the volume here offered to the public, is of a character that claims the attention of every intelligent person in the land, that has any regard for the welfare and happiness of the human family. It unfolds information of the most vital importance to the sickly and unhappy of all classes and conditions in life, whether Male or Female, Married or Single, Old or Young. They will here find a life-like portrait of their individual case—the cause, symptoms, accurate prescriptions and directions, by which a safe and speedy cure can be accomplished; thus saving the delicate wife, mother or daughter, from the recessity and expense of becomeing graduates of the recently founded female medical college, in order to save their sex from the dangerous practice of ignorant quacks. The time has come when young and old of both sexes should make themselves acquainted with the fearful and wonderful workmansdip of the Divine Architect in the anatomy of the human system. He has made nothing but what its study was designed to make us wise, good, and happy. Is it not for the want of a knowledge of the structure and uses of the human system, that we see and experience so much sickness sorrow, and distress? and is it not for the want of this necessary information, that thousands of our youth are led astray by delusive habits of vice, and annually go down to a premature grave? A thousand times the cost of this work bears no comparison to the awful consequences of such misfortunes. We believe in the old proverb, that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." "We regard it as an important work, and doubt not it will find its way into every family in the Union."—Atlas. "It has evidently a good purpose; aims to accomplish an object highly desirable and purely benevolent.—There is a degree of both physiological and pathological information, which may not only be safely, but with the highest utility, communicated indiscriminately to the bulk of readers."—Evangelist.

HERNIA.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.—This disorder, of very frequennt occurrence, may be considered as arising through weakness of the abdominal walls, inducing an enlargement in the natural openings formed therein for the transmission of blood and other vessels; such openings being enlarged, permit the escape of bowels or other viscera of the abdomen, devolving hernial swellings or rupture, which most generally occur outwardly, as at the navel, groins and thighs.

The complaint is likely to happen at birth, and therefore should be carefully looked for by those having the charge of children, that it may be arrested and cured promptly. It also occurs at any period of life, to either sex, without regard to the condition or mode of living, and when found, should be attended to without delay—the final penalty being death, and that may be induced through strangulation at any momennt.

RUPTURES, are always to be treated with the surgical instruments known as Trusses and Supporters, and these require to be skillfully applied. With this view, the HULL'S TRUSS OFFICE, now established some thirty years, has under the various managers, presented to the public both male and female attendants to apply its instruments directly to the persons, which is preferable in all cases, and has also made improvement at different times, showing that advancement which study and practice only yield toward the relief of this malady.

With much pleasure the fact is now published, that recent improvements BUTLER'S TRUSS PADS have been made, and sufficiently tested upon numerous cases to warrant, through the cures already affected, their submission to the public, as being in adaptation and efficiency superior to any heretofore made known.

These improvements, recently patented, are now being applied at this office, 4 Vesey street, in cases of rupture, gravitation of the bowels, prolapsus uteri, prolapsus ani and piles.

The public may rely upon that care being made in their application, which will most likely tend to the final cure of the several complaints.

Hull's Truss Office, 4 Vesey street, Astor House, opposite St. Paul's Church, New-York.

FRED'K M BUTLER, Proprietor.

N. B.—The ladies' department is attended by a female qualified to fit the instruments, having so attended this office for many years.

Children trussed when only two weeks old, and invariably cured. [145is.

MECHANICAL MEDICINE.

Dr. Banning, formerly of this city, asks to announce that he has returned to 341 Broadway: for consultation and management of weaknesses of the vocal, pulmonary, digestive, nervous, spinal and female systems; and also of the drooping, languor and physical deformities, which are so destructive of both health and beauty at the present day.

As these and kindred maladies are usually the result of a violation of the laws of physical organization, he will treat them chiefly by those exercises, mechanical appliances and reformatory habits of body, in conjunction with hydropathy galvanism and other discoveries of the day, which, united with the cooperative efforts of the subject, are calculated to relieve and restore the energies of the suffering and neglected organs.

Having spent several years in traveling for investigation and practical experiment on the subject, he has, at length, greatly improved and multiplied his surgical and mechanical appliances for the purpose. In addition to his new supports for female and spinal weaknesses, are some combining the properties of a universal hernial truss and an effective general support, with which he challenges cases of general debility, constipation, piles and prolapsus, ani, lencorrhea, prolapsus uteri and every variety of hernia.

The distinctive peculiarity of these devices is, that they do not weaken or restrain the motions or growth of the suffering parts, but act imitatively and conconcordantly with the mathematical genius of the body's forces. Hence, by a most comfortable and gentle pressure, they at once give great support and render the oppressed system eligible to its own restoration.

Feeble invalids coming from a distance will command prompt and faithful attention.

For more definite information, see his revised edition of "Animal Mechanics," and also his circular, which will be sent gratuitously when requested.

His improved body-braces, spinal supports and supporter trusses applied at his office (341 Broadway) and to be had wholesale and retail. City and country physicians and druggists are invited to call and examine Office hours from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. [121.

The undersigned being acquainted with some of the ingredints of HUTCHINGS' VEGETABLE DYSPEPSIA BITTERS, and having used it for some time in his practice with every desired effect, here commends this medicine from the certainty of its effect and gives it a preference over all preparations in medicine for that distressing complaint, Dyspepsia.

T. HARDENBERGH, M. D., No. 1 Beach street N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half; during a greater portion of this time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself until he was recommended to try HUTCHINGS' DYSPEPSIA BITTERS; he very soon derived a benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of HUTCHINGS' BITTERS for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine. L. B. WYMAN. 23 Burling Slip.

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness. I was advised to take Hutching's Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease, and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia.

BLAKE'S PATENT

FIRE PROOF PAINT.

THE original and only genuine article, that can be obtained, without subjecting the purchaser to a prosecution for an infringement of my Patent. It has not yet been two year since the first counterfeit, was got up, but in that short time has proved itself, entirely worthless, as will be seen by the statement of more than twenty of the most respectable inhabitants of Sharon Ohio where mine as well as the Counterfeits are made. They say that we have examined recently, a house that was painted, with

Blake's Patent Fire Proof Paint,

SIX YEARS since (as an experiment) and now find the coating as hard as slate or stone. The action of the weather having no effect than to indurate and harden the substance. We will farther state that it has been such a complete failure in all the other kinds of stuff got up, and sold here, called Fire Proof paint (except Blakes) that his only is considered worth useing.

(Signed) Barnabus Crane and 20 others.

Hon. Daniel Webster has recently examined the patent and at the close of his report says, "I have no doubt whatever, but Mr Blake's Patent is good and valid. [104.

MARRIAGE:
WHY SO OFTEN UNHAPPY.

THE CAUSES AND THE REMEDY!

MANY and many a wife endures years of bodily suffering and of mental anguish, prostrate and helpless, embittering her life, that of her husband, and hazarding the future welfare of her children, arising from causes which, if known, would have spared the suffering, the anguish to the wife, and to the husband embarrassments and pecuniary difficulties having their origin in the mind being weighed down and harassed in consequence of the sickness of the companion of his bosom.

How important that the causes should be known to every wife, to every husband, that the dreadful and harrowing consequences to the health and happiness of both may be avoided! Life is too short and health too precious to admit any portion of the one to be spent without the full enjoyment of the other. The timely possession of a little work entitled as follows has been the means of saving the health and the life of thousands, as over copies have been sold since the first edition was issued.

The author has been induced to advertise it by the urgent and pressing request of those who have been indebted to its publication for all they hold dear (that all may have an opportunity of obtaining it), and who have favored him with thousands of letters of encomium, some of which are annexed to the advertisement.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S
Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

Twentieth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, $1.00.

THIS WORK IS INTENDED ESPECIALLY FOR THE MARRIED, or those contemplating marriage, as it discloses important secrets which should be known to them particularly.

Here, every female—the wife, the mother—the one either budding into womanhood, or the one in the decline of years, in whom nature contemplates an important change—can discover the causes, symptoms, and the most efficient remedies and most certain mode of cure, in every complaint to which her sex is subject.

The revelations contained in its pages have proved a blessing to thousands, as the innumerable letters received by the author (which he is permitted by the writers to publish) will attest.

SICKLY AND UNHAPPY WIVES.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Dayton, O.

"DAYTON, May 1, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU—My Dear Sir: 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion,' for which I enclosed one dollar to your address, came safely to hand. I would not have troubled you with these few lines, but that I am impelled by a sense of gratitude, for myself and wife, to give utterance to our sincere and heartfelt emotions.

"My wife has been perceptibly sinking for some three years or more, in consequence of her great anguish and suffering some months before and during confinement; every successive one more and more debilitated and prostrated her, putting her life in imminent danger, and which was, on the last occasion, despaired of. I supposed that this state of things was inevitable, and resigned myself to meet the worst. At this time (now about two months) I heard your book highly spoken of, as containing some matters reaching my case. On its receipt and perusal, I can not express to you the relief it afforded my distressed mind and the joy its pages imparted to my wife, on learning that the great discovery of M. M. Desomeaux provided a remedy. It opened a prospect to me which I little conceived was possible. No pecuniary consideration can ever repay the obligations I am under to you for having been the means of imparting to us the matters contained in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' But for this, ere another year would have passed over my head, in all human probability my wife would have been in her grave, and my children left motherless."

Competence and Health.

"LANCASTER, PA., Oct. 24, 1847.

"MY DEAR SIR: I know you will have the kindness to bear with me in encroaching upon your time, while I acknowledge (in behalf of myself and wife) the obligations we feel ourselves under to you in having made known certain matters, contained in your most invaluable 'Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' It has been worth its weight in gold to me. If I express myself rather warmly, you will see that I can not do so too warmly, when I inform you of the extent to which I have, through it, been benefited. I will state my situation when I obtained your book through the merest curiosity I look upon it as one of the most fortunate events of my life. I had been married some ten years, and was the father of seven children. I was long struggling unceasingly, to the end that I might gain a moderate competency, but the results of my utmost exertions at the end left me about where I was at the beginning of each year; and that only, with the most stinted economy, sufficing with barely the necessaries of life. Finally, this constant effort was beginning to have its effect upon my health: I felt less capable to endure its continuance, while I felt the necessity of perseverance.

"This constant, unceasing struggle on my part was imperative, in consequence of the prostrated condition of my wife (with occasional intermission) for six years, much of the time confined to her bed, and of course incapable of taking the charge and management of household affairs. Her condition arose from causes of which I was ignorant. Oh! what would I have given had I the six years to live over again! What would my wife have given to have been spared the long days and still longer nights prostrate on a bed of sickness!—all of which would have been avoided, had I then seen a copy of 'THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION.'"

From a Physician.

DANGEROUS DELIVERIES,

OBSTRUCTIONS, IRREGULARITIES, &C.

How many are suffering from obstruction or irregularities peculiar to the female system, which undermine their health, the effects of which they are ignorant, and for which their delicacy forbids seeking medical advice! How many suffer from prolapsus uteri (falling of the womb), or from fluor-albus (weakness, debility, &c., &c)! How many are in constant agony for many months preceding confinement! How many have difficult if not dangerous deliveries, and whose lives are jeoparded during such time, will find in its pages the means of prevention, amelioration, and relief!

Extract from a Letter.

To those just Married.—"Had I known!"

"PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU: Had I known of the important matters treated of in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion' some years ago, how much misery I might have escaped! I have suffered years from causes which you point out in your book, without knowing what to do. I obtained a copy, and found my case treated of. I trust every female will avail herself of the information contained in its pages."

Letters are daily received of this character, unnecessary to present.

To those yet unmarried, but contemplating marriage, or perhaps hesitating as to the propriety of incurring the responsibilities attendant upon it, the importance of being possessed of the revelations contained in these pages, so intimately involving their future happiness, can not be appreciated.

It is, of course, impracticable to convey more fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage; neither is it necessary, since it is every one's duty to become possessed of knowledge whereby the sufferings to which a wife, a mother, or a sister, may be subject, can be obviated.

FOR FEMALES AND MALES

Dr. Lazetti's Juno Cordial, or Protective Elixir.

This is the only actual remedy ever discovered for impetency, Genital Debility, Nocturnal Emissions, and all diseases occasioned by certain secret habits; and many of the nostrums recently recommended for the same complaints are worthless imitations which its unrivalled excellence, fame and popularity have brought into the market. The Medical Faculty of Europe and the United States are unanimous in their recommendations of the Juno Cordial and have not given their sanction in a single instance that has been authenticated, to any compound for the same purposes. The nature of the maladies relieved by the Juno Cordial are generally such as to leave the publication of certificates of cures out of the question, or the proprietor could produce a host of the most conclusive testimony to show that the great reputation that it enjoys was not accidentally obtained, but is firmly based upon its positive, and apparently miraculous virtues. In all directions are to be found the happy parents of healthy offspring, who would not have been so, but for this extraordinary preparption. And it is equally potent in the many diseases for which it is recommended. Objection has been naturally made to the price of the Juno Cordial, because the trash that has been thrown into the market in opposition to it is sold cheaper; but the fact is, the Cordial cannot be afforded for less, and ought to be much dearer, as many of the ingredients which compose it are among the costliest things in nature; whereas the others are made up of cheap drugs, worth but little in money, and less in merit. We assure the reader that the utmost reliance may be placed on the Juno Cordial in the cure of the maladies mentioned above, and also those that follow, viz: Loss of Muscular Energy, Physical Lassitude and General Prostration, Irritability, and all Nervous Affections, Indigestion, Sluggishness of the Liver, Gleet, Lucorrhoea or Whites, and Flour Albus and every disease in any way connected with the disorder of the Procreative Functions—in all of which it will afford almost immediate relief, and, if used as directed, is almost certain to produce a positive and permanent cure. Persons about to marry, if conscious of any weakness or disability of a certain nature, should take this Cordial, as it will infallibly restore health and vigor in a brief period, and where want of offspring is a cause of regret, if recourse be had to it the most beneficial results may be anticipated with confidence. It is of priceless value to those without offspring. It has taken the precedence in Italy and will in all other countries where it may become known.

To spread wide the blessings of this medicine, I have appointed Messrs. Judson & Co., of the City of New York, in the United States of America, my sole Agents for its sale; and none can be genuine unless it comes through them, and their signature is on the wrapper.

From Chambers Edinburgh Journal.

Story of a Kite.

THE setting sun beamed in golden light over the country; long shadows lay on the cool grass; the birds, which had been silent through the sultry heat of the day, sang their joyous evening hymn: the merry voices of the village children sounded through the clear air, while their fathers loitered about enjoying the luxury of rest after labor. A sun-burned traveler, with dusty shoes, walked sturdily along the high road: he was young and strong, and his ruddy cheeks glowed in the warm light; he carried his baggage on a stick over his shoulder, and looked straight on toward the cottages of the village; and you might see, by the expression of his face that his eye was earnestly watching for the first glimpse of the home that lay among them, to which he was returning.

The same setting sun threw his golden beams over the great metropolis: they lighted up streets, and squares, and parks, whence crowds were retiring from business or pleasure to their various places of abode or gay parties: they pierced even through the smoke of the city, and gilded its great central dome; but when they reached the labyrinth of lanes and courts which it incloses, their radianee was gone, for noxious vapors rose there after the heat of the day, and quenched them. The summer sun is dreaded in those places.

The dusky light found its way with difficulty through a small and dim window into an upper room of a house in on one of these lanes, and any one entering it would at first have thought it was void of any living inhabitant, had not the restless tossing and oppressed breathing that proceeded from a bed in one corner borne witness to tho contrary. A weak, sickly boy lay there, his eye fixed on the door. It opened, and he started up in bed; but at the sight of another boy, a few years older than himself, who came in alone, he sunk back again, crying in a plaintiff voice, "Don't you see her coming yet?"

"No, she is not in sight: I ran to the corner of the lane, and could see nothing of her," replied the elder boy, who, as he spoke, knelt down before the grate, and began to arrange some sticks in it.

Every thing in the room bespoke poverty; yet there was an appearance of order, and as much cleanliness as can be attained in such an abode. Among the scanty articles of furniture there was one object that was remarkable as being singularly out of place and apparently very useless there: it was a large paper kite, that hung from a nail on the wall, and nearly reached from the low ceiling to the floor.

"There's eight o'clock just struck, John," said the little boy in bed. "Go and look once more if mother's not coming yet."

"It's no use looking, Jem. It won't make her come any faster; but I'll go to please you."

"I hear some one on the stairs."

"It's only Mrs. Willis going into the backroom."

"Oh dear, dear, what shall I do?"

"Don't cry, Jem,. Look, now I've put the wood all ready to boil the kettle the minute mother comes and she'll bring you some tea: she said she would. Now I'm going to sweep up the dust, and make it all tidy."

Jem was quieted for a few minutes by looking at his brother's busy operations, carried on in a bustling, rattling way, to afford all the amusement possible; but the feverish restlessness soon returned.

"Take me up, do take me up," he cried; "and hold me near the broken pane, please John;" and he stretched out his white, wasted hands.

John kindly lifted out the poor little fellow, and dragging a chair to the window, sat down with him on his knee, and held his face close to the broken pane, through which, however, no air seemed to come, and he soon began to cry again.

"What is it, Jem?—what's the matter?" said a kind voice at the door, where a woman stood, holding by the hand a pale child.

"I want mother," sobbed Jem.

"Mother's out at work, Mrs. Wilis," said John; "and she thought she should be home at half-past seven; but she's kept later sometimes."

"Don't cry," said Mrs Willis's little girl, coming forward. "Here's my orange for you."

Jem took it, and put it to his mouth; but he stopped and asked John to cut it in two; gave back half to the little girl, made John taste the portion he kept, and then began to suck the cooling fruit with great pleasure, only pausing to say, with a smile, "thank You Mary."

"Now lie down again, and try to go to sleep; there's a good boy," said Mrs. Willis; "and mother will soon be here. I must go now."

Jem was laid in bed once more; but he tossed about restlessly, and the sad will began again.

"I'll tell you what," said John, "if you will stop crying, I'll take down poor Harry's kite, and show you how he useed to fly it."

"But mother don't like us to touch it."

"No; but she will not mind when I tell her why I did it this once. Look at the pretty blue and red figures on it. Harry made it, and painted it all himself; and look at the long tail!"

"But how did he fly it? Can't you show me how poor Harry used to fly it?"

John mounted on a chest, and holding the kite at arms length, began to wave it about, and to mako the tail shake, while Jem sat up admiring.

"This was the way he used to hold it up. Then he took the string that was fastened here—mother has got it in the chest—and he held the string in his hand, and when the wind came, and sent the kite up, he let the string run through his hand, and up it went over the trees, up—up—and he ran along in the fields and it flew along under the blue sky."

John waved the kite more energetically as he described, and both the boys were so engrossed by it that they did not observe that the mother, so longed for, had come in, and had sunk down on a chair near the door, her face bent and nearly hidden by the rusty crape on her widow's bonnet, while the tears fell fast on her faded black gown.

"Oh mother, mother!" cried Jem, who saw her first, "come and take me—come and comfort me!"

The poor woman rose quickly wiped her eyes, and hastened to her sick child, who was soon nestled in her arms, and seemed to have there forgotten all his woes.

The kind, good-natured John had meanwile hung up the kite in its place, and was looking rather anxiously at his mother, for he well understood the cause of the grief that had overcome her at the sight of his occupation, when she first came in; but she stroked his hair, looked kindly at him, and bade him make the kettle boil, and get the things out of her basket. All that was wanted for their simple supper was in it, and it was not long before little Jem was again laid down after the refreshment of tea; then a matrass was put in a corner for John, who was soon asleep; and the mother, tired with her days hard work, took her place in the bed by the side of her child.

But the tears that had rolled fast down her cheeks as her lips moved in prayer before sleep came upon her, still made their way beneath the closed eyelids and Jem awoke her by saying, as he stroked her face with his hot hand, "Don't cry, mother; we wont touch it again!"

"It's not that, my child; no, no: it's the thought of my own Harry. I think I see his pleasant face, and his curly hair, and his merry eyes looked up after his kite." It was not often she spoke out her griefs; but now, in the silent night, it seemed to comfort her.

"Tell me about him, mother, and about his going away? I like to her you tell about him."

"He worked with father, you know, and a clever workman he learned to be."

"But he was much older than me. Shall I ever be a good workman, mother?"

The question made her heart ache with a fresh anguish, and she could not answer it; but replied to his first words, "Yes, he was much older. We laid three of our children in the grave between him and John. Harry was seventeen when his uncle took him to serve out his time in a merchant-ship. Uncle Ben, that was ship's carpenter, it was that took him.—The voyage was to last a year and a half, for they were to go to all manner of countries far, far away. One letter I had. It came on a sad day; the day after poor father died, Jem. And then I had to leave our cottage in our own village, and bring you two to London, to find work to keep you; but I have always taken care to leave word where I was to be found, and have often gone to ask after letters. Not one has ever come again; and it's six months past the time when they looked for the ship, and they don't know what to think. But I know what I think; the sea has rolled over my dear boy, and I ahall never see him again—never, never in this weary world."

"Dont cry so, mother dear; I'll try to go to sleep, and not make you talk."

"Yes—try; and if you can only get better, that will comfort me most."

Both closed their eyes, and sleep came upon them once more.

It was eight o'clook in the morning when the little boy awoke, and then he was alone; but to that he was accustomed. His mother was again gone to work, and John was out cleaning knives and shoes in the neighborhood, The table, with a small piece of bread and and a cup of blue milk and water on it, stood beside him. He drank a little, but could not eat, and then lay down again with his eyes fixed on Harry's kite.

"Could he fly it," or rather, "could he see John fly it—really out of doors and in the air?" That was of all thin g, what he most longed to do. He wondered where the fields were, and if he could ever go there and see the kite fly under the blue sky. Then he wondered if John could fly it in the lane. He crept out of bed, and tottered to the window.

The lane was very wet and slushy, and a nasty black gutter ran down it, and oozed out among the broken stones. There had been a heavy thundershower in the night, and as there was no foot pavement, and what stones there were, were very uneven and scattered, the black pools lodged among them, and altogether it seemed impossible for a boy to fly a kite there; for "how could he run along holding the string? he would tumble among the dirty pools. There were only four children to be seen in it now, out of all the numbers that lived in the houses, though it was a warm summer morning, and they were dabbling with naked feet in the mud, and their ragged clothes were all draggled. Mother would never let him and John do like that."

Still he stood, first examining the window, then looking at the kite; then putting his hand out through the broken pane, and pondered over a scheme that had entered his mind.

"John," he cried, as the door opened, "don't you think we could fly Harry's kite out of the broken pane?"

At first this idea seemed to John perfectly chimerical; but after some consultatien and explanation a plan was devised between the two boys, to complete which they only waited for their mother's return. They expected her at one, for this was only half a day's work.

Jem was dressed when she returned, and his excitement made him appear better; but she saw with grief that he could not touch his dinner; and her anxiety about him made her, less unwillingly than she otherwise would have done, consent to the petition he made, that, 'only for this once she would let him and John fly the kite outside the window." She stifled her sigh as she sat down to needlework, lest she should cast a gloom over the busy preperations that immediately commenced.

The difficulty had been how to get the kite out, because the window would not open. To surmount this, John was to go down to the lane, taking the kite with him, while Jem lowered the string out of the broken pane.

"When you get hold of the string, you know, John, you can fasten it, and then stand on that large stone opposite, just by where that gentlemen is, and hold up the kite, and then I will pull."

All was done accordingly. John did his part well. Jem pulled; the kite rose to the window, and fluttered about, for the thunder had been followed by a high wind, which was felt a little even in this close place, and the boys gazed at it with great pleasure As it dangled loosely by the window in this manner, the tail became entangled, and John was obliged to run up to help to put it right.

"Let it down to me again when I have run out," said he as he tried to disentangle it; "and I will stand on the stone, and hold it up, and you can pull again. There's the gentleman still, and now ther'es a young man besides. The gentleman has made him look up at the kite."

"Come and look, mother," said Jem: but she did not hear. "The young man has such a brown face, and such curly hair."

"And he's like—mother, he is crossing over!" cried John. "He has come into the house!"

The mother heard now. A wild hope rushed through her heart; she started up; a quick step was heard on the stairs; the door flew open, and the next moment she was clasped in her son's arms!

The joy nearly took away her senses. Broken words mingled with tears, thanksgivings, and blessings, were all that were uttered for some time between them. Harry had Jem on his knee, and John pressed close to his side, and was holding his mother tight by the hand, and looking up in her face, when at last they began to believe nnd understand that they once more saw each other. And then he had to explain how the ship had been disabled by a storm in the South Sens; and how they got her into one of the beautiful islands there, and refitted her, and after six months' delay, broaght ger back safe and sound, cargo and all; and how he and Uncle Ben were both strong and hearty.

"How well you look, my dear boy!" said the happy mother. "How tall and stout and handsome you are!"

"And he's got his curly hair and bright eyes still," said poor wan little Jem, speaking for the first time.

"But you, mother, and all of you, how pale you are, and how thin! I know—yes, don't say it—I know who's gone. I went home last night, mother. I walked all the way to the village, and found the poor cottage empty, and heard how he died."

"Home! you went there?"

"Yes, and the neighbors told me you were gone to London. But I slept all night in the kitchen, on some straw. There I lay, and thought of you, and of him we have lost, and prayed that I might be a comfort to you yet."

Joy and sorrow seemed struggling for the mastery in the widow's heart; but the present happiness proved the stronger, and she was soon smiling and listtening to Harry.

"I had a hard matter to find you," he said. "You had left the lodging they directed me to at first."

"But I left word were I had come to."

"Ay, so you had; and an old woman there told me you were at No. 10 Paradise Row."

"What cold she be thinking of?"

"No one had heard of you in that place. However, as I was going along back again to get better information, keeping a sharp look-out in hopes I might meet you, I passed the end of this lane, and saw it was called Eden-lane, so I thought perhaps the old lady had fancied Paradise and Eden were all the same; and sure enough they are both as like one as the other, for they are wretched, miserable places as ever I saw. I turned in here, and then No. 10 proved wrong too; and as I was standing looking about, and wondering what I had better do next, a gentleman touched my arm, and pointing first at the black pools in the broken pavement, and then up at this window, he said—I remember his very words, they struk me so—'Do not the very stones rise up in judgment against us! Look at these poor little fellows trying to fly their kite out of a broken pane!' Hearing him say so, I looked up, and saw my old kite—by it I found you at last."

They all turnéd gratefully toward it, and saw that it still swung outside, held there safely by its entangled tail. The talk therefore went on uninterruptedly. Many questions were asked and answered, and many subjects discussed; the sad state of poor little Jem being the most pressing. At the end of an hour a great bustle was going on in the room: they were packing up all their small stock of goods, for Harry had succeeded, after some argument, in persuading his mother to leave her unhealthy lodging that very evening, and not to risk even one more night for poor Jem in that poisonous air. He smoothed every difficulty. Mrs. Willis gladly undertook to do; and with her he deposited money for the rent, and the key of the room. He declared he had another place ready to take his mother to; and to her anxious look he replied, "I did good service in the ship, and the owners have been generous to us all. I've got forty pounds."

"Forty pounds!" If he had said, "I have got possession of a gold district in California," he would not have created a greater sensation. It seemed an inexhaustible amount of wealth.

A light cart was soon hired and packed, and easily held not only all the goods (not forgetting the kite), but the living possessors of them; and they set forth on their way.

The evening sun again beamed over the country; and the tall trees, as they threw their shadow across the grass, waved a blessing on the family that passed beneath, from whose hearts a silent thausgiving went up that harmonized with the joyous hymn of the birds. The sun-burnt traveler, as he walked at the horse's head, holding his elder brother's hand, no longer looked anxiously onward, for he knew where he was going, and saw by him his younger brother already beginning to revive in the fresh air, and rejoiced in his mother's expression of content and happiness. She had divined for some time to what home she was going.

"But how did you contrive to get it fixed so quickly, my kind good boy?" she said.

"I went to the landlord, and he agreed at once: and do not be afraid I can earn plenty for us all."

"But must you go to sea again?"

"If I must' do not fear. Did you not always teach me that His hand would keep me, and hold me, even in the uttermost parts of the sea?"

And she felt that there was no room for fear.

A week after this time, the evening sun again lighted up a a happy party. Harry and John were busied in prepering the kite for flying in a green field behind their cottage. Under the hedge, on an old tree trunk, sat their mother, no longer in faded black and rusty crape, but neatly dressed in a fresh, clean gown and cap, and with a face bright with hope and pleasure. By her was Jem, with cheeks already filling out, a tinge of color in them, and eyes full of delight. On her other side Was little Mary Willis. She had just arrived, and was telling them how the very day after they left, some workmen came and put down a nice pavement on each side of the lane, and laid a pipe underground instead of the gutter; and that now it was as dry and clean as could be; and all the children could play there, and there were such number of games going on; and they all said it was the best thing they had done for them for many a day; and so did their mothers too, for now the children were not all crowded into their rooms all day long, but could play out of doors.

"Depend upon it," said Harry, "it is that gentleman's doing that spoke to me of it the day I came first. This good old kite has done good service, and now it shall be rewarged by sailing up to a splendid height."

As he spoke, he held it up, the light breeze caught it, and it soared away over their heads under the blue sky; while the happy faces that watched it bore witness to the truth of his words—that "the good old kite had done good service."

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday; November 14, 1850.

☞ Mr Albert D. Drake is our authorised agent to receive subscriptions and advertisments.

☞ Mr. E. W. Carr, Third street, Philadelphia, opposite the Exchange, is our authorised agent for that city.

GEORGE F. FORT the Democratice candidate for Governor is elected by a majority of about 6000 votes. Four of the five Congressmen are Democrats, with a Democratic majority of two on joint ballot in the Legislature.

The Whig party in New Jersey has committed suicide; deliberately, with repeated and timely warnings of the consequences, they have presisted in their evil ways until, by repeated impunities they have hardened themselves to commit the awful deed of self destruction. The warnings of history, the oft repeated warnings of their own history, was insufficient to deter them from the fatal deed. Let their melancholy fate be a warning to all future violators of the people's rights.

The people had determined to be free, and so far as ridding themselves of those who had stood in the way of the enjoyment of their equal rights, they have accomplished their object; nay more, the warning is conveyed in its accomplishment, that they are the Sovereigns, and that their will must be obeyed.

How brittle is the tyrant's sceptre, whether wielded by the despotism of party or by that of a crowned head, is shown by the ease by which it is broken when attempting to usurp and withhold the rights of an intelligent people, when they have resolved to be free.

The people have expressed by their votes, conscientiously and fearlessly, otherwise they are not freemen, what they will have our laws to be, by whom they will have them enacted, and by whom they will have them executed and administered. That expression has been in favor of equal rights through general, just and equal laws.

Special privileges have too long been monopolized by a monied aristocracy—trampling in the dust the equal rights of the working man. Too long has EDUCATION been neglected, through which neglect has the rights of the mass been tampered with and monopolized, while they, spaniel like, have been made to lick the hand that robbed them—that holds them in most disgraceful, most dejective, and if not now abolished and more liberal measures secured will hold them in irretrievable bondage. Let the people therefore arise in their might, throw off the yoke that binds them and resolve to be free. Education is the sole guarantee that can insure its accomplishment; let them insist therefore on this as the first fruits of their victory, as through this all others will certainly be secured. As we provide for this will it show how we appreciate liberty.

Education and Liberty are twin sisters; were the one dwells there does the other flourish in the full vigor of life, scattering its inestimable blessings on every hand, causing its beneficiaries in the gratitude of their hearts to rise up and invoke blessings on its author's heads. Let us then, let the people everywhere in anticipation of the action of our government commence the great and good work. We have a neuclus formed here around which we can rally and gather force for greater exertions; let us prepare then by every means in our power to extend the circle until all within the borders of our State are brought within its magic influence—to be good and to do good, to perpetuate and extend the blessings of Liberty.

One great auxiliary to the cause of Education and to the extension of the benefits of Free Schools among the mass, is the Public Lyceum and Reading Room. We have very many young men, apprentices and others, and very many adults too who have grown up and are engaged in the active business pursuits of life, who can attain further improvement only through this source; by employing his leisure hours in reading, debate, and through public lectures. This subject claims our attention, the attention of the people every where should be aroused to its importance, by no other means more beneficially or economically can we diffuse knowledge and infuse an enlightened and liberty loving spirit. We have a Lyceum, which it is acknowledged, has been of advantage to many who have preceded us in the journey of life—has tended to advance them to a life of usefulness and virtue; shall not a rememberance of its prosperity invigorate our expiring energies and cause us to rejuvenate and raise up so noble an instrument in aid of so great, so glorious a cause. We trust so, we trust to see an interest immediately awakened which shall take hold of the minds of our readers to the furtherance of their own and their country's best interest. Let us therefore, while we do all that we can to further the cause of Free Schoos, extend their blessing by this their natural and most efficient aid, by establishing a Reading Room and Public Lyceum. Thus will it be be perceived, by our rulers, which hint they will no longer dare disregard, that the people, the present generation, are determined not only to enjoy Liberty themselves, but that their children and their children's children shall be enabled to appreciate and enjoy their inestimable, their God endowed rights.

☞ Rev. WM. WHITTAKER'S address on Temperance, delivered before the Sons of Temperance, on the 9th inst. will appear in our next.

☞ Professor Moore's Lectures on Psycology &c. will be continued on Friday evening. Those who have heard him express themselves gratified with their shillings worth of knowledge and fun.

☞ Public attention is requested to the advertisment of S. W. & J. Bullock. They have an extensive variety of Presses, for pressing Hay, Cotton, Wool, Oil, Dry Goods baling presses, &c., which, those wishing to purchase will find to their advantage to call and examine.

The Newark Mercury, one of the few Whig papers in the State which has consistently and sincerely advocated reform, thus truly acknowledges the cause of their defeat, significantly pointing out the true policy to be pursued. Let the Democrats therefore, who have been placed in power by a democratic people, give them democratic laws, guaranteeing to all equal rights, otherwise they read their fate in what follows.

—"When the mass of the people become sufficiently satisfied that the passage of any series of measures will advance their interests, they will sacrifice party, quietly, silently, and drop into the ballot-box, without parade or show, the powerful messenger of their will. It behooves, then, a great political party to lead the public mind into the adoption of wise measures, adapted to the good of the State and to the happiness of the people. No party can ever control public affairs that is founded upon the holding-back principle. It has no vitality, no popularity, no enthusiasm. Men will not stand still to be governed by it. The leading men of a party—those who govern its action and control its policy—must be in advance of, and not behind the people. The people must not push them, but they must draw the people. We shall have more to say when the wounded have been disposed of, and the missing found."

From the N. Y. Tribune

New-Jersey.

—"No matter: the State is overboard by a handsome majority. The Opposition have a clean sweep and if they will give the People Free Schools, Homestead Exemption, Land Reform, and deliverance from Railroad Monopoly, we won't shed the first tear. Senator Daytons's vote against abolishing Flogging in the navy has helped produce this result; but the inveterate Hunkerism of the recent Whig Legislatures has also had its influence. It is hard to lose the U S Senator, but chastisement is apt, for the present, to be grievous. We trust good will come of it."

Saturdays' Tribune says: "New-Jersey has just gone by twe board becauso our adversaries there claim to be for Progress while the late Whig Legislatures have resisted Progress, and Senator Dayton voted against abolishing Flogging in the Navy. That single vote, in view of Mr. Dayton's reelection depending on the Legislature just chosen, was used with deadly effect against us. New-Jersey is strongly for the Protection of Home Labor, but our adversaries said, "We too are for Protection," and so spiked that gun, while they went strait into us on Homestead Exemption, abolition of Property Qualifications for Jurors, Free Schools and other Progressive measures, —Shall the result teach us nothing?"

Thus it is admitted, on all hands, what was long ago verified by their acts, which they have to thank for their defeat, that the Whig party in new Jersey have ever been opposed to reform; in their defeat the people have shown their devotion to democratic principles and their determination to be governed only by liberal an enlightened, just and equal laws. The party that stands in the way of beneficial reform we trust will ever be thus sacrificed. Let those that have now been called upon to carry these and kindred measures into effect, proceed to prepare themselves by carefully maturing them, that they may execute with judgement the will of the people.

For the Gazette.

"Sober Second Thought."

'The ever present' now—
Is the only fit occasion,
Future's only in prospective,
And is only sweet evasion.

Then be ye up in earnest effort,
Youth, is the proper fitting season
To plant the seed of virtue's fruitage,
And awake the soul's deep reason.

What is reason? conscious knowing—
The soul's perceptions of the truth,
Dare then to obey its dictates,
Cultivate its budding growth.

It will just as surely bless ye,
As ye to its mandates bow,
The pleasant paths of wisdom treading,
Living for the present now.

Later from California.

Another Great Fire—Three Hundred Buildings Consumed.

From the California Courier, Sept. 20.

We are compelled to send to the States, by the steamer Isthmus, which leaves to-day, the sad news of another very destructive fire in San francisco, it being the fourth within nine months. It broke out at about 3 o'clock this morning, in the La Fayette Restaurant, and was first discovered by Mr. North, of the City Police. This time the burned district is bounded by Washington, Dupont, Pacific, and about half the square between Kearney and Montgomery sts. The property was mostly old and very cheap buildings, and the busines in that part of the city being chiefly a retail one, the loss, perhaps, is not more than one-third of that of the June conflagration. At a rough estimatimate, we set it down at $1,000,000. Perhaps the most valuable of any of the property destroyed, is the office of the Pacific News.

Suffering on the Plain

We are indebted to Hawley & Co's. for the Sacramento Transcript of yesterday, containing two letters from Capt. Waldo, one written at Great Meadow, Humboldt River, the other dated Truckee River, Sept. 15.

He states that the Relief Committee have not a single pound of flour east of the Mountains, that he entered the Desert on the 7th inst. met two men who had given up to die from starvation; same day two men died from starvation on Carson Desert; that those with wagons have no food but their poor exhausted animals; that footmen subsisted on the putrified flesh of the dead animals along the road, and disease and death are consequently sweeping them down.

The Cholera made its appearance on the 8th, and eight persons out of a small train died of it in three hours. The Indians take every advantage to steal their animal. and thus many are left more than six hundred miles beyond the settlements. Fighting between them and the emigrants occurs almost daily. Twenty thousand persons are yet beyond the Desert, of which number fifteen thousand "are now destitute of all kinds of provisions, yet the period of their greatest suffering has not arrived." "It will be impossible for ten thousand of this number to reach the mountains before the commencement of Winter."

From the Truckee to the head of the Humboldt the cholera is killing them off; the sick surround the Truckee Station unable to proceed. Capt. W. was about starting to persuade such as are from four to six hundred miles back to return to Salt Lake. He calls for 10,000 lbs. of flour for the Station at Truckee, and the same amount for the Summit. He says that those back several hundred miles will die by starvation unless relieved.

We regret our inabily to give as much of his communications as we could wish. He asks for contributions, and offers to the City Council his claim to $10,000 worth of property, if they will forward that amount in flour and articles for the sick to that place. His report is fearful. A black man from Boston rode express 400, miles with information. Cannot something be done here to save the lives of these our countrymen and friends? Many of them are women and children, widows and orphans, their husbands and fathers having died with the Cholera.—Alto California, Sept. 24.

☞ Gov. Haines has appointed Thursday, the twelfth day of December next as a day of public Thanksgiving.

New York Election.

According to the latest returns the Governor still remains in doubt. The Whigs have elected the Lieut. Gov., Canal Commissioner, a majority in both branches of the Legislature and a majority of Members of Congress. This gives the Whigs a U. S. Senator in place of Dickinson whose term expires in March.

☞ We learn from the Trenton True American, that Thos. S. Allison Esq., of Somerville, has been appointed by Gov. Haines to succed Dr. McChesney, as Secretary of State, whose term expires on the 10th inst.

☞ Hon. Jacob W. Miller will please accept our thanks for a bound volume, containing the first part of the Patent Office Report for 1849-50.

☞ Only fifty delegates attended at the opening of the Nashville Convention. Gov. McDonald of Geo. Chairman. He made an eloquent opening address, smacking stronly of secesion. How much the fifty delegates will beable to accomplish towards it remains to be seen. They adjourned till 12 o'clock next day for help.

MARTIAL PUNISHMENT.—Orders have been received at Portsmouth, N. H., from Gen. Scott, to have ihe spiked collars removed from the three soldiers at fort Constitution, who were sentenced by Court Martial to the severe punishment of wearing them for a year for disobedsence of orders.

☞ Why is a gambler superior to an honest man?

Because one is a good man, but the other a better.

THE NEW JERSEY

HORSE POWER

Manufacturing Company.

HAVING improved, strengthened and perfected A. D. CRANE'S Patent Horse Power, are now prepared to furnish the same to all who may want.

This Power consists of an endless floor running over a series of pulleys, connected by cranks, without a rack or cog wheel about it: none being required from the fact, that the weight of the horse on the floor or platform causes sufficient adhesion between it and the pulleys to transmit all the power he is able to give. Also by this arrangement the chain is freed from the draught or strain (which cannot be avoided in any other Stall Power.) except, what is reqired to pass the floor around. The requisite speed is obtained direct from the machine thereby avoiding a great amount of friction and wear, and lessening the liability to get out of order. They run so easily as to require less than an inch elevation to the foot. A self acting brake is attached by which the motion is kept regular and uniform even when the work is unsteady and irregular.

From the above description it is evident that this is the most simple and efficient Power known.

They are highly recommended by those who have used them, for driving Circular Saws, Lathes, Drilling Machines, Threshers, Grist Mills, Pumps, &c.

The Company have certificates to prove the above and also to show that the Two Horse Power will grind 40 bushels of Corn to Meal (with Platt's Patent Mill.) in a day of ten hours, making it an invaluable Power for the Southern planter as well as others.

It has taken Silver Medals at the different Fairs where exhibited, and the only one given to Horse Powers by the American Institute last fall.

They also furnish Threshers of the most approved construction.

Price of Single Power with Belt, $75; Double do. with Belt, $110; Thresher and Separator, $35.

CHERRY PECTORAL:

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, ASTHMA, WHOOPING-COUGH AND CONSUMPTION.

The annals of medical science, affording as they do ample proof of the power and value of many medicinal agents, have furnished no examples to compare with the sultary effects produced by 'AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL."

The remarkable cures of diseases of the Lungs which have been realized by its use, attested as they are by many prominent professors and physicians in this and foreign lands, should encourage the afflicted to persevere with the strong assurance that the use of the "CHERRY PECTORAL" will relieve and ultimately cure them.

We present to the public unsolicited tsteimonials from some of the first men in our country, upon whose judgment and experience implicit confidence may be placed.

DR, PERKINS, President Vermont Med. College, one of the most learned and intelligent physicians in the country, considers it a "composition of rare excellencies for the cure of that formidable disease, Consumption."

NORWICH April 26, 1846

DR. J. C. Ayer—Dear Sir:—Agreeable to the request of your agent, we will cheerfully state what we have known of the effects of your CHERRY PECTORAL, and they have been astonishing indeed. Mrs. Betsy Streeter had been afflicted with a severe and relentless cough, which reduced her very low; so low that little hope could be entertained of her recovery. Numerous remedies had been tried without effect before the CHERRY PECTORAL And that has cured her. George Watkinson Esq., had to our knowledge ben afflicted with Asthma, for eleven years, and grown yearly worse, until the CHERRY PECTORAL has now removed the disease and he is as free from any of its symptons as we are. The Rev. Mark Dane had been so severely attacked with the Bronchitis, as to disable him from his duties, and nothing had afforded him relief until I (Mr. Thorning) carried him a bottle of your PECTORAL, which cured him at once, and he now officiates as usual in his place.

These are three of the cases in which we have known it succesful, but never to fail. We have great pleasure in certifying to these facts; and are, respected sir, your humble servants.

REV. DAVID THORRING.
HON. JOSEPH BATTLES.

Among the distinguished authorities who have given their names to recommend CHERRY PECTORAL, as the best remedy that is known for the Affections of the Lungs, are "The London Lancet," "Canadian Journal of Medical Science," "Boston Medical and Surgical Journal," "Charleston (S. C.) Medical Review," "New Jersey Medical Reporter," Prof. WEBSTER, Harvard College, Prof. BARTLETT, Transylvania University of Medicine, President PERKINS, Vermont Medical College, Dr. VALENTINE MOTT, New York City, PARKER CLEVELAND, Bowdoin College, Prof. BUTTERFIELD, Willoughby College, Ohio, Prof. BRAITHWAITE, Leeds (Eng.) Medical School, Sir RICHARD KANE, Queen's College, Ireland, Prof. Rosenbaum, Leipsic.

The public have but to know the virtues and astonishing success of the "CHERRY PECTORAL," in curing diseases of the Lungs, when they will feel secure from these dangers, whenever this remedy can be obtained.

HERNIA.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.—This disorder, of very frequennt occurrence, may be considered as arising through weakness of the abdominal walls, inducing an enlargement in the natural openings formed therein for the transmission of blood and other vessels; such openings being enlarged, permit the escape of bowels or other viscera of the abdomen, devolving hernial swellings or rupture, which most generally occur outwardly, as at the navel, groins and thighs.

The complaint is likely to happen at birth, and therefore should be carefully looked for by those having the charge of children, that it may be arrested and cured promptly. It also occurs at any period of life, fo either sex, without regard to the condition or mode of living, and when found, should be attended to without delay—the final penalty being death, and that may be induced through strangulation at any momennt.

RUPTURES, are always to be treated with the surgical instruments known as Trusses and Supporters, and these require to be skillfully applied. With this view, the HULL'S TRUSS OFFICE, now established some thirty years, has under the various managers, presented to the public both male and female attendants to apply its instruments directly to the persons, which is preferable in all cases, and has also made improvement at different times, showing that advancement which study and practice only yield toward the relief of this malady.

With much pleasure the fact is now published, that recent improvements BUTLER'S TRUSS PADS have been made, and sufficiently tested upon numerous cases to warrant, through the cures already affected, their submission to the public, as being in adaptation and efficiency superior to any heretofore made known.

These improvements, recently patented, are now being applied at this office, 4 Vesey street, in cases of rupture, gravitation of the bowels, prolapsus uteri, prolapsus ani and piles.

The public may rely upon that care being made in their application, which will most likely tend to the final cure of the several complaints.

Hull's Truss Office, 4 Vesey street, Astor House, opposite St. Paul's Church, New-York.

FRED'K M BUTLER, Proprietor.

N. B.—The ladies' department is attended by a female qualified to fit the instruments, having so attended this office for many years.

Children trussed when only two weeks old, and invariably cured. [145is.

MECHANICAL MEDICINE.

Dr. Banning, formerly of this city, asks to announce that he has returned to 341 Broadway; for consultation and management of weaknesses of the vocal, pulmonary, digestive, nervous, spinal and female systems and also of the drooping, languor and physical deformities, which are so destructive of both health and beauty at the present day.

As these and kindred maladies are usually the result of a violation of the laws of physical organization, he will treat them chiefly by those exercises, mechanical appliances and reformatory habits of body, in conjunction with hydropathy galvanism and other discoveries of the day, which, united with the cooperative efforts of the subject, are calculated to relieve and restore the energies of the suffering and neglected organs.

Having spent several years in traveling for investigation and practical experiment on the subject, he has, at length, greatly improved and multiplied his surgical and mechanical appliances for the purpose. In addition to his new supports for female and spinal weaknesses, are some combining the properties of a universal hernial truss and an effective general support, with which he challenges cases of general debility, constipation, piles and prolapsus, ani, leucorrhea, prolapsus uteri and every variety of hernia.

The distinctive peculiarity of these devices is, that they do not weaken or restrain the motions or growth of the suffering parts, but act imitatively and concordantly with the mathematical genius of the body's forces. Hence, by a most comfortable and gentle pressure, they at once give great support and render the oppressed system eligible to its own restoration.

Feeble invalids coming from a distance will command prompt and faithful attention.

For more definite information, see his revised edition of "Animal Mechanics," and also his circular, which will be sent gratuitously when requested.

His improved body-braces, spinal supports and supporter trusses applied at his office (341 Broadway) and to be had wholesale and retail. City and country physicians and druggists are invited to call and examine Office hours from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. [121.

The undersigned being acquainted with some of the ingredints of HUTCHINGS' VEGETABLE DYSPEPSIA BITTERS, and having used it for some time in his practice with every desired effect, here commends this medicine from the certainty of its effect and gives it a preference over all preparations in medicine for that distressing complaint, Dyspepsia.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half: during a greater portion of this time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself until he was recommended to try HUTCHINGS' DYSPEPSIA BITTERS: he very soon derived a benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of HUTCHINGS' BITTERS for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine. L B. WYMAN. 23 Burling Slip.

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness. I was advised to take Hutching's Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease, and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia.

BLAKE'S PATENT

FIRE PROOF PAINT.

THE original and only genuine article, that can be obtained, without subjecting the purchaser to a prosecution for an infringement of my Patent. It has not yet been two year since the first counterfeit, was got up, but in that short time has proved itself, entirely worthless, as will be seen by the statement of more than twenty of the most respectable inhabitants of Sharon Ohio where mine as well as the Counterfeits are made. They say that we have examined recently, a house that was painted, with

Blake's Patent Fire Proof Paint,

SIX YEARS since (as an experiment) and now find the coating as hard as slate or stone. The action of the weather having no effect than to indurate and harden the substance. We will farther state that it has been such a complete failure in all the other kinds of stuff got up, and sold here, called Fire Proof paint (except Blakes) that his only is considered worth useing.

(Signed) Barnabus Crane and 20 others.

Hon. Daniel Webster has recently examined the patent and at the close of his report says, "I have no doubt whatever, but Mr Blake's Patent is good and valid. [104.

The genuine kept constantly on hand of different colors ground in oil or dry powder at the general depot No 84 Pearl-st. N Y.

MARRIAGE:

WHY SO OFTEN UNHAPPY.

THE CAUSES AND THE REMEDY!

MANY and many a wife endures years of bodily suffering and of mental anguish, prostrate and helpless, embittering her life, that of her husband, and hazarding the future welfare of her children, arising from causes which, if known, would have spared the suffering, the anguish to the wife, and to the husband embarrassments, and pecuniary difficulties having their origin in the mind being weighed down and harassed in consequence of the sickness of the companion of his bosom.

How important that the causes should be known to every wife, to every husband, that the dreadful and harrowing consequences to the health and happiness of both may be avoided! Life is too short and health too precious to admit any portion of the one to be spent without the full enjoyment of the other. The timely possession of a little work entitled as follows has been the means of saving the health and the life of thousands, as over copies have been sold since the first edition was issued.

The author has been induced to advertise it by the urgent and pressing request of those who have been indebted to its publication for all they hold dear (that all may have an opportunity of obtaining it), and who have favored him with thousands of letters of encomium, some of which are annexed to the advertisement.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S Private Medical Companion,

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

Twentieth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, $1.00.

THIS WORK IS INTENDED ESPECIALLY FOR THE MARRIED, or those contemplating marriage, as it discloses important secrets which should be known to them particularly.

Here, every female—the wife, the mother—the one either budding into womanhood, or the one in the decline of years, in whom nature contemplates an important change—can discover the causes, symptoms, and the most efficient remedies and most certain mode of cure, in every complaint to which her sex is subject.

The revelations contained in its pages have proved a blessing to thousands, as the innumerable letters received by the author (which he is permitted by the writers to publish) will attest.

SICKLY AND UNHAPPY WIVES.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Dayton, O.

"DAYTON, May 1, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU—My Dear Sir: 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion,' for which I enclosed one dollar to your address, came safely to hand. I would not have troubled you with these few lines, but that I am impelled by a sense of gratitude, for myself and wife, to give utterance to our sincere and heartfelt emotions.

"My wife has been perceptibly sinking for some three years or more, in consequence of her great anguish and suffering some months before and during confinement; every successive one more and more debilitated and prostrated her, putting her life in imminent danger, and which was, on the last occasion, despaired of. I supposed that this state of things was inevitable, and resigned myself to meet the worst. At this time (now about two months) I heard your book highly spoken of, as containing some matters reaching my case. On its receipt and perusal, I can not express to you the relief it afforded my distressed mind and the joy its pages imparted to my wife, on learning that the great discovery of M. M. Desomeaux provided a remedy. It opened a prospect to me which I little conceived was possible. No pecuniary consideration can ever repay the obligations I am under to you for having been the means of imparting to us the matters contained in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' But for this, ere another year would have passed over my head, in all human probability my wife would have been in her grave, and my children left motherless."

Extract from a Letter.

Competence and Health.

"LANCASTER, PA., Oct. 24, 1847.

"MY DEAR SIR: I know you will have the kindness to bear with me in encrouching upon your time, while I acknowledge (in behalf of myself and wife) the obligations we feel ourselves under to you in having made known certain matters, contained in your most invaluable 'Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' It has been worth its weight in gold to me. If I express myself rather warmly, you will see that I can not do so too warmly, when I inform you of the extent to which I have, through it, been benefited. I will state my situation when I obtained your book through the merest curiosity I look upon it as one of the most fortunate events of my life. I had been married some ten years, and was the father of seven children. I was long struggling unceasingly, to the end that I might gain a moderate competency, but the results of my utmost exertions at the end left me about where I was at the beginning of each year; and that only, with the most stinted economy, sufficing with barely the necessaries of life. Finally, this constant effort was beginning to have its effect upon my health: I felt less capable to endure its continuance, while I felt the necessity of perseverance.

"This constant, unceasing struggle on my part was imperative, in consequence of the prostrated condition of my wife (with occasional intermission) for six years, much of the time confined to her bed, and of course incapable of taking the charge and management of household affairs. Her condition arose from causes of which I was ignorant. Oh! what would I have given had I the six years to live over again! What would my wife have given to have been spared the long days and still longer nights prostrate on a bed of sickness!—all of which would have been avoided, had I then seen a copy of 'THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION.'"

From a Physician.

DANGEROUS DELIVERIES, OBSTRUCTIONS, IRREGULARITIES, &C.

How many are suffering from obstruction or irregularities peculiar to the female system, which undermine their health, the effects of which they are ignorant, and for which their delicacy forbids seeking medical advice! How many suffer from prolapsus uteri (falling of the womb), or from fluor-albus (weakness, debility, &c., &c)! How many are in constant agony for many months preceding confinement! How many have difficult if not dangerous deliveries, and whose lives are jeoparded during such time, will find in its pages the means of prevention, amelioration, and relief!

Extract from a Letter.

To those just Married.—"Had I known!"

"PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU: Had I known of the im portant matters treated of in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion' some years ago, how much misery I might have escaped! I have suffered years from causes which you point out in your book, without knowing what to do. I obtained a copy, and found my case treated of. I trust every female will avail herself of the information contained in its pages."

Letters are daily received of this character, unnecessary to present.

To those yet unmarried, but contemplating marriage, or perhaps hesitating as to the propriety of incurring the responsibilities attendant upon it, the importance of being possessed of the revelations contained in these pages, so intimately involving their future happiness, can not be appreciated.

It is, of course, impracticable to convey more fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage; neither is it necessary, since it is every one's duty to become possessed of knowledge whereby the sufferings to which a wife, a mother, or a sister, may be subject, can be obviated.

☞ CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against various catch-penies intended to be palmed off upon them initiating the title of the work as "The Married LADIES' Medical Companion," and various other titles. FOR FEMALES AND MALES

Dr. Lazetti's Juno Cordial, or Protective Elixir.

This is the only actual remedy ever discovered for impetency, Genital Debility, Nocturnal Emissions, and all diseases occasioned by certain secret habits; and many of the nostrums recently recommended for the same complaints are worthless imitations which its unrivalled excellence, fame and popularity have brought into the market. The Medical Faculty of Europe and the United States are unanimous in their recommendations of the Juno Cordial and have not given their sanction in a single instance that has been authenticated, to any compound for the same purposes. The nature of the maladies relieved by the Juno Cordial are generally such as to leave the publication of certificates of cures out of the question, or the proprietor could produce a host of the most conclusive testimony to show that the great reputation that it enjoys was not accidentally obtained, but is firmly based upon its positive, and apparently miraculous virtues. In all directions are to be found the happy parents of healthy offspring, who would not have been so, but for this extraordinary preparption. And it is equally potent in the many diseases for which it is recommended. Objection has been naturally made to the price of the Juno Cordial, because the trash that has been thrown into the market in opposition to it is sold cheaper; but the fact is, the Cerdial cannot be afforded for less, and ought to be much dearer, as many of the ingredients which compose it are among the costliest things in nature; whereas the others are made up of cheap drugs, worth but little in money, and less in merit. We assure the reader that the utmost reliance may be placed on the Juno Cordial in the cure of the maladies mentioned above, and also those that follow, viz: Loss of Muscular Energy, Physical Lassitude and General Prostration, Irritability, and all Nervous Affections, Indigestion, Sluggishness of the Liver, Gleet, Lucorrhoea or Whites, and Flour Albus and every disease in any way connected with the disorder of the Procreative Functions—in all of which it will afford almost immediate relief, and, if used as directed, is almost certain to produce a positive and permanent cure. Persons about to marry, if conscious of any weakness or disability of a certain nature, should take this Cordial, as it will infallibly restore health and vigor in a brief period, and where want of offspring is a cause of regret, if recourse be had to it the most beneficial results may be anticipated with confidence. It is of priceless value to those without offspring. It has taken the precedence in Italy and will in all other countries where it may become known.

It also possesses the unrivalled qualities of curing incipient Consumption, and I have administered it with great success to patients who have sought our delightful climate for the restoration of their health and the result is that a medicine has been added to the catalogue for the cure of insipient consumption.

To spread wide the blessings of this medicine, I have appointed Messrs. Judson & Co. of the City of New York, in the United States of America, my sole Agents for its sale; and none can be genuine unless it comes through them, and their signature is on the weapper

Address on Temperance.

By Rev. Wm. Whittaker.

Delivered before the Sons of Temperance Plainfield, N. J. Nov. 9. 1850

RESPECTED FRIENDS.—I rise this evening to address you upon a subject which has been the theme of innumerable moral essays both from the pulpit and the press.

The subject of temperance has called forth into active exercise the noblest powers of the human mind, and elicited some of the most striking examples of eloquence and wit.

But the theme is not yet exhausted, and while the evils of intemperance still exist in our midst and threaten to destroy all that is valuable both in time and eternity, it is the duty of every friend of God and man to engage heart and hand in this great contest with good and evil—with virtue and vice—with Christ and Belial until our world shall be "redeemed—regenerated and disenthralled."

It is not my intention on the present occasion to dwell upon the evils of intemperance—to point you to scenes of suffering, to recount tales of wretchedness and woe. I speak not now, of families beggared and driven houseless and friendless upon the stinted charity of a cold and unfeeling world—of affections chilled—of prospects blasted—of hopes annihilated, and of souls immortal ruined forever. Such a view of the subject is too dark and fathomless for me to explore during the brief period in which I shall be permitted to address you this evening.

Suffice it to say, that the blighting effects of intemperance are not confined exclusively to any nation, or portion of the globe, but is characteristic of whatever spot the foot of man hath trodden. There is no necessity of consulting the page of history, nor of travelling back to ancient, populous, and dissipated cities and empires, in order to illustrate the extravagance—the madness, and the miseries of intemperance—the picture is constantly before our eyes—every village—city—town and district throughout our widely extended country, furnishes melancholy evidence of the existence—prevalence and progress of this vice. The destructive influence of intemperance is to be seen in the palace and the cottage—in secret and in public—among the high and the low—the rich and the poor—the elevated and degraded the learned and the ignorant. Wherever you go, you may clearly discern the indelible impress of the monsters foot. The despairing cries of its deluded victims are borne on every passing breeze, and heard in every zephyr.

Go with me to the grave of the drunkard, and see the passing traveller point to the humble mound, and the rough unlettered stone, on which the hand of affection never placed an epitaph, and hear him say, there sleeps the man who cheated his creditors—beggared his family, and brought down the grey hairs of venerable parents with sorrow to the grave.

Once he was a noble youth, with a graceful form—a vigorous intellect and a spotless character. He was the idol of his fond parents, and the pride of a numerous circle of relatives and friends. But in a dark and evil hour the fell destroyer came—he took the poisened cup to his lips and while the loud sob of affection and the piercing cries of pratling innocence were ringing in his ears, he drained its fatal contents. From that very moment, the mark of Cain was stamped upon him, and with fearful velocity he was whirling down the fearful vortex of ruin. With palzied limbs, and bloated countenance, he lived a curse to himself and others, until the last remaining wreck of property was gone, and then a putrid mass of corruption, he was hurried into the grave, and a widowed wife and helpless children were turned pennyless upon the worlds wide stage.

Never was there a more faithful picture of the effects of intemperance, than is given by Solomon in his book of Proverbs.

"Who hath woe?—who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath babblings? who hath wounds without a cause? who hath redness of eyes? They that tarry long at the wine, they that go to seek mixed wine.

Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth its colour in the cup, when it moveth itself aright, at the last, it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder."

The Bible is full of descriptions of this character and abounds with warnings against this degrading vice and exhortations to pursue the path of temperance and sobriety.

From the earliest ages of the world intemperance was held in the greatest abhorence, and marked out for the severest punishment. Moses in laying down rules and laws for the government of the Israelites took care to invest parents and judges with power to punish a crime which, if permitted to go unpunished he foresaw would be productive of the most disastrous consequences. In the 21st. of Deuteronomy he commands the parents of a stubborn and rebellious son to bring him before the elders. And they shall say unto the elders of his city, "This our son is stubborn and rebellious he will not obey our voice; he is a glutton and a drunkard. And all the men of his city shall stone him with stones, that he die: so shalt thou put evil away from among you: and all Israel shall hear and fear"

Now terrible as this punishment was who shall say that it was too severe when we take into consideration the awful consequences of this vice.

Before we pass a hasty judgment upon such a sentence, let us look for a single moment at the wise and provident father—the fond confiding mother, and the affectionate brothers and sisters, all plunged into hopeless wretchedness by the intemperance of one member of the family. Look upoh that broken hearted mother who in her widowhood has one son to whom she ought to go for consolation and counsel in her declining years, rendered doubly miserable and at last reduced to absolute beggery by his idleness and intemperance. Endeavor to realize the utter hopelessness and wretchedness of such a mother, if you can—make her case your own—enter into her feelings—bring it home to your own hearts, and you cannot help sympathising deeply with her afflictions. See her toiling for him without a murmur of complaint—watching over him with sleepless vigilence and intense anxiety—indulging him with all the fondness of a mothers love—paliating his offences with all the compassion of womans nature—clinging to him with the unconquerable attachment of maternal affection, and even at last when reduced to a state of the most abject penury, weeping in all the bitterness of grief, not for herself, but for the ungrateful and miserable being who is the cause of all her suffering. Bruised and broken though her heart may be, and repulsed a thousand times by her own degraded and unnatural offspring still like a ministering angel of mercy she toils on in hope of success, and exclaims in the language of the poet:

Thou shall not force me from thee:
Use me reproachfully, and like a slave:
Tread on me, buffet me, heap wrongs on wrongs
On my poor head: I'll bear it all with patience,
Shall weary out thy most unfriendly cruelty:
Lie at thy feet, and kiss them, though they spurn me;
Till wounded by my sufferings thou relent,
And raise me to thy arms with dear forgivness.

We must look at a specktacle like this, and we need not go far to find it,—we must look at the deep ingratitude of such a son—at his cruetly—want of natural affection and hopeless wretchedness and ruin, if we would form any adequate idea of the evils of intemperance.

Behold again that emaciated and care worn shadow of a once blooming and happy wife. A short time since and you might have seen her in the possession of health, and beauty, and contentment, admired and beloved by a large circle of relatives and friends. You might have seen her looking up with confidence and affection to him who had won her trusting heart, and expecting to find in him a loving and faithful companion—a comforter in the dark night of affliction, and a protection in the hour of danger. But alas! the blighting winds of intemperance. more destructive than the pestilential breath of the Boan Upas tree, or the Sirocco of the desert has swept away all her bright anticipations into the dark tomb of oblivion. The experience of a few short years has convinced her that no confidence whatever can be placed in the profession of him, who had in the presence of God and man, solemnly promised to love, and cherish, to protect, and support until death.

Once she received the tender embrace of an affectionate husband—now she is made to feel the blow of a monster. Once she heard words of kindness and met smiles of love, but now she listens to the oath, and the curse, and meets the angry scowl.

"Her eye is on him, and it might be seen
By the flush'd cheek what thoughts are in her heart
And by the deadly paleness that succeeds
How her heart breaks within her."

This is no fancy sketch—no fiction—no airy flight of the imagination but a stern and solemn reality.

We speak that which we know and testify that which we have seen."

Intemperance is the fruitful source of woes of all dimensions. It is destructive of habits of industry—it is fatal to health and usefulness and respectability—it is productive of poverty—it impairs the intellectual powers and dethrones reason—it unfits a man for the duties and the enjoyments of social life—it is productive of almost every vice that can be named among men—it leads to falsehood—it extinguishes the finest and tenderest sensibilities of the human heart and gives birth to contention, cruelty, revenge and premature death. The drunkard not only shows his disregard of God, but he tramples upon those blessings which distinguish him from the brutes that perish—he deliberately degrades his rational—intellectual and moral nature—he pursues, with his eyes open a course of conduct that is ruinous both to the body and the soul. I know there is a momentary charm—there is a captivating power in the intoxicating cup, or the flowing bowl—around the festive board, the cares which were wont to harrass the mind are all forgotten—the sorrows which pressed heavily upon the wounded heart seem to pass quickly into oblivion, and even futurity itself appears divested of its terrors—the grave become gay—the silent loquacious—the timid grow bold as a lion.

Such is the fair and attractive picture of intemperance so often presented to the view, and which proves so alluring to the young and inexperienced mind, while its darker hues of strife and passion and revenge and murder, are studiously concealed In its earlier stages it may at times afford a vivid picture of the livliness animation, and gaiety which pertains to the spring time of life, but in its progress and consumation, it presents to the mind all the coldness, torpitude, and desolation of death.

Go ask the wretched criminal who has imbrued his hands in the blood of his fellow man, under what influence he perpetrated the foul deed, and in nine cases out of ten he will tell you that it was under the influence of ardent spirits. Ask the convicted felon, be his crime theft—house breaking or forgery what first led him to enter the path of the transgressor and in a large majority of instances you will find that intemperance was the cause. Go to our poliece courts and interrogate the delinquents whose petty larcenies are the constant theme, and you will learn that the crimes with which they are charged, have been committed under the influence of, or inorder to obtain the means to quench their raging thirst for that, which taken into the mouth, steals away the brains. Well might Solomon exclaim:

"Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging, and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise."

What vast multitudes of our most efficient and promising yong men does it not cast down into the lowest depths of infamy and then sweep them away into a drunkards grave.

"It weaks the brain, it spoils the memory,
Hasting on age and wilful poverty:
It drowns thy better parts, making thy name
To foes a laughter, and thy friends a shame.
Consider how it soon destroys thy grace
Of human shape, spoiling the beauteous face:
Puffing the cheeks, bleering the curious eye,
Studding the face with vicious heraldry.
What pearls and rubies does the wine disclose
Making the purse poor to enrich the nose,
How does it nurse disease, infect the heart
Drawing some sickness into every part!"

Now the question with which we have more particularly to do is this—can there be found an effectual remedy?—can the ravages of this moral pestilence be arrested? I answer only come out and act upon the principles embodied in the constitution of your socity and as far as You are concerned the work will be accomplished.

The "Sons of Temperance," and the friends of temprance every where have only to exercise self-denial unwavering faith—heroic firmness—and persevering effort, and our world will emerge from the obscurations which have fallen upon it, into the light and purity and blessedness of the Gospel of the son of God.

And I ask is any scheme of benevolence better calculated to awaken greater interest, or impose higher and more general obligations upon every lover of his country and every well wisher of his race? Is not the elevation and the salvation of the drunkard a work demanding the noblest efforts of every christian philanthropist? Yes among all the great effort of christian enterprize, the temperance cause holds a commanding position.

Now the universal diffusion of the religion of Jesus christ, and the restoration of our guilty world to holiness and heaven, is the sincere desire and fervant prayer of every good man yet this mighty and glorious work can never be accomplished, so long as intemperance shall be permitted to counteract and destroy the influence of that Gospel which alone can make wise unto salvation. I do most firmly believe that there are individuals in this and in every other community who can never be brought under the influence of the Gospel, until Yours and every other kindred society with its purity of principle—its power of exam-ple and its benevolence of motive and of objects, shall go before, like the forerunner of Jesus, and prepare the way for its ultimate and universal triumph.

In vain does the ambassador of Christ beseech, exhort, and persuade men to be reconciled to God—in vain do christians distribute tracts and bibles from house to house—in vain does the press with its myriad voices speak out—all all will prove powerless and useless so long as the moral and intellectual part of man's nature is steeped in the fumes of alcohol. This is not a bold and unsupported assertion, but one which is abundantly confirmed by actual experiment and the express and positive declarations of the word of God.

"What fellowship hath light with darkness? Ye cannot drink the cup of the lord and the cup of devils."

It is therefore utterly vain to hope for the spiritual well-being of any man so long as he remains under the dominion of intemperate and vicious habits. This may be proved from the nature of the christian religion. Its claims are presented for the decision of the reason and the judgment—it operates upon the heart, through the medium of the intellect—its appeals are made to our hopes and to our fears—to all the strongest susceptibilities of our nature—but when a man is under the influence of intoxicating liquor his intellect is beclouded and he is disqualified for appreciating the truth presented for his consideration. He is unable to weigh the motives held up in order to influence his decision—his purposes are unstable—his emotions and feelings are as uncertain and transcient as the vapery cloud—his mind is unballanced—his nature is unhumanized, and he is not a fit subject for salutary and permanent impressions. Now every dram he drinks only gives vigor and virulence to his appetite—inveteracy to his habits, and deepens the yawning gulf between him and safety. Now what can bring order out of this mass of confusion—save from destruction this accumulation of moral interest, and rescue from a druukards grave and a drunkards doom, vast multitudes of our fellow men? We answer again, the preaching of the Gopel alone cannot do it—it is united and concentrated efforts and influence of the friends of temperance every where that, under God, can accomplish the mighty work. They can wrench the poison cup from the hand of its deluded votary—can dry up the polluted streams, that flow through the land, and restore the wretched inebriate to his right mind and his right place in society.

This is an object embracing in its capacious grasp interests commensurate with a never ending eternity and therefore demanding the noblest efforts and greatest sacrifices of every christian philanthropist. But your society is not limited in its influence to those who are already pouring out their libations to the God of Bachus, it is rolling around the uncorrupted and youthful mind a moral influence that will prove as an impregnable fortress against the ravages of this giant foe.

It is changing the tide of public feeling, and turning the current of public sentiment in regard to drinking usages—it is effecting a moral reformation and achieving a moral victory. The proof of this may be seen by looking at the different grades and orders of intemperate men and marking the influence which this and kindred societies have upon each.

Men are not made drunkards in a day, or week, or month—it requires an apprenticeship—a process of training and practicing before a man can be fully initiated into all the mysteries of this black art. Suppose, what is the fact, that twenty thousand drunkards die annually in our land, in order to come to an end so infamous and hopeless they have to pass from one degree of excess to another till they reach the ultimatum of their wretchedness and ruin.

Here is a class of twenty thousand already graduated in the school of vice and ripened for their doom—bloated—haggard—and besotted inebriates tottering on the very verge of perdition. You can scarcely perceive a flash of thought, or a spark of intellect that indicate they were once Men, created after the image of God and born for immortality.

Just behind them you see another class of twenty thousand, not so far gone it is true, in moral pollution and hopeless degradation, yet moving onward to the fearful cries which must terminate their dark and eventful history. Behind them is still another class more elevated in the scale of intelligence, who repudiate the charge of drunkenness as a foul slander and who shudder at the bare thought of beastly intoxication. In this class are found the temperate drinker—the man of influence—of taste and talent and education—but still they are all making slow but certain advancement, and habit is stealing upon them and gradually doing its work of death. Behind them, is yet another class who move in the walks of refined and elevated society, who drink only their wines, and have never felt the paralizing and polluting influence of the stronger liquors. Now every month and year rolls this mighty mass of living and accountable beings, onward to that momentious period in their moral history, when their doom is fixed and sealed forever. That such is the nature and influence of habit, is proved by the experience of the past, and the history of the present. Now upon the first class, I am free to admit that the influence of your society—of piety—prayer and the preaching of the Gospel is but very limited, for the seal of reprobation is stamped upon them—"they have passed the Rubican." Upon the second, it often awakens conscience—reclaims the way word—restores public confidence reunites the sundered ties of domestic happiness and throws a halo of bliss around the domestic sanctuary. Upon the third, its influence is still more salutary and extensive. It guards and secures moral principle and saves from present infamy and future ruin. Upon the fourth, its influence is effectual—it is the shield to word off the arrows that come dipped in wormwood and gall—it is the helmet to defend from danger—it is the impregnable fortress of the soul—it is the mystic hand holding out the olive branch, which beckons to glory, honor and immortality.

These my friends are not figures of fancy, but stubborn facts, to stimulate and encourage you in your work of faith, and your labors of love. Such is the influence I doubt not which you design to exert both in your individual and asssociate capacity, and as far as you walk according to this rule, and pursue this object, I bid you "God speed." Let me impress upon Your minds the necessity of united and persevering effort in order to ensure success in this great and benevolent enterprise. Let your motto be, "United we stand, divided we fall."

It is the combination and concentration of individual effort properly directed, that generally ensures success, hence says the wise man, "Two are better than one, and a three fold cord is not easily broken."

In all bodies associated for the purpose of accomplishing any great object whether political or moral, there is a strong tendency to throw off personal responsibility. Every man professes to be interested in the object—is unwilling to cherish the suspicion of failure, and is disposed to conclude that if there are great numbers the thing will succeed, without the active operation of individuals. Now just in proportion as this spirit prevails in your society, do the probabilities of a failure increase. The efficiency of Your Order depends entirely upon the energy and activity of its individual members. Without this it will be weak and powerless.

The majestic river that bears upon its bosom the richly laden vessel is made up of small tributary streams. The shower that waters the earth and brings beauty, and freshness, and fertility to the parched and barren soil is composed of individual drops.

Had not your forefathers felt a deep sense of personal responsibility—had not each man been willing to share in the hardships and privations of that mighty struggle, you, their children would this day have been the subjects of a foreign government. So firmly were they convinced of the absolute necessity of energy and concert of action, that one of their number publickly declared "unless we hang together, we shall hang separately.,' So must it be in the great temperance revolution—every friend of the cause should buckle on his armour and go forth to meet the foe strong in the faith of those great cardinal principles inscribed upon your banner—"LOVE, PURITY, AND FIDELITY."

The cause in which you are engaged is a good one—it is the cause of God and suffering humanity, and therefore must succeed. You put in motion a system of causes by which the world will be delivered from the fearful consequences of a dreadful curse—you act for the renovation, the elevation, and the redemption of your race. You act the part of true patriots and philanthropists—you aim to save your country from the tomb of nations, and give it a conspicuous place on the bright page of history.

Where is there an enterprise that is stamped with greater moral worth and grandeur, save the Gospel? Where is there one to be found which takes greater hold on the moral—political—and religious interests of society, or presents a more pressing claim upon your sympathies and your efforts? Do we pity the folly and madness of the benighted Pagan?—do we weep over the woes and wailings of the deluded widow who throws herself on the funeral pile of her departed husband—do we shudder at the thought of innocent children being sacrificed to idols of wood and stone? Ah! our tears are feigned and false—our sympathy is hollow and hypocrstical unless we feel and labor for the recovery of the poor inebriate who is bruised and broken by self inflicted lacerations, and lies bleeding and perishing by the way side. Our prayers are a solemn mockery, and our offerings unto the lord, an abomination, unless like the good Samaritan we go to the miserable drunkard—pour the oil and wine of christian sympaty and benevolence into his wounds—lift him up from the degradation into which he has fallen, and watch over him, and "take care of him" until he is restored to moral soundness and sobriety.

There are individuals in our midst who while they acknowlodge that the objects of your society are benevolent and deserve success, yet refuse to cooperate with you in stemming the torrent and driving back the tide of wretchedness and crime which pours through the flood gates of intemperance. They wish you to go forward in this work of benevolence with increased diligence and zeal while they stand still and simply look at the blessed results. They would urge you not to grow weary in your efforts to rouse the infatuated drunkard from his moral slumber on the crumbliug verge of destruction—to burst the chains which intemperance has forged and fastened on his limbs, and to prepare him for a life of usefulness in this world, and a life of blessedness in that which is to come—but they utterly refuse to take a part in this God like undertaking—they are unwilling to encounter difficulties—to make any sacrifices, or breast the storm of persecution of such an enterprize. Now —I care not a fraction whether such persons are in the church, or in the world, but one thing I know they are strangers to that disinterested benevolence which prompted the noble efforts of martyrs—prophets and apostles, which led the compassionate redeemer of the world to "go about continually doing good." Such individuals are mere ciphers in the world—they are of no benefit to suffering humanity—their hearts never throb responsible to the calls of charity—they are cold and insensible as the icebergs of the Artic pole. As soon might you hope, by your uplifted hand, to stay the lightning when it flashes from the bursting cloud, or move the mountain from its deep foundation, as to induce such selfish and frigid souls to perform one single act of real benevolence to their suffering fellow beings. And yet they affect to sympathize with human wretchedness, and pity the miserable condition of the drunkard and his outcast family. But of what use, I demand, is the mere feeling of compassion, without a practical exhibition of its power and blessedness? What avails it to say to a brother in distress, "be thou fed and be thou clothed while you refuse to put forth a helping hand to relieve his necessities? Suppose you saw a fellow being struggle in the water, and instead of making a vigorous effort to save him, you should profess to be so overcome with sympathy, as not to be able to move a finger for his rescue! Of what benefit would all your professions and feelings of love and pity be to the drowning man? I will tell you, it would prove his destruction, for while you was indulging in this specious and speculative benevolence he would be gasping in the agonies of death It would have been infinitely better if you had experienced less of this spurious sensibilty, and more of the real nature of active sympathy, then you would not have lost a moment in useless and soulless professions, but would have instantly rushed into the stream—grasped the hand that was lifted up for help, and thus have saved a brother man from going down to death.

"Kindness has resistless charms,
All things else but weakly move;
Fiercest anger it disarms,
And clips the wings of flying love."

History informs us that a meeting was once held in one of the Grecian States during the period of their ancient glory, when the citizens were convened for the purpose of devising measures for the erection of a temple to one of their divinities. Among other subjects of discussion the plan and the builder of the temple were to be determined, and an architect rose up who gave them an elaborate speech on the model he had to propose and the architectural grandeur by which it would be distinguished. He received the plaudits and acclamations of that speech-loving people, but when he had finished, another builder rose up and all he said was—What my brother has talked about I can do! It is unnecessary to inform you that the last speaker obtained the suffrages of the entire assembly. The application of this story is sufficiently obvious to every indidual present. Let every friend of temperance do more, and talk less.

"Attempt the end, and never stand to doubt;
Nothing's so hard, but search will find it out"

To the "Sons of Temperance" I need not say that in the prosecution of your benevolent undertaking you will have obstacles to surmount—dangers to face—sacrifices to make, and sufferings to endure. This you must expect—for this you must be prepared, and it is only being clad in the invincible panoply of truth and a clear conscience, that you may hope to repel every false insinuation, and put to silence the tongue of slander. Judging from the present aspect of things you may rest assured that the time is drawing near when the great battle will be fought between the friends of temperance and their implacable and determined foes.

What meaneth this mighty stir—this gathering of the forces of Gog and Magog—this hostile attitude and these violent motions of the enemy? "He knoweth that he hath but a short time to reign" and is therefore mustering all his troops and arming for the final conflict. He has come down in great wrath, but will be compelled to surrender to the invincible champions of the great temperance Legion. We need not marvel that he shall be so fierce and resolute, for the last efforts of any thing are generally the most violent and determined. This is true both in a physical and moral sense. For instance, let some dire disease lay its paralyzing hand upon the human frame and prostrate the physical powers, and there will come a crisis—a time when weary nature will make her last desperate and most powerful effort. This is obviously the case in fevers—then, human nature as if conscious of her perilous condition, and gifted with more than mortal energy, rises up in all the majesty of her strength, and with one mighty struggle, triumphs or expires.

Again, take the case of a man who has been long endeavoring to accomplish some great enterprize—let discouragements be before him—let obstacles rise like mountains to impede his progress, and he will call into requisition all the varied resources of his mind—he will collect all his energies—he will strain every nerve—ply every artifice and will finally succeed, or abandon the project forever. Now what is true of men in an individual and physical capacity, is also true in a collective and moral point of view. Let any number of men be engaged in the support of any system, or principle, that stand opposed to others and depend upon it, sooner or later a crisis will come—all their strength and influence shall be collected and concentrated and by making one grand, simultaneously movement, victory or defeat will be the inevitable result.

"Sons of temperance—be true to yourselves—to the principles of your constitution—to your country and to God—be strong in the consciousness of your own integrity, and the goodness of your cause, and with such powerful weapons, you shall go forth from conquering unto conquer—victory shall twine around your brows the wreath of unfading laural—the blessing of many a poor drunkard will come upon you and you shall cause the widow's heart to sing for joy.

"Never give up," Tis the Secret of glory;
Nothing so wise can philosophy preach.
Think of the names that are famous in story;
"Never give up!" is the lesson they teach.
How have men compass'd immortal achievements?
How have they moulded the world to their will?
Tis that 'midst dangers, and woes, and bereavements,
"Never give up!" was the principle still."

BOSTON DAILY EVENING TRANSCRIPT,
JUNE 7, 1850.

By Telegraph for the Transcript only.

The new steamer Velocipede arrived at Halifax, 36 hours, 9 minutes, 6 seconds, precisely from Liverpool; fog, head-winds and gales all the way. The steam syringe for smoothing the waters, by discharging oil from the bows, worked well; and Paine's lantern, invented by a gentleman of that name, in the last century, and now getting to be understood, overcame the fog entirely. Cotton down. Welsh leeks and rabbits looking up. Day before steamer left, arrived ship Bird of Freedom, Captain Dinah Pinkney, from Charleston,—first cargo of cotton. This being the first arrival in a free black bottom since the dissolution, created an immense sensation. London, May 20—The venerable Madame Moody was inducted Archbishop of Canterbury, with great pomp. Thirty female constables sworn in—fine looking fellows.

The first Congress of the Nothern Confederacy has been in session at Albany for some days The President was confined, on Tuesday last, and safely delivered of twins. She is unable, therefore, for the present to attend to the business of nation. Several members of the Cabinet are near their time; and the Sectary of War is weaning her baby. Congress therefore thinking of a recess, and of making a pilgrimage to Pensylvania, and visiting the grave of the illustrious Mott.

☞ Mr Albert D. Drake is our authorised agent to receive subscriptions and advertisments.

☞ Mr. E. W. Carr, Third street, Philadelphia, opposite the Exchange, is our authorised agent for that city.

☞ On our first page will be found an address on Temperance, by the Rev. Wm. Whittaker. There are but few esssays, which we have read, which set forth in such chaste and appropriate language, and in so lucid and convincing a manner, the evils attendant upon this curse of our Land. We trust that all our readers, whatever their situation in life, will divest themselves of all prejudices, and give it an attentive and considerate perusal. Let each person consider it as addressed to himself, and determine for himself, to act upon the convictions of his mind, as his conscience shall dictate upon its perusal.

We neglected in its caption to state that it was published by request of the Sons of Temperance.

☞ All persons desirous of becoming possessed of a permanent and agreeable Home, for a mere nominal consideration, their attention is directed to the advertisement in another column of the "New Village of Hermanville." A more desirable place of residence cannot be found in the United States than the spot thus designated. The region of country in which it lies abounds in everything that makes life desirable; a better opportunity rarely presents itself of securing at so trifling an outlay a permanent and valuable home.

New York Election.

Washington Hunt, the whig candidate for Governor, is elected by 258 majority. Church, democrat, for Lieut. Governor, 7,214 majority; Mather, domocrat, for Canal commissioner, 1,056 majority. We erroneously gave last week the Lieut. Governor and Canal Commissioner to the whigs. The whigs have elected some 19 Members of Congress and Democrats 15, being a large democratic gain over last year. The majority against the repeal of the Free School Law, and in favor of Free Schools, was upwards of 33,000 A most wise decision. Will New Jersey profit by the example?

Delaware Election.

The democrats have swept the State. They have elected their Governor, and a majority of the Legislature, which gives them a U.S Senator.

Massachusetts Election.

No choice for Governor, though Briggs, the whig candidate, has a plurality. The State Senate now stands 22 coalition, democrats and free soilers; whigs 10, doubtful 2, and 5 no choice. The Senate will therefore choose a democratic Governor. The House stands 158 whigs, 148 opposition, and 91 no choice.

Horace Mann, is reelected to Congres, also a whig from Boston, but most of the others no choice—as there were 3 candidates in every district, whig, democrat and abolitionist.

THE NEXT CONGRESS—Will be largely democratic. The Democracy of the State of Pensylvania, New Jersey and New York, have made handsome gains in their Congressional delegations. Pennsylvania has elected fifteen democrats to 9 whigs—reversing the political character of her delegation. New Jersey sends 4 democrats and 1 whig—before, 1 democrat and 4 whigs. In New York, where in the present Congress the democrats have but 2—1 regular and 1 free soiler—we have elected 15, with two districts undetermined. Here is a gain of at least 20 members to the democracy in three States alone.

NEW-HAMPSHIRE.—The Constitutional Convention of New-Hampshire, now in session, has almost unanimously voted to strike out of the Constitution the clause imposing a religious test, and quite unanimously voted to strike out the clause requiring a property qualification for office. Here-after a majority of votes will be the only indispensible requisite. This is as it should be. The Convention has also voted, 114 to 76, that the Legislature shall meet "once in two years" instead of "every year," but this may be reconsidered.

NEW YORK POLICE.—The quarterly report of the Chief of Poliece of New York city shows that during the quarter ending Sept. 30th, 10,010 persons were arrested, being an increase of 1786 over the previous quarter: 825 burglaries and larcenies are reported, and 1030 persons arrested for the same.—The value of all the goods taken by burglars was $3,105 70; by grand larcenies $14,715 35; and by petit larcenies $2,685 23 The amount of property recovered amounted, in the aggregate, to $11,159 83 leaving a loss of $9,343 53. The police also recovered property to the amount of $21,509 stolen from other counties in that State. The effective poliece force amounts to 896 men. The number of licenced liquor selling places is 4,267; unlicenced 718; those which sell on Sunday 3,716; whole number of taverns, etc., 4,985.

☞ Gov. Haines has appointed Jacob Van Arsdale, Esq., of Newark, Clerk in chancery, to succeed Samuel R. Gummere, the present incumbent. Mr. Van Arsdale assumed the duties of the office on Monday the 18th inst.

The Legislature will meet this year, on the 14th of January, the second Tuesday in the month, and barely eight weeeks will elapse before the meeting. Those, therefore, who have bills to bring before the Legislature, had better attend to this matter in time. It has for years been a complaint that bills have been delayed until the latter part of the season, and that members have adjourned over from Saturday to Monday afternoon, in consequence of not having sufficient business before them, ready to act upon. It is time this practice was ended, many very important measures requiring grave deliberation, will be brought before the Legislature at this session, and those being of great importance to the public welfare, will undoubtedly demand time and care in their preparation. So that applications of a local or private nature, had better be introduced and disposed of at once.—True American.

☞ Persons intending to make application to the Legislature at the next session, will bear in mind that notice must be given of such application, six weeks before the commencement of the session.

New Jersey Elections & Railroad Monopoly

The democracy have carried everything in the recent elections in New Jersey, and the old whig monopolists have been entirely defeated throughout the State. It is now expected that a great and successful effort will be made in the next Legislature of that State, backed by popular opinion, to throw off the railroad monopoly, or to modify it at least. We want, however, to see no violation of vested rights. Let justice be done to all parties, and, while monopoly is abolished, do not injure the just rights of property.—Sci. American

IMPORTANT INVESTIGATION.—We wish to see where we were struck down, and to learn who were the open instruments in the work. We intend to investigate this matter, and to expose the secret enemy, be he who he may—whether a treacherous foe or a more treacherous friend. We shall not rush into the business rashly; but enter upon it deliberately and cautiously.—State Gazette.

We can help you out, neighbor. The place "where" was the "ballot-box"—the "open instrument," the people—the "secret enemy," the State House Clique—the CAUSE of all, the outrages of the last Legislature.—True American.

☞ Thos. Keyes, of Boston, has recovered $10,000 damages from the Boston & Stonington R. R. Co, being ejected from their cars with undue violence. The trial took place in Providence.

The Hon. Howel Cobb, Speaker of the House of Representatives, delivered a great Union Speech at Marion, Geo., on Tuesday the 12th inst, which is said to have caused quite a revolution in public opinion.

LOSS OF U. S. SLOOP-OF-WAR YORHTOWN.—The U. S. sloop-of-war Yorktown, Marston, is reported lost, with seven British vessels, on the north part of St. Jago, Cape de Verde Islands, on the 25th Sept. Crews saved.

DAMAGES.—Catherine Murray vs. New-Jersey Railroad and Transportation Company.—This was an action brought for the recovery of damages by the plaintiff, then a child of 10 years, for having, on the 3d of December, 1848, had her foot crushed so as to require amputation above the ancle, in consequence of dropping down with one foot in the open space or gap some 8 inches or a foot wide between the steamboat and the bridge or dock, as the boat was coming up on the New-York side of the Ferry from Jersey City to Cortland-st. owned and managed by the Railroad Company under lease. The Judge charged the Jury, that if they believed the keeping up of the chain was necessary to the protection of the passengers, and that the same was down before the boat was secured to the dock, and when the accident occurred, they should find for the plaintiff The Jury accordingly found for the plaintiff $2,000 damages. —Tribune.

Family of Patrick Henry.

The distinguished Virginia orator, Patrick Henry had five sisters, Jane Merdith, Anne Christian, Lucy Wood, Susan Madison, and betsy Russell. The last mentioned lady was the grandmother of the Hon. W. C. Preston President of the South Carolina College.

William Henry was his only full brother.

Patrick Henry's mother was Sarah Winston. His father was John Henry, of Aberdeen, Scotland. John Henry's mother was Jane Robertson, sister to Dr. William Robertson, the Historian.

THE NEW JERSEY
HORSE POWER
Manufacturing Company.

HAVING improved, strengthened and perfected A. D. CRANE'S Patent Horse Power, are now prepared to furnish the same to all who may want.

This Power consists of an endless floor running over a series of pulleys, connected by cranks, without a rack or cog wheel about it: none being required from the fact, that the weight of the horse on the floor or platform causes sufficient adhesion between it and the pulleys to transmit all the power he is able to give. Also by this arrangement the chain is freed from the draught or strain (which cannot be avoided in any other Stall Power) except, what is reqired to pass the floor around. The requisite speed is obtained direct from the machine thereby avoiding a great amount of friction and wear, and lessening the liability to get out of order They run so easily as to require less than an inch elevation to the foot A self acting brake is attached by which the motion is kept regular and uniform even when the work is unsteady and irregular

From the above description it is evident that this is the most simple and efficient Power known

They are highly recommended by those who have used them, for driving Circular Saws, Lathes, Drilling Machines, Threshers, Grist Mills, Pumps, &c

The Company have certificates to prove the above and also to show that the Two Horse Power will grind 40 bushels of Corn to Meal (with Platt's Patent Mill,) in a day of ten hours, making it an invaluable Power for the Southern planter as well as others.

It has taken Silver Medals at the different Fairs where exhibited, and the only one given to Horse Powers by the American Institute last fall

They also furnish Threshers of the most approved construction.

Price of Single Power with Belt, $75; Double do. with Belt, $110; Thresher and Separator, $35.

HERNIA.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.—This disorder, of very frequennt occurrence, may be considered as arising through weakness of the abdominal walls, inducing an enlargement in the natural openings formed therein for the transmission of blood and other vessels: such openings being enlarged, permit the escape of bowels or other viscera of the abdomen, devolving hernial swellings or rupture, which most generally occur outwardly, as at the navel, groins and thighs.

The complaint is likely to happen at birth, and therefore should be carefully looked for by those having the charge of children, that it may be arrested and cured promptly. It also occurs at any period of life, to either sex, without regard to the condition or mode of living, and when found, should be attended to without delay—the final penalty being death, and that may be induced through strangulation at any momenint.

RUPTURES, are always to be treated with the surgical instruments known as Trusses and Supporters, and these require to be skillfully applied. With this view, the HULL'S TRUSS OFFICE, now established some thirty years, has under the various managers, presented to the public both male and female attendants to apply its instruments directly to the persons, which is preferable in all cases, and has also made improvement at different times, showing that advancement which study and practice only yield toward the relief of this malady.

With much pleasure the fact is now published, that recent improvements BUTLER'S TRUSS PADS have been made, and sufficiently tested upon numerous cases to warrant, through the cures already affected, their submission to the public, as being in adaptation and efficiency superior to any heretofore made known.

These improvements, recently patented, are now being applied at this office, 4 Vesey street, in cases of rupture, gravitation of the bowels, prolapsus uteri, prolapsus ani and piles.

The public may rely upon that care being made in their application, which will most likely tend to the final cure of the several complaints.

Hull's Truss Office, 4 Vesey street, Astor House, opposite St. Paul's Church, New-York.

FRED'K M BUTLER, Proprietor.

N. B.—The ladies' department is attended by a female qualified to fit the instruments, having so attended this office for many years.

Children trussed when only two weeks old, and invariably cured. [145is.

MECHANICAL MEDICINE.

Dr. Banning, formerly of this city, asks to announce that he has returned to 341 Broadway: for consultation and management of weaknesses of the vocal, pulmonary, digestive, nervous, spinal and female systems: and also of the drooping, languor and physical deformities, which are so destructive of both health and beauty at the present day.

As these and kindred maladies are usually the result of a violation of the laws of physical organization, he will treat them chiefly by those exercises, mechanical appliances and reformatory habits of body, in conjunction with hydropathy galvanism and other discoveries of the day, which, united with the cooperative efforts of the subject, are calculated to relieve and restore the energies of the suffering and neglected organs.

Having spent several years in traveling for investigation and practical experiment on the subject, he has, at length, greatly improved and multiplied his surgical and mechanical appliances for the purpose. In addition to his new supports for female and spinal weaknesses, are some comb ning the properties of a universal hernial truss and an effective general support, with which he challenges cases of general debility, constipation, piles and prolapsus, ani, lencorrhea, prolapsus uteri and every variety of hernia.

The distinctive peculiarity of these devices is, that they do not weaken or restrain the motions or growth of the suffering parts, but act imitatively and concordantly with the mathematical genius of the body's forces. Hence, by a most comfortable and gentle pressure, they at once give great support and render the oppressed system eligible to its own restoration.

Feeble invalids coming from a distance will command prompt and faithful attention.

For more definite information, see his revised edition of "Animal Mechanics," and also his circular, which will be sent gratuitously when requested.

His improved body-braces, spinal supports and supporter trusses applied at his office (341 Broadway) and to be had wholesale and retail- City and country physicians and druggists are invited to call and examine Office hours from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. [121.

The remarkable cures of diseases of the Lungs which have been realized by its use, attested as they are by many prominent professors and physicians in this and foreign lands, should encourage the afflicted to persevere with the strong assurance that the use of the "CHERRY PECTORAL" will relieve and ultimately cure them.

We present to the public unsolicited tsteimonials from some of the first men in our country, upon whose judgment and experience implicit confidence may be placed.

DR, PERKINS, President Vermont Med. College, one of the most learned and intelligent physicians in the country, considers it a "composition of rare excellencies for the cure of that formidable disease, Consumption."

NORWICH April 26, 1846

DR. J. C. Ayer—Dear Sir:—Agreeable to the request of your agent, we will cheerfully state what we have known of the effects of your CHERRY PECTORAL, and they have been astonishing indeed. Mrs. Betsy Streeter had been afflicted with a severe and relentless cough, which reduced her very low; so low that little hope could be entertained of her recovery. Numerous remedies had been tried without effect before the CHERRY PECTORAL And that has cured her. George Watkinson Esq., had to our knowledge ben afflicted with Asthma, for eleven years, and grown yearly worse, until the CHERRY PECTORAL has now removed the disease and he is as free from any of its symptons as we are. The Rev. Mark Dane had been so severely attacked with the Bronchitis, as to disable him from his duties, and nothing had afforded him relief until I (Mr. Thorning) carried him a bottle of your PECTORAL, which cured him at once, and he now officiates as usual in his place.

These are three of the cases in which we have known it succesful, but never to fail. We have great pleasure in certifying to these facts; and are, respected sir, your humble servants.

REV. DAVID THORRING.
HON. JOSEPH BATTLES.

Among the distinguished authorities who have given their names to recommend CHERRY PECTORAL, as the best remedy that is known for the Affections of the Lungs, are "The Loudon Lancet," "Canadian Journal of Medical Science," "Boston Medical and Surgical Journal," "Charleston (S. C.) Medical Review," "New Jersey Medical Reporter," Prof. WEBSTER. Harvard College, Prof. BARTLETT, Transylvania University of Medicine, President PERKINS, Vermont Medical College, Dr. VALENTINE MOTT, New York City, PARKER CLEVELAND, Bowdoin College, Prof. BUTTERFIELD, Willoughby College, Ohio, Prof. BRAITHWAITE, Leeds (Eng.) Medical School, Sir RICHARD KANE, Queen's College, Ireland, Prof. Rosenbaum, Leipsic.

The public have but to know the virtues and astonishing success of the "CHERRY PECTORAL," in curing diseases of the Lungs, when they will feel secure from these dangers, whenever this remedy can be obtained.

BLAKE'S PATENT

FIRE PROOF PAINT.

THE original and only genuine article, that can be obtained, without subjecting the purchaser to a prosecution for an infringement of my Patent. It has not yet been two year since the first counterfeit, was got up, but in that short time has proved itself, entirely worthless, as will be seen by the statement of more than twenty of the most respectable inhabitants of Sharon Ohio where mine as well as the Counterfeits are made. They say that we have examined recently, a house that was painted, with

Blake's Patent Fire Proof Paint,

SIX YEARS since (as an experiment) and now find the coating as hard as slate or stone. The action of the weather having no effect than to indurate and harden the substance. We will farther state that it has been such a complete failure in all the other kinds of stuff got up, and sold here, called Fire Proof paint (except Blakes) that his only is considered worth useing.

(Signed) Barnabus Crane and 20 others.

Hon. Daniel Webster has recently examined the patent and at the close of his report says, "I have no doubt whatever, but Mr Blake's Patent is good and valid. [104.

MARRIAGE:

WHY SO OFTEN UNHAPPY.

THE CAUSES AND THE REMEDY!

MANY and many a wife endures years of bodily suffering and of mental anguish, prostrate and helpless, embittering her life, that of her husband, and hazarding the future welfare of her children, arising from causes which, if known, would have spared the suffering, the anguish to the wife, and to the husband embarrassments and pecuniary difficulties having their origin in the mind being weighed down and harassed in consequence of the sickness of the companion of his bosom.

How important that the causes should be known to every wife, to every husband, that the dreadful and harrowing consequences to the health and happiness of both may be avoided! Life is too short and health too precious to admit any portion of the one to be spent without the full enjoyment of the other. The timely possession of a little work entitled as follows has been the means of saving the health and the life of thousands, as over copies have been sold since the first edition was issued.

The author has been induced to advertise it by the urgent and pressing request of those who have been indebted to its publication for all they hold dear (that all may have an opportunity of obtaining it), and who have favored him with thousands of letters of encomium, some of which are annexed to the advertisement.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

Twentieth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, $1.00.

THIS WORK IS INTENDED ESPECIALLY FOR THE MARRIED, or those contemplating marriage, as it discloses important secrets which should be known to them particularly.

Here, every female—the wife, the mother—the one either budding into womanhood, or the one in the decline of years, in whom nature contemplates an important change—can discover the causes, symptoms, and the most efficient remedies and most certain mode of cure, in every complaint to which her sex is subject.

The revelations contained in its pages have proved a blessing to thousands, as the innumerable letters received by the author (which he is permitted by the writers to publish) will attest.

SICKLY AND UNHAPPY WIVES.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Dayton, O.

"DAYTON, May 1, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU—My Dear Sir: 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion,' for which I enclosed one dollar to your address, came safely to hand. I would not have troubled you with these few lines, but that I am impelled by a sense of gratitude, for myself and wife, to give utterance to our sincere and heartfelt emotions.

"My wife has been perceptibly sinking for some three years or more, in consequence of her great anguish and suffering some months before and during confinement; every successive one more and more debilitated and prostrated her, putting her life in imminent danger, and which was, on the last occasion, despaired of. I supposed that this state of things was inevitable, and resigned myself to meet the worst. At this time (now about two months) I heard your book highly spoken of, as containing some matters reaching my case. On its receipt and perusal, I can not express to you the relief it afforded my distressed mind and the joy its pages imparted to my wife, on learning that the great discovery of M. M. Deomeaux provided a remedy. It opened a prospect to me which I little conceived was possible. No pecuniary consideration can ever repay the obligations I am under to you for having been the means of imparting to us the matters contained in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' But for this, ere another year would have passed over my head, in all human probability my wife would have been in her grave, and my children left motherless."

Extract from a Letter.

Competence and Health.

"LANCASTER, PA., Oct. 24, 1847.

"MY DEAR SIR: I know you will have the kindness to bear with me in encroaching upon your time, while I acknowledge (in behalf of myself and wife) the obligations we feel ourselves under to you in having made known certain matters, contained in your most invaluable 'Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' It has been worth its weight in gold to me. If I express myself rather warmly, you will see that I can not do so too warmly, when I inform you of the extent to which I have, through it, been benefited. I will state my situation when I obtained your book through the merest curiosity I look upon it as one of the most fortunate events of my life. I had been married some ten years, and was the father of seven children. I was long struggling unceasingly, to the end that I might gain a moderate competency, but the results of my utmost exertions at the end left me about where I was at the beginning of each year; and that only, with the most stinted economy, sufficing with barely the necessaries of life. Finally, this constant effort was beginning to have its effect upon my health: I felt less capable to endure its continuance, while I felt the necessity of perseverance.

"This constant, unceasing struggle on my part was imperative, in consequence of the prostrated condition of my wife (with occasional intermission) for six years, much of the time confined to her bed, and of course incapable of taking the charge and management of household affairs. Her condition arose from causes of which I was ignorant. Oh! what would I have given had I the six years to live over again! What would my wife have given to have been spared the long days and still longer nights prostrate on a bed of sickness!—all of which would have been avoided, had I then seen a copy of 'THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION.'"

From a Physician.

DANGEROUS DELIVERIES,

OBSTRUCTIONS, IRREGULARITIES, &C.

How many are suffering from obstruction or irregularities peculiar to the female system, which undermine their health, the effects of which they are ignorant, and for which their delicacy forbids seeking medical advice! How many suffer from prolapsus uteri (falling of the womb), or from fluor-albus (weakness, debility, &c., &c)! How many are in constant agony for many months preceding confinement! How many have difficult if not dangerous deliveries, and whose lives are jeoparded during such time, will find in its pages the means of prevention, amelioration, and relief!

Extract from a Letter.

To those just Married.—"Had I known!"

"PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU: Had I known of the important matters treated of in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion' some years ago, how much misery I might have escaped! I have suffered years from causes which you point out in your book, without knowing what to do. I obtained a copy, and found my case treated of. I trust every female will avail herself of the information contained in its pages."

Letters are daily received of this character, unnecessary to present.

To those yet unmarried, but contemplating marriage, or perhaps hesitating as to the propriety of incurring the responsibilities attendant upon it, the importance of being possessed of the revelations contained in these pages, so intimately involving their future happiness, can not be appreciated.

It is, of course, impracticable to convey more fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage; neither is it necessary, since it is every one's duty to become possessed of knowledge whereby the sufferings to which a wife, a mother, or a sister, may be subject, can be obviated.

☞ Copies will be sent by Mail free of Postage to the Purchaser.

☞ On the receipt of One Dollar, "THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION" is sent (mailed free) to any part of the United States. All letters must be post-paid (except those containing a remittance), and addressed to Dr. A. M. MAURICEAU, Box 1224, New York City. Publishing Office, No. 129 Liberty st., New York.

Over 20,000 Copies have been sent by MAIL within three months with perfect safety and certainty.

Booksellers and agents engaged in its sale, are making handsome competencies from the ready and extraordinary demand for it, and the extremely liberal terms afforded them.

Active local or travelling Agents, throughout the United States and Canadas, will be supplied on the same terms. Communications are required to be POST-PAID and addressed as above.

☞ CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against various catch-penies intended to be palmed off upon them initiating the title of the work as "The Married LADIES' Medical Companion," and various other titles. The title of the work is "THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION," BY Dr. A. M. Mauriceau. [105

FOR FEMALES AND MALES

Dr. Lazetti's Juno Cordial, or Protective Elixir.

This is the only actual remedy ever discovered for impetency, Genital Debility, Nocturnal Emissions, and all diseases occasioned by certain secret habits; and many of the nostrums recently recommended for the same complaints are worthless imitations which its unrivalled excellence. fame and popularity have brought into the market. The Medical Faculty of Europe and the United States are unanimous in their recommendations of the Juno Cordial and have not given their sanction in a single instance that has been authenticated, to any compound for the same purposes. The nature of the maladies relieved by the Juno Cordial are generally such as to leave the publication of certificates of cures out of the question, or the proprietor could produce a host of the most conclusive testimony to show that the great reputation that it enjoys was not accidentally obtained, but is firmly based upon its positive, and apparently miraculous virtues. In all directions are to be found the happy parents of healthy offspring, who would not have been so, but for this extraordinary preparption. And it is equally potent in the many diseases for which it is recommended. Objection has been naturally made to the price of the Juno Cordial, because the trash that has been thrown into the market in opposition to it is sold cheaper; but the fact is, the Cerdial cannot be afforded for less, and ought to be much dearer, as many of the ingredients which compose it are among the costliest things in nature; whereas the others are made up of cheap drugs, worth but little in money, and less in merit. We assure the reader that the utmost reliance may be placed on the Juno Cordial in the cure of the maladies mentioned above, and also those that follow, viz: Loss of Muscular Energy, Physical Lassitude and General Prostration, Irritability, and all Nervous Affections, Indigestion, Sluggishness of the Liver, Gleet, Lucorrhoea or Whites, and Flour Albus and every disease in any way connected with the disorder of the Procreative Functions—in all of which it will afford almost immediate relief, and, if used as directed, is almost certain to produce a positive and permanent cure. Persons about to marry, if conscious of any weakness or disability of a certain nature, should take this Cordial, as it will infallibly restore health and vigor in a brief period, and where want of offspring is a cause of regret, if recourse be had to it the most beneficial results may be anticipated with confidence. It is of priceless value to those without offspring. It has taken the precedence in Italy and will in all other countries where it may become known.

It also possesses the unrivalled qualities of curing incipient Consumption, and I have administered it with great success to patients who have sought our delightful climate for the restoration of their health and the result is that a medicine has been added to the catalogue for the cure of insipient consumption.

To spread wide the blessings of this medicine. I have appointed Messrs. Judson & Co., of the City of New York, in the United States of America, my sole Agents for its sale; and none can be genuine unless it comes through them, and their signature is on the weapper.

The Summer Birds.

BY AMELIA B. WELBY.

Sweet warblers of the sunny hours
Forever on the wing—
I love them as I love the flowers,
The sunlight and the spring.
They come like pleasant memories,
In summer's joyous time,
And sing their gushing melodies,
As I would sing a rhyme.

In the green and quiet places,
When the golden sunlight falls,
We sit with smiling faces,
To list their silver calls;
And when their holy anthems
Come pealing through the air,
Our hearts leap forth to meet them,
With a blessing and a prayer.

Amid the morning's fragrant dew—
Amid the mists of even—
They warble on as if they drew
Their music down from Heaven.
How sweetly sounds each mellow note,
Beneath the moon's pale ray
When dying zephyrs rise and float,
Like lovers' sighs away.

Like shadowy spirits seen at eve,
Among the tombs they glide,
When sweet pale forms for which we grieve,
Lie sleeping side by side:
They break with song the solemn hush,
Where peace reclines her head,
And link their joys with mournful thoughts
That cluster round the dead.

For never can my soul forget
The loves of other years:
Their memories fill my spirit yet—
I've kept them green with tears.
And their singing greets my heart, at times,
As in the days of yore,
Though their music and their loveliness
Are o'er—forever o'er.

And often, when the mournful night
Comes with a low sweet tune,
And sets a star on every height,
And one beside the moon;
When not a sound of wind or wave
The holy stillness mars,
I look above, and strive to trace
Their dwelling in the stars.

The birds! the birds of summer hours—
They bring a gust of glee
To the child among the fragrant flowers—
To the sailor on the sea.
We hear their thrilling voices
In their swift and airy flight,
And the inward heart rejoices
With a calm and pure delight.

In the stillness of the starlight hours,
When I am with the dead,
O! may they flutter 'mid the flowers
That blossom o'er my head;
And sing their songs of gladness forth
In one melodious strain,
O'er lips whose broken melody
Shall never sing again.

Essay on the Broom.—No 1.

It was said that the great American Philosopher could write a creditable, and elaborate essay on the "Broom:" and I hope the reader will pardon my seeming presumption and temerity, if I, should attempt to expatiate on its merits, with becoming modesty, and without arrogating to myself the powers of a Benjamin Franklin. The reader may smile at the apparent sterility of the subject, and marvel at that man, who would descant publicly, upon so humble an implement of life; yet a little consideration will soon convince him that much may be inculcated, even by a Broom, as it regards the general tenor of human existence, and the health and social happines, of mankind.

The history of the Broom, is vailed in much obscurity and doubt, and nothing reliable can be obtained, either in respect to its original invention, or primitive form, yet it is sufficient for us to know that it has always followed in the track of progressive improvement, and has been the daily manual of civilization and refinement. Is is quite probable, that it was long known, and used, by a greater portion of the antedeluvian world; and although we cannot be positive as to its use previous to the flood, yet certainly we have a right to infer, that it was employed by Noah and his family during their tedious and long continued confinement, in the ancient ark. The Bible abounds in various figurative expressions, which have a direct reference to the use of the Broom, and the constant repetition of the word "sweep," as clearly denoting the act of cleansing, furnishes positive, and conclusive, evidence that it was habitually employed under the old Jewish Dispensation. But it would not be completely nugatory, to prosecute its history further, since all the facts in relation to it are mere inferences, and only leave the mind bewildered, midst a thousand vague, and idle, speculations. It is enough to know, that the history of the broom, is scarcely less traceable than some of the more noble, and valuable, works of art; and that it has held, and still maintains, a prominent position in the "Armamentarium" of the Domestic Economist.

I do not propose to give the Broom a tediously detailed description, nor do I mean to enter into a minute account of its intimate construction, or the peculiarities of its mechanism, for it is presumed that it is familiarly known by the wiser, and better, portion of society, although I regret to say, (and I trust that my remark will be excused, that there are many, among our "modern ladies," who are culpably ignorant of it, theoretically and practically); but I intend to consider its uses in domestic Life, and its various relations to domestic comfort, health, and happiness. This will furnish matter for several subsequent essays, and I will feel myself amply compensated if in the course of the series my remarks have a tendency to elevate, and dignify, the character of my humble theme; to extricate it from the eternal clutches of the kitchen servant, and to be the means of its being more highly honored by the grasp of the delicate fingers of parlor, and drawing room misses.

The Broom is of paramount importance in the preservation of health, and for a lively exercise of the physical, and mental, faculties. If the reader has ever visited an habitably filthy dwelling, where slothful indifference and shameless indolence, wielded the domestic scepter; where a Broom is styled an actual curiosity, being seldom found, and more rarely used, he has undoubtedly been startled at the sallow and unmeaning countenance, the debilitated, and languid condition of its wretched inmates; the apathetic expression of the eye; the sluggish operation of the mind; the blunted state of natural sensibility and affection; and a general degradation of all those high and enobling qualities which should dignify, and adorn the human breast. But the Broom, is not less essential to domestic comfort and enjoyment. The house that knows not the Broom, knows but little unalloyed happiness. Neatness is necessary to conjugal affection, to preserve social harmony, and to foster a close and endearing mutuality, between man and wife. Amenity of temper, is a blessing which nature has not lavishly bestowed on humanity—yet cleanlinesss in domestic life, will go far to supply, or palliate its deficiency in both parties, or at least it will prevent it from becoming smothered, or entirely extinct, by eternal conjugal bickerings and disputations. Serenity of feeling, is incompatible with uncleanliness, one is the antipode of the other, it has higher and nobler aspirations, and it is impossible for it to stoop to become its daily associate, and the two cannot exist together without the one modifying, or entirely destroying the moral character of the other. Hence we daily observe the matrimonial state begin with felicity and end in sorrow; begin with harmony and end in discord; begin with love and end in hate; and the tenderest ties of affection, forever severed by the conflict of beligerent passions. What a humbling, and disgusting picture is here presented to the pride of man; and what a comment upon the indispensable importance of a proper use of the Broom.

We trust we are not dealing in hyperbolical language; or that our remarks are the ebullition of an unbridled and phrensied imagination, when we assert, that a lack in the use of the broom has made many a home unhappy; driven many a husband from the society of his wife; and many a father from the embrace of his children to form improper associations in the neigboring ale-house, or bar-room, to compromise his reputation, nay even to the prostitution of his virtue. But at the same time we have no charity to excuse that husband, who in spite of remonstrance, and entreaty, habitually annoys his wife, and spoils her carpet, with a huge pair of muddy boots, complacently puffs his clouds of tobacco smoke around her white-washed, walls: or leisurely squirts his tobacco spit promiscuously upon the floor But finally, public sentiment has incontrovertibly established that the Broom, is an indispensible requisite to a cultivated, and refined, state of society. Consequently, the "anti-sweeper," must necessarily be deserted by all the respectible portion of the community. He or she stands an isolated being, unnoticed, and unregarded, amidst the mingling crowds of associating humanity; he or she is an object which respect bility eschews, and neatness contemns; and a target at which scornful sarcasm hurls its deadliest darts. Reader! whether male, or female, respect the time honered Broom! and never allow indolence, or shame, to arrest it from your grasp. Consider its importance to health, to your own social and domestic happiness, and to your position in society. Ladies, never marry that man who is opposed to the use of the broom; and who, is the dupe to slavish, and filthy habits. Gentleman, never form an alliance with that woman who despises this true representative of neatness, or who affects to be wholly ignorant of such an instrument as the Broom. THE HERMIT.

The Old Mare's Saddle.

Sir Soger Twisden, of Bradburn, in the county of Kent, (Eng) had three beautiful daughters, Mary, Ann, and Eliza. Their mother dying in the prime of her life, these young ladies were deprived of a most tender, accomplished and virtuous preceptress; and the over fondness of a liberal-hearted, fox hunting father, left them to pursue their own melinations in all things relating to the formation of their conduct and sentiment which alone dignifies the higher walks of life, and distinguishes the truly gentle from the ridiculously proud, the upstart insolent and the vain: not that there existed a predominating vice in any one of these fair sisters,—on the contrary, their nature was mild "as the breath of Zephyrus, while he kissed the summer roses." But conversing principally in their confined circle, thirty miles from the capital, they had determined for themselves respecting future events, and nothing but violence could untie their resolutions. Matrimony they had no objections to embrace, whenever husbands might be found suitable to their condition and rank in life; but, as a drawback on this condescension, our feminine triumvirate possed, in a high degree, that unconscionable principle of holding the whole of domestic government in their own hands, without submitting at any time to the check rein of the lord paramount of the hymeneal manor; ever laughing at the provincial maxim—

"The male is master and, to make him less,
"Confounds creation and creates distress."

No, they admitted of no superiority, and their conversation on the subject often called up from gravity and experience this reasonable remark:

"Spinsters' husbands and bachelors' wives,
Are always well bred—till the parson contrives;
A moon or two after spouse thinks on his charter,
And ma'm finds Adonis the son of a Tartar!"

To be more explicit, we shall subjoin a few of their resolutions in the case of matrimony, and at once show the propriety of corrective interposition.—"The man I marry," said Mary, "shall first convince me that he possesses that docility of temper, which leads him to be as attentive after the nuptial ceremony as he was before submissive." "I have formed a similar resolution," cried sister Anne, "with this adjunct,—he shall swear never to direct my conduct contrary to my inclinations." "That is right," rejoined Eliza, "and it is on those conditions only I have made up my mind to receive a yoke fellow durante vitæ.

The ladies had scarcely opened their minds to each other, when Sir Roger entered the drawing room, whistling the early horn. "Well, Mary," said he, "I have rare news for you. Sir Wm. Honeywood and myself have just settled the affair, and Parson Goodenough is to marry you to your old sweetheart, the baronet, to-morrow." Mary could not reply—she hung down her head and blushed compliance; and Sir Roger being hastily called to the stables, left the three maidens to mediate on the approaching ceremony.

"Remember Mary, to have your way in all things," said Anne. "Do not suffer yourself to be contradicted," rejoined Eliza, "and be sure to retain the power to negative whatever he may urge to displease you." "Above all make him sign those articles, or go not with him to the altar," vociferated both together. "It shall be so," replied Mary, "and I will instantly prepare them for singing and not abate Mr. Honywood one iota for a Michaelmas moon."

To keep my reader no longer in suspense, the schedule was prepared, and the lover signed it with a smile, tacitly resolving, at a convenietl season, to convince his mistress of the unreasonableness of all she had exacted. The marriage was celebrated, and the young esquire retired with his lovely Mary to Honeywood Castle, one of the sweetest situations in the whole county of Kent.

A moon had now gone by, and the sounds of rejoicing forgot, when Mrs. Honeywood demanded, in an unpleasant way, a visit to Bradburn. The 'squire had his objections, and refused to comply, when a disputution succeeded, and the chords of harmony were strained rather to an extreme. "It is the first article in the engagement," said the lady, "and I have determinod on a visit to my father and sisters." Mr. Honeywood paused, but replied not, and ringing the bell in haste, gave orders to bring out the old mare and large saddle. The 'squire mounted first, and the lady behind him. The morning was gloomy, and the mare feeble; the roads were heavy, and the husband surly; and, what was rather uncommon, the lady was dumb. From Honeywood Castle to Blackburn the distance was twelve miles, and as the sable clouds began to scatter their contents, perplexity added to the murkiness of the scene. The poor quadruped groaned sadly beneath her burthen—the master spurred and whipped in vain. At length, in the midway of an extensive common,

"Down Dobbin fell, and o'er her crazy frame
"Tumbled the master and the trembling dame,"

when the enraged Honeywood drew a pistol from the holster, and instantly deprived his old servant of existence. The lady screamed, but no help was at hand. "Great God!" she cried, "Mr. Honeywood what is to be done?" "We must walk," he replied, surlily, "the other six miles to Bradburn." "And what is to become of the old mare's saddle?" "You must carry it," continued the husband. "O the cruel brute! O the monster!" vociferated the lady. By this time he had taken the saddle from the dead animal, and was preparing to strap it on his wife's shoulders, when she cast it to the ground with indignation. Mr. Honeywood instantly drew the other pistol, and looking as when he shot the mare, bade her take it up again. She trembled to see the attitude he stood in, and the fire of his eyes, —she dropped some tears, and then patiently took up the saddle, and then journied slowly and sadly towards Bradburn.

The old Hall at Bradburn was roused at the approach of the 'squire and his new helpmate, who, to the astonishment of all that beheld her, exhibited a woful spectacle, tottering and sinking beneath the saddle. In a moment Mrs. Honeywood was released and embraced by her sisters, with whom we shall leave her that sort of consolation she had by this time a right to receive.

By Sir Roger's command every dainty was prepared, and the butler requested to tap the best October with all speed. The lads and lases of the village were presently as merry as good heart could wish them: there was rare eating for the farmers, and wine for the Parson. Having left the great hall for the ladies' parlor, the selected company were seated, and the coffe prepared. The young sisters, being in full possession of all that had passed between Honeywood Castle and Bradburn, began in a sarcastical way to attrack the silent Squire, and this they continued till their wit became more rampant than their reason; and now, warmed by resentment, they reprobated the husband in language almost beyond propriety, while they commiserated the tame sufferings of his wife.

"Sister," exclaimed Eliza, "if ever my husband should attempt to treat me as yours has done, I will resist to the last—I will expire before I submit to such tyranny."—"And I will do more," cried Anna, "sooner than bend to such brutality, I will take his life!" "Ha! ha!" replied Mrs. Honeywood, with a modest smile, "sisters, you have not carried the old mares saddle!"

The squire saw and heard her complacency: mantled with inexpressible rapture, he caught the fair hand of his reformed, his prudent and sensible Mary and kissing it eagerly in the presence of all the company, daclared that "Tho' the remedy had been violent, he saw the cure would be lasting; therefore the whole of his life to come should be employed to convince her that he was deserving of so much beauty, condescension and good sense."

Sir Roger approved the means of reformation, and told the unmarried girls, in rough and honest way, if ever they attempted to wear the breeches, he hoped their husbands would find spirit enough, like young Honeywood, to make them carry the old mare's saddle.

Liberty—Union—Slavery!

For what, was this government established? was it that man might enjoy freedom, that tyranny might be despoiled of its victims, or was it that tyranny, and more especially that form of it denominated Chattel Slavery might be more firmly established and more certainly perpetuated? These are the great questions agitating the minds not only of our own countrymen, but of the entire mass of civilized man. As we shall determine, will Liberty or perpetual bondage be entailed on the human race. The eyes of the whole world are upon us; their hopes or their fears are awakened by the aspect assumed upon this great question, by the people; as they move for its emancipation and abolition do the hearts of our fellow man rejoice; as they go for the conventional customs and traditions of the world—the constitutional guarantee of chattel slavery, do they acknowledge the "divine right" of tyrants—then are their hopes blasted and their spirits depressed; knowing that if man's inalienable rights are not here acknowledged they are gone forever!

The curse of Slavery is felt to be the dreadful nightmare that is depressing the energies, physical and moral, of our otherwise happy country. The glaring inconsistency of Slavery in a government based upon man's natural and inalienable rights, is so gross a violation of its fundamental principles, that tyrants point to it in derision, while securing by its moral, a more absolute sway over their ignorant and deluded subjects. Thus, instead of this glorious Union standing forth in the bright, broad light of the noon-day sun of Liberty, it is sunk into Egyptian darkness, by its hypocracy—promising by its loud boasting to the oppressed of every clime, to those who sigh for liberty everywhere, its protection; while its embrace is fatal, being Slavery, eternal bondage until death!

But there is a power (thanks, ten thousand thanks to the invention of printing) behind the throne, and all around the throne, greater than the throne itself; a power which made the throne—which made and established the Constitution, which is greater than the Constitution, and from which alone the Constitution derives its powers—the PEOPLE. The Union is based upon the heart's affection of the People—they love it for its protection of Liberty, for its security of equality of rights, the inalienable gift of God to man. For this it was established—for this it will be protected, secured and perpetuated to generations unborn. For this reason will Slavery have to be abolished—Slavery is a violation of the inalienable rights wherewith all and every man was endowed by his Creator. This is that for which this government was established, this alone it is which can perpetuate and glorify it. When it ceases to protect that for which it was established—Liberty, it will then contain the seeds of its own dissolution; it cannot survive Liberty. Let us therefore wisely prepare for its perpetuation by a generous extension to all under its influence, the inestimable privileges which it was established to protect.

Politicians may bawl themselves hoarse, may strain their eyes out of their sockets in an attempt to serve their own base purposes, by attempting to create an alarm that the Union is in danger, they cannot succeed; the people can see through the flimsy pretext, they know by what power it is upheld; they also, knowing their rights dare maintain them. The people of these United States, those by the sweat of whose brows and the might of whose arms this Union has been raised up to its present proud and enviable station among the nations of the earth, have determined, with an indomitable determination, which the tyranny of hell cannot prevail against, that the Constitution of these United States shall cover, protect and defend that which their forefathers held dearer than life—LIBERTY—liberty to ALL. This alone makes a Union deserving the sympathies of a liberty loving people. This alone makes the Union worth preserving—for this alone will they have the Union preserved!

Our forefathers for seven long years of privation and suffering, enduring the scorching summer's sun and the winter's piercing blast, the keen sensations of extreme hunger and the parching effects of thirst, they trod the burning sand or the frosted adamantine earth, homeless and houseless wanderers over its bosom, in search of Liberty. With a dermination that nothing could withstand, with a consciousness of right and justice implanted in their hearts by the God of Heaven, they unhesitatingly declared that all men were inalienably endowed by that God with equal rights. They repudiated the "divine right" set up by the tyranical kings and priests of the earth, with scornful indignation, and declared in the face of the power arrogated, and called God to witness the sincerity of their declaration, that all men were equally endowed with this divine right, and consequently that every man constituted an integral portion of the soverignty of the earth, and therefore that all political power was of the people—and that it was not only their right but their duty to throw off the yoke of oppression, and thus indue themselves with the likeness of that God which created them.

Tyrants, whether under the guise of republicanism—as a pretext for its security—or whether as the open and avowed claimants of a divine right, or under the more insiduous and dangerous tyranny of a Constitutional guarantee of chattel Slavery, as securing that right divine, may construe that instrument to suit their own ambitious ends as much as they please—the time has come, the fullness of time, when the People having learned through an enlightened and independent Press, their rights—that the Constitution was established to protect the equal inalienable rights of man—to protect Liberty, not Slavery, they have determined that it shall fulfill the legitimate object of its creation.

Therefore the sooner their representatives, and would be leaders of party prepare themselves to carry out the object of its creation—to fulfil its spirit, the better will it be for ourselves and themselves, for the peace and happiness of the present and for future generations.

Therefore there is no cause for alarm—the people—MAN has determined to be free; peaceably and conservatively if he can; forceably if he must. There is no other alternative therefore but to prepare for emancipation, for the gradual abolition of this curse of our land; thus have Northern States abolished the evil; thus can the Southern; if they do not thus abolish it, it will be abolished by an amendment of the Constitution—never short of its total abolition, gradual it may be, will its agitation cease—this alone will secure the Union—secure liberty; the only purpose for which it was established—the only boon for which it is worth preserving.

Presidential Kite Flying.

Great efforts have been made at New York, Philadelphia, Boston and elsewhere, to induce the people to believe that the Union is in danger! But for the disinterested patriotism and condescension of a few politicians the Union ere this would have been annihilated! They are now being led to believe (Heaven help their credulity if they are so green) that these politicians are the friends of a republican government! and that Daniel Webster particularly is the only sincere friend of the Union, and therefore (God save the conclusion) the most suitable candidate for the Presidency!

How grand the occasion to show their disinterested patriotism, what mighty efforts can be made to save the Union! With what alacrity do politicians of the various parties come forward to speechify about the Union, the glorious Union—the asylum of the oppressed! and the home of the brave!—we might be led to conclude from all these patriotic speeches and resolutions, were it not for their grossness of character, their flimsy transparency, that the Union was established to guarantee to man his equal rights, his inalienable and God given rights; but were this their real object this class of gentleman would not be so conspicuous, these meetings would not have been held! It is too clearly evident that they are for political effect, the sophistry there made use of is too transparent, their actions belie their words, they speak louder and are not to be misunderstood—it is not that man may enjoy his God given rights, but that political capital may be made for these patriotic gentlemen, that they may be enabled to reach the goal of their ambition! Better that Slavery be perpetuated, say their flimsy and ill disguised acts than that we should not reach the goal of our long defered hopes; the object is now within our grasp; such is their patriotism and love for the Union!

Who bids loudest for the bauble Power?—who will make the greatest sacrifice of man's rights to obtain rule over him?—that man will undoubtedly obtain the suffrages of those whose degradation if their fellow man will enable them to appreciate the sacrifice, they will undoubtedly reciprocate the benefit.

So far as these "compromises" have yet progressed the palm appears to be awarded to Daniel Webster, the "godlike" Daniel!—his profound exposition of the Constitution proving most conclusively that that instrument was established to protect and perpetuate Slavery! Such is the legitimate deductions of his learned expositions! For seven long years, teaches this profound expounder, did our forefathers contend with Great Britian for the privilege of establishing human bondage! What glory, what a triumph their labors have achieved!

The "godlike," therefore, being the only person who can correctly understand the true principles of Democratic Republicanism, or that can expound, construe and appreciate the value of the Constitution, and the principles therein contained, is the only person suitable to be made President of these United States! What a pity! How much to be regretted that others had not made this instrument their profound study!—We might then have had a choice! What a predicament the people of these United States would be placed in should the great "expounder" happen to "slip his wind!" How lamentable the fact, if fact it be! that none else, not another individual in these whole United States who can understand the principles of the Constitution, or that can possibly surmise for what it was established! How vastly important for mankind in general, and the people of these United States in particular, that there is one individual whose profound researches have enabled him to fathom the depths of that instument, and that he should be so condecendingly "godlike" as to have compassion on our poor miserable understandings to condescend to "expound" and explain how our poor miserable misguided forefathers were led astray, and were taught to believe though the exercise of that delusive guide, common sense, that they, that we, that all men were entitled to Liberty! Poor weak creatures, to suppose that man was endowed by his Creator with inalienable rights, and then so green too as to divulge it to the common herd!

What an Era has arived! No longer will it be necessary for man to wander the earth, benighted beclouded-be dumfungled-by the fanaticism, the purblind madness, the delusive folly of common sense and reason!—but be taken care of by that government which is "endowed by the rich for the benefit of the poor," to set down, each one under his masters fig tree, at the footstool of the "godlike" and there enjoy in that heaven of rest the benefits bestowed by the self annointed high priest of the Constitution—worthy worshippers of their master whose only true God is the presidential chair!

With what condescending goodness will the great "expounder" then instruct us in the principles of the Constitution, which under his anxious solicitude and disinterested benevolence he will with all due submission to the people's will adopt as his constitution! What a happy day for the country that Daniels nurse did not let him take cold! How fortunate for the good of mankind in general, and for the people of this happy republic in particular, that his Ma did not let him go "out!"—thereby the Union is safe! for the Union and Slavery is perpetuated! Slavery made the paramount principle of constitutional protection! What a Sage, how profound his expositions! Three chairs (and old ones at that) for the election of the godlike Dan!

He who who would forego pure democracy on so flimsy a pretext, and sell his birthright to gratify defeated ambition, deserves the tyranny which political demagogues, through such machinations ever continue to cast over him. No-sir-ee, the people, the disinterested and intelligent mass of our countrymen prefer Liberty to such chicanery, they know too well the kind of stuff Daniel is made of, they will doubtless find other material than that, out of which they will insist the President shall be made.

The Next Legislature.

The Democratic party has triumphed. It has triumphed upon principle. It has triumphed upon the faults of its foes as well as upon its own merits. The people have acted in accordance with the suggestions of their own necessities. The votes of our members in the last Legislature in contrast with those of our opponents—the resolution, of our Conventions in comparison with those of the enemy,—and the pledges of our candidates in the absence of any upon the other side—satisfied the people that in the succes of the Democratic Party, and in that alone was their only hope for Salutary Reform.

The masses of the people are honest, and despite the notions of some politicians, are always intelligent in matters immediatly concerning their daily practical interests. They are slow to anger, patient and enduring, and easily satisfied; under ordinary circumstances, with plausible pretexts and promises—but, once aroused to a sense of wrong or injurious intent, their wrath is irresistible, and their revenge overwhelming.

They have placed the Democratic party in power—not with reference to office or emolument—not as a reward for past exertions—but for the high and noble purpose of redressing their grievances. If our representatives are true to their constituents—if they carry out the wishes of the people—if they enact proper laws whereby the reforms demanded may be carried into practical operation—if they select the best men for both judicial and executive office—if they redeem honestly the pledges of the party—the people will stand by the Democratic party and uphold its cause and its candidates not only for to-day, but for years to come.

But let a single Democrat shrink from his duty—let the party, as a party, prove recreant to its hgh resolves—let them disappoint the people in but one single particular, and our fate is sealed—the indignation of betrayed confidence will sweep us to oblivion.

The fate of the Democratic Party is in the hands of the next Legislature. Wo to the traitors who attempt our destruction.—True American.

Col. Richard M. Johnson.—This distinguished citizen of Kentucky died at frankfort on Tuesday, in the 70th year of his age. As early as 1807 he was chosen a member of the House of Representatives from Kentucky which post he held for twelve consecutive years. During the last war with Great Britain he raised a volunteer regiment of Cavalry and served gallantly under Harrison, peculiarly distinguishing himself at the battle of the Thames. In 1819 he was transferred from the House of Representatives to the Senate to serve out an unexpired term. When that expired he was rechosen, and then remained in the Senate till 1829. Then another re-election being impossible, he went back into the House where he remained till 1837, when he became Vice President under Van Buren, and presided over the Senate until 1841. Since that period he has held no office, and within the last two years has been broken entirely down.

Verdict in Margaket Devine's Case.—The Jury came into court on Saturday morning about 9 o'clock, and upon their names being called over they retired to their room and continued to deliberate until 1 o'clock, when they returned into Court with a verdict of guilty of murder in the second degree, and a reccommendation to mercy. The prisoner received the announcement of the verdict without any apparent change, and was immediately after remanded to prison.

At the present session of the Supreme Judicial Court, in this city, George H. Mann Esq., on motion of John M. Adams Esq., was admitted to practice as Counsellor and Attorney at Law in the Judicial Courts of this state.—Portland (Me.) Argus.

The Great Christmas Brother Jonathan.—We have received an early copy of this grand holiday pictorial sheet, and it is really a curiosity in the way of printing. The stupendous size of the paper and the large and finely drawn pictures can not fail to delight and astonish every body. There are three grand original features, viz: "The Sewing Girl's Christmas Dream;" "President Taylor's Death Bed," and the "Country Girl's Career in New York." To say nothing of the multitude of good things in the Jonathan, these spirited pictures must ensure for it an immense sale. The subscription cost is only 12 cents per single copy—ten for one dollar. Wilson & Co., New York, are the publishers.

☞ James Pennington, was run over by the passenger train on the Central R. Road near Westfield, on Wednesday Evening, 20th inst., and instantly killed. He leaves a wife and nine children in indigent circumstances. It is supposed he was intoxicated, as he was seen lying across the track, but too late to prevent the accident.

☞ We have received from the publisher, Mr. Lewis Colby, 122 Nassau-st. N. Y., a neat little volume entitled, "A Cenotaph on a Woman of the Burman Mission; or views in the Missionary path of Helen M. It contains a portrait of Mrs. Mason and several views of objects of which it treats; It is got up in good taste, on most excellent paper with beautiful and clear print; forming a most appropriate book for affections gift.

NEW EDUCATIONAL WORKS.

WEBSTER'S ACADEMIC QUARTO DICTIONARY.—This is a new abridgement from the American Dictionary of Dr. Webster. It is a square duodecimo of 434 pages and is the most complete and comprehensive Dictionary for Academies, and similar institutions ever published.

The object is to supply an edition suited to the wants of the more elevated classes of schools and academies. The vocabularly is very copious, containing all the important words of our language, in connection with those exact and comprehensive definitions for which Dr. Webster's Dictionary has been so much distinguished; also many words and phrases from other languages which are often met with in English books, with a brief definition of each.—The words are carefully divided into syllables, and the sounds of the letters indicated by Dr. Webster's admirable invention of figured letters. In many instances the words are re-spelled to insure greater certainty, and the work is thus rendered a complete and most convenient pronouncing dictionary. The irregular plurals of nouns are given, together with the preterite and perfect participles of irregular verbs the derivations of words are also frequently traced.

In every respect the work coincides with the recently revised editions of the Author's large work. In short, no efforts have been spared to adapt this work to the important place it is designed to occupy in the education of our country.

THE NEW NATIONAL GEOGRAPHY.
By S. G. Goodrich.

This is almost an entirely new work, and is one of the most beautiful school books ever published. It is illustrated by 60 new colord stereotype Maps and 220 elegant engravings. Many new and important features have been introduced, and neither expense nor labor has been spared to render it the best and most attractive, as it is the cheapest, school geography extant. The opinions of educators who have examined it are that this design has been most successfully accomplished. Published by MASON & LAW 216 Pearl-street, New-York.

The Albany Knickerbocker, speaker of Daniel Webster's speech to the "Safety" Committee, at the Astor House, says:—

"We regret to find that the Godlike Daniel labors under the delusion that the Union is in danger of being dissolved. Such frightful forebodings became a pothouse orator, and not a grave and reverend member of the Cabinet."

BOUNTY LAND CLAIMS.

It is one of the healthiest places in the United States, within one mile of Ronkonkoma Lake, which is about three miles in circumference, of singular transparency and of great depth, with an abundance of fish. The village is but 4 miles distant from the greet South Bay which is 5 miles wide and 40 miles long, abundantly supplied with oysters, clams, and fish of various kinds.

These lands will produce as much per acre, with the same cultivation, as any land within fifty miles of New-York. The Suffolk County Agricultural Society, at a meeting on 24th September, 1850 awarded premiums for the production of these lands as may be seen by the following letter:

(Copy.)
Lake Road, Oct. 28th, 1850.

I certify that I have raised during the past season the very best of Corn and Potatoes 150 bushels per acre; Egg Plants, and a variety of garden vegetables, on land near the Long Island Railroad at Lake Road from which I received a premium at the Suffolk County Agricultural Fair, held September 24. 1850.

The distribution will take place in a short time by a Committee to be selected by the Subscribers from among their number. The person having the first choice will be entitled, for $25 only, to a 20 acre Farm worth $1,000; the second to an 18 acre Farm, worth $900; the third, a 16 acre Farm, worth $800; the 4th, a 14 acre Farm, worth 700; the 5th, a 12 acre Farm, worth $600; the 6th a 10 acre Farm, worth $500; the 7th and 8th, each an 8 acre farm, worth $400; the 9th, 10th and 11th, each a 6 acre Farm, worth 300; the 12th, 13th, 14th, and 15th each a 5 acre Farm, worth $250; the 16th, 17th, 18th, 19th, and 20th, each a 4 acre Farm, worth $200; and all the others will be entitled to 8 Village Lots, each 25 by 100 feet lying together. There are no blanks—this is not a lottery—every person gets for $25 a hadsome Lot of Ground equal to 8 city lots.

Manner of Distribution of Hermanville Lots and Prize Farms.—The manner of distribution will be as follows: All the numbers on the Map, from 1 to 800, will be put into a wheel, and the first number drawn from the wheel, will be entitled to the first Prize, and, if the first number so drawn or taken out of the wheel happens to be 250 or 275, then the person on the subscription list, who holds or owns the subscription number of 250 or 275, or whatever the corresponding number may be, will be entitled to the first Prize Farm, and so proceeding until all the numbers are drawn out.

THE NEW JERSEY

HORSE POWER

Manufacturing Company.

HAVING improved, strengthened and perfected A. D. CRANE'S Patent Horse Power, are now prepared to furnish the same to all who may want.

This Power consists of an endless floor running over a series of pulleys, connected by cranks, without a rack or cog wheel about it: none being required from the fact, that the weight of the horse on the floor or platform causes sufficient adhesion between it and the pulleys to transmit all the power he is able to give. Also by this arrangement the chain is freed from the draught or strain (which cannot be avoided in any other Stall Power.) except what is reqired to pass the floor around. The requisite speed is obtained direct from the machine thereby avoiding a great amount of friction and wear, and lessening the liability to get out of order. They run so easily as to require less than an inch elevation to the foot. A self acting brake is attached by which the motion is kept regular and uniform even when the work is unsteady and irregular.

From the above description it is evident that this is the most simple and efficient Power known.

They are highly recommended by those who have used them, for driving Circular Saws, Lathes, Drilling Machines, Threshers, Grist Mills, Pumps, &c.

The Company have certificates to prove the above and also to show that the Two Horse Power will grind 40 bushels of Corn to Meal (with Platt's Patent Mill.) in a day of ten hours, making it an invaluable Power for the Southern planter as well as others.

It has taken Silver Medals at the different Fairs where exhibited, and the only one given to Horse Powers by the American Institute last fall.

They also furnish Threshers of the most approved construction.

Price of Single Power with Belt, $75; Double do. with Belt, $110; Thresher and Separator, $35.

HERNIA.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.—This disorder, of very frequennt occurrence, may be considered as arising through weakness of the abdominal walls, inducing an enlargement in the natural openings formed therein for the transmission of blood and other vessels; such openings being enlarged, permit the escape of bowels or other viscera of the abdomen, devolving hernial swellings or rupture, which most generally occur outwardly, as at the navel, groins and thighs.

The complaint is likely to happen at birth, and therefore should be carefully looked for by those having the charge of children, that it may be arrested and cured promptly. It also occurs at any period of life, to either sex, without regard to the condition or mode of living, and when found, should be attended to without delay—the final penalty being death, and that may be induced through strangulation at any momennt.

RUPTURES, are always to be treated with the surgical instruments known as Trusses and Supporters, and these require to be skillfully applied. With this view, the HULL'S TRUSS OFFICE, now established some thirty years, has under the various managers, presented to the public both male and female attendants to apply its instruments directly to the persons, which is preferable in all cases, and has also made improvement at different times, showing that advancement which study and practice only yield toward the relief of this malady.

With much pleasure the fact is now published, that recent improvements BUTLER'S TRUSS PADS have been made, and sufficiently tested upon numerous cases to warrant, through the cures already affected, their submission to the public, as being in adaptation and efficiency superior to any heretofore made known.

These improvements, recently patented, are now being applied at this office, 4 Vesey street, in cases of rupture, gravitation of the bowels, prolapsus uteri, prolapsus ani and piles.

The public may rely upon that care being made in their application, which will most likely tend to the final cure of the several complaints.

Hull's Truss Office, 4 Vesey street, Astor House, opposite St. Paul's Church, New-York.

FRED'K M BUTLER, Proprietor.

N. B.—The ladies' department is attended by a female qualified to fit the instruments, having so attended this office for many years.

Children trussed when only two weeks old, and invariably cured. [145is.

MECHANICAL MEDICINE.

Dr. Banning, formerly of this city, asks to announce that he has returned to 341 Broadway; for consultation and management of weaknesses of the vocal, pulmonary, digestive, nervous, spinal and female systems; and also of the drooping, languor and physical deformities, which are so destructive of both health and beauty at the present day.

As these and kindred maladies are usually the result of a violation of the laws of physical organization, he will treat them chiefly by those exercises, mechanical appliances and reformatory habits of body, in conjunction with hydropathy galvanism and other discoveries of the day, which, united with the cooperative efforts of the subject, are calculated to relieve and restore the energies of the suffering and neglected organs.

Having spent several years in traveling for investigation and practical experiment on the subject, he has, at length, greatly improved and multiplied his surgical and mechanical appliances for the purpose. In addition to his new supports for female and spinal weaknesses, are some combining the properties of a universal hernial truss and an effective general support, with which he challenges cases of general debility, constipation, piles and prolapsus, ani, lencorrhea, prolapsus uteri and every variety of hernia.

The distinctive peculiarity of these devices is, that they do not weaken or restrain the motions or growth of the suffering parts, but act imitatively and concordantly with the mathematical genius of the body's forces. Hence, by a most comfortable and gentle pressure, they at once give great support and render the oppressed system eligible to its own restoration.

Feeble invalids coming from a distance will command prompt and faithful attention.

For more definite information, see his revised edition of "Animal Mechanics," and also his circular, which will be sent gratuitously when requested.

His improved body-braces, spinal supports and supporter trusses applied at his office (341 Broadway) and to be had wholesale and retail. City and country physicians and druggists are invited to call and examine Office hours from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. [121.

CHERRY PECTORAL:

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, ASTHMA, WHOOPING-COUGH AND CONSUMPTION.

The annals of medical science, abording as they do ample proof of the power and value of many medicinal agents, have furnished no examples to compare with the sultary effects produced by 'AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL."

The remarkable cures of diseases of the Lungs which have been realized by its use, attested as they are by many prominent professors and physicians in this and foreign lands, should encourage the afflicted to persevere with the strong assurance that the use of the "CHERRY PECTORAL" will relieve and ultimately cure them.

We present to the public unsolicited tsteimonials from some of the first men in our country, upon whose judgment and experience implicit confidence may be placed.

DR, PERKINS, President Vermont Med. College, one of the most learned and intelligent physicians in the country, considers it a "composition of rare excellencies for the cure of that formidable disease, Consumption."

NORWICH April 26, 1846

DR. J. C. Ayer—Dear Sir:—Agreeable to the request of your agent, we will cheerfully state what we have known of the effects of your CHERRY PECTORAL, and they have been astonishing indeed. Mrs. Betsy Streeter had been afflicted with a severe and relentless cough, which reduced her very low; so low that little hope could be entertained of her recovery. Numerous remedies had been tried without effect before the CHERRY PECTORAL And that has cured her. George Watkinson Esq., had to our knowledge ben afflicted with Asthma, for eleven years, and grown yearly worse, until the CHERRY PECTORAL has now removed the disease and he is as free from any of its symptons as we are. The Rev. Mark Dane had been so severely attacked with the Bronchitis, as to disable him from his duties, and nothing had afforded him relief until I (Mr. Thorning) carried him a bottle of your PECTORAL, which cured him at once, and he now officiates as usual in his place.

These are three of the cases in which we have known it succesful, but never to fail. We have great pleasure in certifying to these facts; and are, respected sir, your humble servants.

REV. DAVID THORRING.
HON. JOSEPH BATTLES.

Among the distinguished authorities who have given their names to recommend CHERRY PECTORAL, as the best remedy that is known for the Affections of the Lungs, are "The Loudon Lancet," "Canadian Journal of Medical Science," "Boston Medical and Surgical Journal," "Charleston (S. C.) Medical Review," "New Jersey Medical Reporter," Prof. WEBSTER, Harvard College, Prof. BARTLETT, Transylvania University of Medicine, President PERKINS, Vermont Medical College, Dr VALENTINE MOTT, New York City, PARKER CLEVELAND, Bowdoin College, Prof BUTTERFIELD, Willoughby College, Ohio, Prof BRAITHWAITE, Leeds (Eng) Medical School, Sir RICHARD KANE, Queen's College, Ireland, Prof. Rosenbaum, Leipsic

The public have but to know the virtues and astonishing success of the "CHERRY PECTORAL," in curing diseases of the Lungs, when they will feel secure from these dangers, whenever this remedy can be obtained.

BLAKE'S PATENT

FIRE PROOF PAINT.

THE original and only genuine article, that can be obtained, without subjecting the purchaser to a prosecution for an infringement of my Patent. It has not yet been two year since the first counterfeit, was got up, but in that short time has proved itself, entirely worthless, as will be seen by the statement of more than twenty of the most respectable inhabitants of Sharon Ohio where mine as well as the Counterfeits are made. They say that we have examined recently, a house that was painted, with

Blake's Patent Fire Proof Paint,

SIX YEARS since (as an experiment) and now find the coating as hard as slate or stone. The action of the weather having no effect than to indurate and harden the substance. We will farther state that it has been such a complete failure in all the other kinds of stuff got up, and sold here, called Fire Proof paint (except Blakes) that his only is considered worth useing.

(Signed) Barrabus Crane and 20 others.

Hon. Daniel Webster has recently examined the patent and at the close of his report says, "I have no doubt whatever, but Mr Blake's Patent is good and valid. [104.

MARRIAGE:

WHY SO OFTEN UNHAPPY.

THE CAUSES AND THE REMEDY!

MANY and many a wife endures years of bodily suffering and of mental anguish, prostrate and helpless, embittering her life, that of her husband, and hazarding the future welfare of her children, arising from causes which, if known, would have spared the suffering, the anguish to the wife, and to the husband embarrassments and pecuniary difficulties having their origin in the mind being weighed down and harassed in consequence of the sickness of the companion of his bosom.

How important that the causes should be known to every wife, to every husband, that the dreadful and harrowing consequences to the health and happiness of both may be avoided! Life is too short and health too precious to admit any portion of the one to be spent without the full enjoyment of the other. The timely possession of a little work entitled as follows has been the means of saving the health and the life of thousands, as over copies have been sold since the first edition was issued.

The author has been induced to advertise it by the urgent and pressing request of those who have been indebted to its publication for all they hold dear (that all may have an opportunity of obtaining it), and who have favored him with thousands of letters of encomium, some of which are annexed to the advertisement.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S
Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

Twentieth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, $1.00.

THIS WORK IS INTENDED ESPECIALLY FOR THE MARRIED, or those contemplating marriage, as it discloses important secrets which should be known to them particularly.

Here, every female—the wife, the mother—the one either budding into womanhood, or the one in the decline of years, in whom nature contemplates an important change—can discover the causes, symptoms, and the most efficient remedies and most certain mode of cure, in every complaint to which her sex is subject.

The revelations contained in its pages have proved a blessing to thousands, as the innumerable letters received by the author (which he is permitted by the writers to publish) will attest.

SICKLY AND UNHAPPY WIVES.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Dayton, O.

"DAYTON, May 1, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU—My Dear Sir: 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion,' for which I enclosed one dollar to your address, came safely to hand. I would not have troubled you with these few lines, but that I am impelled by a sense of gratitude, for myself and wife, to give utterance to our sincere and heartfelt emotions.

"My wife has been perceptibly sinking for some three years or more, in consequence of her great anguish and suffering some months before and during confinement; every successive one more and more debilitated and prostrated her, putting her life in imminent danger, and which was, on the last occasion, despaired of. I supposed that this state of things was inevitable, and resigned myself to meet the worst. At this time (now about two months) I heard your book highly spoken of, as containing some matters reaching my case. On its receipt and perusal, I can not express to you the relief it afforded my distressed mind and the joy its pages imparted to my wife, on learning that the great discovery of M. M. Desomeaux provided a remedy. It opened a prospect to me which I little conceived was possible. No pecuniary consideration can ever repay the obligations I am under to you for having been the means of imparting to us the matters contained in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' But for this, ere another year would have passed over my head, in all human probability my wife would have been in her grave, and my children left motherless."

Extract from a Letter.

Competence and Health.

"LANCASTER, PA., Oct. 24, 1847.

"MY DEAR SIR: I know you will have the kindness to bear with me in encroaching upon your time, while I acknowledge (in behalf of myself and wife) the obligations we feel ourselves under to you in having made known certain matters, contained in your most invaluable 'Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' It has been worth its weight in gold to me. If I express myself rather warmly, you will see that I can not do so too warmly, when I inform you of the extent to which I have, through it, been benefited. I will state my situation when I obtained your book through the merest curiosity I look upon it as one of the most fortunate events of my life. I had been married some ten years, and was the father of seven children. I was long struggling unceasingly, to the end that I might gain a moderate competency, but the results of my utmost exertions at the end left me about where I was at the beginning of each year; and that only, with the most stinted economy, sufficing with barely the necessaries of life. Finally, this constant effort was beginning to have its effect upon my health: I felt less capable to endure its continuance, while I felt the necessity of perseverance.

"This constant, unceasing struggle on my part was imperative, in consequence of the prostrated condition of my wife (with occasional intermission) for six years, much of the time confined to her bed, and of course incapable of taking the charge and management of household affairs. Her condition arose from causes of which I was ignorant. Oh! what would I have given had I the six years to live over again! What would my wife have given to have been spared the long days and still longer nights prostrate on a bed of sickness!—all of which would have been avoided, had I then seen a copy of 'THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION.'"

From a Physician.

DANGEROUS DELIVERIES,

OBSTRUCTIONS, IRREGULARITIES, &C.

How many are suffering from obstruction or irregularities peculiar to the female system, which undermine their health, the effects of which they are ignorant, and for which their delicacy forbids seeking medical advice! How many suffer from prolapsus uteri (falling of the womb), or from fluor-albus (weakness, debility, &c., &c)! How many are in constant agony for many months preceding confinement! How many have difficult if not dangerous deliveries, and whose lives are jeoparded during such time, will find in its pages the means of prevention, amelioration, and relief!

Extract from a Letter.

To those just Married.—"Had I known!"

"PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU: Had I known of the important matters treated of in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion' some years ago how much misery I might have escaped! I have suffered years from causes which you point out in your book, without knowing what to do. I obtained a copy, and found my case treated of. I trust every female will avail herself of the information contained in its pages."

Letters are daily received of this character, unnecessary to present.

To those yet unmarried, but contemplating marriage, or perhaps hesitating as to the propriety of incurring the responsibilities attendant upon it, the importance of being possessed of the revelations contained in these pages, so intimately involving their future happiness, can not be appreciated.

It is, of course, impracticable to convey more fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage; neither is it necessary, since it is every one's duty to become possessed of knowledge whereby the sufferings to which a wife, a mother, or a sister, may be subject, can be obviated.

☞ Copies will be sent by Mail free of Postage to the Purchaser.

☞ On the receipt of One Dollar, "THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION" is sent (mailed free) to any part of the United States. All letters must be post-paid (except those containing a remittance), and addressed to Dr. A. M. MAURICEAU, Box 1224, New York City. Publishing Office, No. 129 Liberty st., New York.

Over 20,000 Copies have been sent by MAIL, within three months with perfect safety and certainty.

Booksellers and agents engaged in its sale, are making handsome competencies from the ready and extraordinary demand for it, and the extremely liberal terms afforded them.

Active local or travelling Agents, throughout the United States and Canadas, will be supplied on the same terms. Communications are required to be POST-PAID and addressed as above.

☞ CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against various catch-penies intended to be palmed off upon them initiating the title of the work as "The Married LADIES' Medical Companion," and various other titles. The title of the work is "THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION," BY Dr. A. M. Mauriceau. [105

FOR FEMALES AND MALES

Dr. Lazetti's Juno Cordial, or Protective Elixir.

This is the only actual remedy ever discovered for impetency, Genital Debility, Nocturnal Emissions, and all diseases occasioned by certain secret habits; and many of the nostrums recently recommended for the same complaints are worthless imitations which its unrivalled excellence, fame and popularity have brought into the market. The Medical Faculty of Europe and the United States are unanimous in their recommendations of the Juno Cordial and have not given their sanction in a single instance that has been authenticated, to any compound for the same purposes. The nature of the maladies relieved by the Juno Cordial are generally such as to leave the publication of certificates of cures out of the question, or the proprietor could produce a host of the most conclusive testimony to show that the great reputation that it enjoys was not accidentally obtained, but is firmly based upon its positive, and apparently miraculous virtues. In all directions are to be found the happy parents of healthy offspring, who would not have been so, but for this extraordinary preparption. And it is equally potent in the many diseases for which it is recommended. Objection has been naturally made to the price of the Juno Cordial, because the trash that has been thrown into the market in opposition to it is sold cheaper; but the fact is, the Cordial cannot be afforded for less, and ought to be much dearer, as many of the ingredients which compose it are among the costliest things in nature; whereas the others are made up of cheap drugs worth but little in money, and less in merit. We assure the reader that the utmost reliance may be placed on the Juno Cordial in the cure of the maladies mentioned above, and also those that follow, viz: Loss of Muscular Energy, Physical Lassitude and General Prostration, Irritability, and all Nervous Affections, Indigestion, Sluggishness of the Liver, Gleet, Lucorrhoea or Whites, and Flour Albus and every disease in any way connected with the disorder of the Procreative Functions—in all of which it will afford almost immediate relief, and, if used as directed, is almost certain to produce a positive and permanent cure. Persons about to marry, if conscious of any weakness or disability of a certain nature, should take this Cordial, as it will infallibly restore health and vigor in a brief period, and where want of offspring is a cause of regret, if recourse be had to it the most beneficial results may be anticipated with confidence. It is of priceless value to those without offspring. It has taken the precedence in Italy and will in all other countries where it may become known.

It also possesses the unrivalled qualities of curing incipient Consumption, and I have administered it with great success to patients who have sought our delightful climate for the restoration of their health and the result is that a medicine has been added to the catalogue for the cure of insipient consumption.

To spread wide the blessings of this medicine, I have appointed Messrs. Judson & Co, of the City of New York, in the United States of America, my sole Agents for its sale; and none can be genuine unless it comes through them, and their signature is on the weapper.

From Chamber's Edinburgh Journal,

When the Summer Comes.

I once knew a little boy, a little child of three years old; one of these bright creatures whose fair loveliness seems more of heaven than of earth—even at a passing glimpse stirring our hearts, and filling them with purer and holier thought. But this, the little Francie, was more of a cherubim than an angel—as we picture them—with his gladsome hazel eyes, his dazzling fairness, his clustering golden hair, and his almost winged step. Such he was, at least, until sickness laid its heavy hand on him: then, indeed, when after days of burning, wasting fever—hours of weary restlessness—the little hand at last lay motionless outside the scarcely whiter coverlet of his tiny bed, the fair, still head, pressed down upon the pillow, and the pale face gazing with the silent wonder of returning consciousness on the anxious ones around it; then, indeed, a bright, yet pitying look would flit across it, or dwell in the earnest eyes—a look such as we assign to angels in our dreams, when some fond fancy seems to bring them near us, weeping for mortal griefs beyond their remedy.

It was a strange sickness for one so young—the struggle of typus fever with a baby frame; but life and youth obtained the victory; and quicker even than hope could venture to expect, the pulses rallied, the cheeks grew round and rosy, and the little wasted limbs filled up again. Health was restored—health, but not strength; we thought this for a while. We did not wonder that the weakened limbs refused their office, and still we waited on in hope, until days and even weeks passed by; then it was found that the complaint had left its bitter sting, and little Francie could not walk a step, or even stand.

Many and tedious and painful were the remedies resorted to; yet the brave little heart bore stoutly up, with that wonderful fortitude, almost heroism, which all who have watched by suffering childhood, when the tractable spirit bends to its early discipline must at some time or other have remarked. Francie's fortitude might have afforded an example to many; but a dearer lesson was given in the hopeful spirit with which the little fellow himself noted the effect of each distressing remedy, marking each stage of progress, and showing off with eager gladness every step attained, from the first creeping on the hands and knees, to the tiptoe journey round the room, holding on by chairs and tables; then to the clinging to some loving hand; and then at last, the graceful balancing of his light body, until he stood quite erect alone, and so moved slowly on.

It was in autumn this illness seized on the little one, just when the leaves were turning and the orchard fruits becoming ripe. His nurse attributed it all to his sitting on a grassy bank at play on one of those uncertain autumn days; but he, in his childish way, always maintained. "It was Francie himself, eating red berries in the holly bower." However this may have been, the season and the time seemed indelibly impressed upon his mind. In all his long confinement to the house, his thoughts continually turned to outward objects, to the external face of nature and the season's change, and evermore his little word of hope was this, "When the summer comes!"

He kept it up throughout the long winter, and the bleak cold spring. A fairy little carriage had been provided for him, in which, well wrapped up from the cold, and resting on some soft cushions, he was lightly drawn along by a servant, to his own great delight and the admiration of many a young beholder. But when any one—attempting to ecconcile him the better to his position—expatiated on the beauty or comfort of his new acquisition, his eager look and word would show how far he went beyond it, as, quickly interrupting, he would exclaim, "Wait till the summer comes—then Francie will walk again."

During the winter there was a fearful storm: it shook the windows, moaned in the old trees, and howled down the chimneys with a most menacing voice. Older hearts than Francie's quailed that night, and he, unable to sleep, lay listening to it all—quiet, but asking many a question, as his excited fancy formed similitudes to the sounds. One time it was poor little children cruelly turned out, and wailing; then something thrilling, with its last hoarse cry; then wolves and bears, from far off other lands. But all the while he knew he was snug and safe himself; no fears disturbed him, whatever the noise may have done. Throughout the whole of it he carried his one steadfast hope, and in the morning, telling of it, with all his marvellous thoughts, he finished his relation with the never-failing word of comfort, "Ah! there shall be no loud wind no waking nights, when once the summer comes!"

The summer came with its glad birds and flowers, its balmy air; and who can paint the exquisite delight of the suffering child that had waited for it so long? Living almost continually in the open air, he seemed to expect fresh health and strength from each reviving breath he drew, and every day would deem himself capable of some greater effort, as if to prove that his expectation had not been in vain.

One lovely day he and his little play-fellows were in a group amusing themselves in part of the garden when some friends passed through Francie, longing to show how much he could do, entreated hard to be taken with them, "along the walk, just to the holly bower." His request was granted, and on he did walk; quick at first, then slowly slower; but still upheld by his strong faith in the summer's geniel influence, he would not rest in any of the offered arms, though the fitful color went and came, and the pauses grew more and more frequent. No, with a heavy sigh, he admitted, "Tis a very, verry long walk now; but Francie must not be tired; sure the summer is come." And so, determined not to admit fatigue in the face of the season's bright proofs around him, he succeeded in accomplishing his little task.

Thus the summer passed away, and again came the changing autum, acting on poor little Francie to a degree he had never reckoned on, and with its chill, damp airs, nearly throwing him back again. With a greater effort even than before, he had again tried the walk to the holly bower, the scene of his self accusing misdemeanor as the cause of all his sufferings. He sat down to rest; above his head, as the autumnal breeze swept through them, "the polished leaves and berries red did rustling play; and as little Francie looked upward toward them, a memory of the former year, and of all the time that had passed since then, seemed for the first time mournfully to steal over his heart. He nestled in closer to his mother's side; and still looking up, but with more thoughtful eyes, he said, "Mamma, is the the summer quite gone?"

"Yes, my darling. Don't you see the scarlet berries, the food of winter for the little birds?"

"Quite gone, mamma, and Francie not quite well?"

His mother looked away; she could not bear her child to see the tell tale tears his mournful little words called up, or know the sad echo returned by her own desponding thoughts. There was a moment's silence, only broken by the blackbird's song; and then she felt a soft, a little kiss, upon her hand, and looking down, she saw her darling's face—yes, surely now it was an angel's—gazing upward to her, brightly beaming, brighter than ever; and his rosy lips just parted with their own sweet smile again, as he exclaimed in joyous tones, "Mamma, the summer will come again!"

Precious was that heaven born word of childish faith to the care worn mother, to cheer her then, and, with its memory of hope, still to sustain her through many an after experiment and anxious watch, until, at last, she reaped her rich reward in the complete realization of her bright one's hope. Precious to more than her such words may be, if bravely stemming our present trouble, whatsoe'er it be—bravely enduring, persevering, encouraging others and ourselves, even as a little child—we hold the thought, that as the revolving year brings round its different seasons, as day succeds to night—and even as surely as we look for this, and know it—so to the trusting heart there comes a time—it may be soon or late, it may be now, or it may be then—when this grief or grievance will have passed away; and so 'twill all seem nothing—when the summer comes!

Chronicles of the Latter Days.

CHAPTER XIII.

Barnum the Humbug—The Lind Fever.

1. Howbeit there dwelt in the north country, a damsel who was gifted in song.

2. And it came to pass as she travelled from city to city singing for hire, the people thronged her as though she had been a god, so that her gains were very great, and her fame was spread abroad throughout all the world.

3. And it came to pass that when Barnum heard of her fame, and how the people thronged her and of the treasures she gained by reason of her songs he said in his heart, have not the scribes, Pharisees and hypocrites of this nation itching ears, and will they not pour out their money like water to have their ears tickled with pleasant sounds?

4. So he pondered in his heart what he would do; and he sat down and wrote a letter to Jenny, the singer, saying, "Come over hither, I pray thee and tickle the ears of my people, for behold they have forsaken the Lord their God, and run after vanity as the foolish bird hasteneth to the snare of the fowler, therefore if thou wilt come over and tickle their ears, will they net open their purses and pour out gold and silver so that we may become rich?"

5. And it came to pass that when Barnum had offered her an hundred and fifty thousand peices of silver for singing an hundred and fifty nights, she answered him saying "Lo, I come, therefore, get ye ready and gather the people together that they may become our prey,"

6. Now Barnum knew what there was in man who has wandered from the truth, and how easy it is to excite his passions and to gull him, so he went to the scribes who write for money and print for hire and said unto them, "Behold Jenny is coming to sing to this people, I pray ye therefore to publish her praise in all your papers; spare not, but daub on the praise thick and often, even as the priests daub their people with untempered mortar.

7. For behold, have I not free tickets and money for those who will aid me? Therefore do your best; stir ye up the people, that they may become excited, for ye know that when they lose their wits, we can lead them whithersoever we will."

8. So the scribes sat them down to write and the printers printed, and there was nothing heard of in all the land but the praises of Jenny the Sweedish Singer.

9. And behold the people talked about her in the streets and the market places, in the highways and by-ways; the chief priests and rulers of the synagogues and all who worship idols or run after vanity were heard continually praising the singer, so that the weaker portion of the people became stark mad.

10. And it came to pass that Jenny took ship and came over the water to Gotham, where, in ancient time, dwelt the three wise men who went to sea in a bowl; and it came to pass that when the decendants of the wise men saw the ship, they shouted aloud, and cried one to another, "Behold the sweet singer cometh, go ye out to meet her;" for howbeit, they were ready to worship her as zelously as the disciples of Jesus worshipped the Lord of life and glory.

11. So they gat them down to the sea side to meet her; and when the vessel came to land and they saw Jenny standing in the midst of the people on the deck, they all shouted with one accord and clapped their hands, and waved their handkerchiefs and hats, and behaved like men who were beside themselves.

12. Howbeit it was the first day of the week, which the Pharisees call the holy Sabbath; the day on which they profess to worship the Lord the God of heaven and earth; yet they cared not for that, but bowed their heads and worshiped the damsel more than they had ever worshiped God.

13. And it came to pass that when she came out of the ship, they spread a carpet upon the earth, for her to walk on to the chariot, while the poor widows and orphans in Gotham had not decent garments to cover their nakedness!

14. And when the chariot was driven to the inn, the multitudes followed after, shouting as they went, as though the city had been one great bedlam and the inmates had broken loose.

15. And behold the damsel had a little dog, and the mullitude said unto Jenny, "We pray thee give unto us the dog, that we may worship it, that our hearts may be comforted."

16. But she answered saying, "How can I give you my dog? was it not given me by Queen Victoria, the mother of many princes, and how can I part with it?"

17. And when the multitude saw that they could not have the dog, they plucked the hairs from its tail and worshiped the hairs, so the tail of the brute was exalted before the people above all that is called God, and the scribes, Pharisees and hypocrites of Gotham worshiped with drums and trumpets, and instruments of wood and wire; and behold there was a great day in Gotham, even such a day as was never known since the world began.

Mahomedan Justice.

A certain merchant left in his last testament seventeen horses to be divided among his three sons, according to the following proportion: The first was to receive half, the second one-third, and the third a ninth part of the whole. But, when they came to arrange about the division, it was found that, to comply with the terms of the will, without sacrificing one or more of the animals, was impossible. Puzzled in the extreme, they repaired to the Cadi; who, having read the will, observed that such a difficult question required time for deliberation, and commanded them to return after two days.

When they again made their appearance, the judge said, "I have considered carefully your case, and I find that I can make such a division of the seventeen horses among you as will give each more than his strict share, and yet not one of the animals shall be injured. Are you content?"

"We are, O Judge," was the reply.

"Bring forth the seventeen horses, and let them be placed in the court," said the Cadi.

The animals were brought, and the Judge ordered his groom to place his own horse with them. He bade the eldest brother count the horses.

"They are eighteen in number, O Judge," he said.

"I will now make the division," observed the Cadi. "You, the eldest, are entitled to half; take then, nine of the horses. You, the second son, are to receive one-third; take, therefore, six; while to you, the youngest, belongs the ninth part, namely, two. Thus, the seventeen horses are divided among you; you have each more than your share, and I may now take my own steed back again."

"Mashallah!" exclaimed the brothers, with delight; "O Cadi, your wisdom equals that of our Lord, Luleiman Ibn Daood!"—[Notes on Nineveh.

My Uncle Bill's First Love.

My Uncle Bill and aunt Airy reside on Long Island, not far from the far famed resort, Rockaway. One evening last week, as aunt Airy was boiling some chesnuts for us "Yorkers" to eat, and as uncle bill sat a moking a good Havanna, we had brought down with us, we persuaded him to tell us a story. Uncle Bill tells a good one when he chooses, and being a man that loves to please, he dipped deeply, very quickly into the merits of the one he purposed telling us; somewhat thus: "When I was a slip of a chap I had occasions to travel some distance in a stage coach, as steamboats and rail cars were not too plenty in those ere days. Now I have heerd tell often of fellers fallin' in love at first sight, but I never much believed it till that stage ride made me kinder think so. I had the luck of sitting along side of one of the prettiest women I have ever seen.—(Uncle Bill looked slyly at aunt Airy.)

"I soon fell in love up to the brim, chuck, with the gal. As it was growin' dark, the stage was passin through a thick wood, then I thought my time was come surely. As I felt my strength goin' quickly, I kinder gently lifted my arm and drew it round the fair one's waist; she moved not, but only made a slight noise, which I supposed was a love sigh; says I, dear one, sweet one, I love yer, will yer love me? The girl sad nothing, but made the noise, I supposed was a love sigh again I then pressed her to me, and her head fell on my shoulder, and I began to tremble all over; but still I kept my tongue agoin,' and says I, dear little one, won't yer love me, will yer m-m-arry me? The stage just then drove out of the wood, and the moon shone on her face—and I looked on it—and—and—" "and what?" we all exclaimed, "and says Uncle Bill, "she was sleepin' and snoring' in my arms." When our roars of laughter had somewhat subsided, Uncle Bill said, "there she sits bilin' chesnuts."

A late number of the Knickerbocker contains a good anecdote, going to show that it is not exactly safe for an habitual tipler to go home sober The story is told of a man who merely failed to go to bed intoxicated, and to disturb his wife during the whole night. Upon its being charged (says the Knickerbocker) by a friend that he never went to bed sober, he indignantly denied the impeachment, and gave the incidents of one particular night in proof—

"Pretty soon after I got in bed, my wife said, "Why husband, what is the matter with you? You act very strangely!" "There's nothing the matter with me," said I, "nothing at all." "I'm sure there is," said she, "you don't act natural at all. Shan't I get up and get something for you?" And up she got, lighted a candle, and came to the bed side to look at me, shading the light with her hand. "I knew there was something strange about you!" she said, "why, you are sober! Now this is a fact and my wife will swear to it; so don't slander me any more by saying that I have'nt been to bed sober in six months, cause I have!"

To Fatten Fowls.

The best food for fattening fowls is potatoes mixed with meal. Boil the potatoes and mash them fine while they are hot, and mix the meal with them just before it is to be presented. They fatten on this diet in less than half the time ordinarily required to bring them to the same condition of excellence on corn, or even meal itself.

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday; December 5, 1850.

☞ Mr Albert D. Drake is our authorised agent to receive subscriptions and advertisments.

☞ Mr. E. W. Carr, Third street, Philadelphia, opposite the Exchange, is our authorised agent for that city.

☞ We have received a copy of a petition to the Legislature for a law "For the advancement of the Agricultural interest of the State, and for the appointed of a State Agriculturist."

We are most heartily in favor of the Agricultural interest of the State, believing that the prosperity of all other branches are intimately and indissolubly connected therewith; or perhaps more correctly, that Agriculture is the fundamental basis of all the rest. We are well aware, from a practical test, and observation, that New Jersey does not produce but a small proportion of the amount of agricultural productions which she is abundantly capable of producing. We believe, taking the parts of the State with which we are well acquainted for our guide, that it does not produce over one third what it is capable of doing, even with the same amount of labor, and the same quantity of manure that is now bestowed upon it, for the want of a proper knowledge on the subject to enable the farmer to make a judicious application of them. But we are opposed, most decidedly, to the appointment of any State Agriculturist, believing the interest of the public would be better promoted by abolishing some offices which already exist rather than by the creation of any new ones, and especially that the interest of indifferently poor farmers would be better promoted by a more general circulation of the means of general knowledge among them; it being a self-evident fact, to all who may have examined or will investigate the subject, that where general information does not abound, that there, not only agriculture but every other branch of industry is unprofitably carried on, if indeed it is not altogether neglected. This may appear to be asserting a truism, but if it is, it is one which requires the attention of the public, and especially of that class whose interest is under consideration; we wish to see an interest awakened upon this important subject, which shall take hold of those most immediately interested.

This cannot be more effectually done than by an energetic diffusion of knowledge among them. This cannot be done in any other manner so effectually and economically as by the establishment of Free Schools among the people, having them well supplied with a good District Library, for the use of the adult as well as the juvenile portion of the community. Thus only, as we can conceive, can this class of persons or the public generally be made to appreciate the value of a well cultivated country to the prosperity and happiness of the people.

The want of a more liberal system of Common School education has done more to depress the energies, not only of agriculture, but of every other branch, than a thousand Agriculturists (State appointments) can ever remedy. Give us therefore first, a liberal, judicious and permanent system of Free Schools, imparting and infusing a desire for general knowledge; a spirit of liberty, of industry; enlightening, revivifying and purifying every nook and corner of our State, then will Agriculture, Commerce, Manufactures and the Mechanic Arts flourish, despite the appointment or non appointment of a State Agriculturist.

We would say something about the instrumentality of Newspapers in connection with this subject, but if these views are adopted there will be no lack of desire for this indispensible medium for its more general diffusion, they ever follow as a matter of course, a liberal system of Common School education.

We submit these reflections to the consideration of our Legislators and the public, while we would inform our readers that the petition above refered to is at our office awaiting their action.

The Message.

In another column will be found extracts of the most important parts of the Message—the Tariff and the Fugitive Slave Law, yclep't Peace measure, &c. On both these questions we beg leave to differ from the President's views.

First, the Tariff was sanctioned by a direct vote of the people; it has given more general satisfaction to the several great interest of the country than any which has preceded it; it has likewise produced more revenue. We are confident that it will not be materially altered; it only wants perfecting as experience may have suggested. The Message says: "More than three-fourths of our population are engaged in the cultivation of the soil." It would be preposterously absurd therefore to tax them for the special benefit of less than one quarter. The Message admits that, "A high tariff can never be permanent. It will cause dissatisfaction and will be changed. It excludes competition, and thereby invites the investment of capital in manufactures to such excess that when changed it brings distress, bankruptcy and ruin upon all who have been misled by its faithless protection."

What a falling off is here! This argument is conclusive evidence in favor of the present revenue tariff—a virtual abandonment, so far as protection goes, of all the ground hitherto held on this subject by the Whigs.

On the subject of the peace measures we consider the Message but an electioneering document—a base surrender, for a mess of pottage—the presidential chair—of the rights of man, to the domineering spirit and bravado of the South. The great mass of the whole people, indepenent of politicians, are in favor of Liberty, of republican principles, or they are not. Slavery is antagonistic to Liberty, to republicanism—a virtual surrender of the principles for which our forefathers contended; therefore we venture to predict that the people are in favor of Liberty, and despite the machinations of politicians to surrender their birthright, they will yet discuss and agitate until they shall have obtained for all men, in accordance with the solemn asservations of our forefathers, the inalienable rights wherewith God endowed him.

The writer of this work is undoubtedly possessed of very creditable talents as a writer of fiction, but we think they are misapplied in writing works of this description. How Editors commend works of this description, who condemn those of Maria Edgeworth, because they teach morality and virtue only, is more than we can comprehend. We must have the charity to believe that they have not read it. It is of a species we cannot recommend to our readers, believing it calculated to lead its readers from the path of rectitude to that of sin and shame.

The President's Message.

In our domestic policy the Constitution will be my guide; and in questions of doubt I shall look for its interpretation to the judicial decisions of that tribunal which was established to expound it, and to the usage of the Government, sanctioned by the acquiescence of the country. I regard all its provisions as equally binding. In all its parts it is the will of the people, expressed in the most solemn form, and the constituted authorities are but agents to carry that will into effect.

Every power which it has granted is to be exercised for the public good; but no pretenee of utility, no honest conviction, even, of what might be expedient, can justify the assumption of any power not granted. The powers conferred upon the Government and their distribution to the several departments, are as clearly expressed in that sacred instrument as the imperfection of human language will allow; and I deem it my first duty, not to question its wisdom, add to its provisions, evade its requirements, or nullify its commands.

Upon you, fellow-citizens, as the representatives of the States and the people, is wisely devolved the legislative power. I shall comply with my duty, in laying before you, from time to time, any information calculated to enable you to discharge your high and responsible trust, for the benefit of our common constituents.

My opinion will be frankly expressed upon the leading subjects of legislation; and if, which I do not anticipate, any act should pass the two Houses of Congress which should appear to me unconstitutional, or an encroachment on the just powers of other departments, or with provisions hastily adopted, and likely to produce consequences injurious and unforeseen, I should not shrink from the duty of returning it to you, with my reasons, for your further consideration.

Beyond the due performance of these constitutional obligations, both my respect for the legislature and my sense of propriety will restrain me from any attempt to control or influence your proceedings. With you is the power, the honor, and the responsibility of the legislation of the country.

The Constitution has made it the duty of the President to take care that the laws be faithfully executed. In a Government like ours, in which all laws are passed by a majority of the representatives of the people, and these representatives are chosen for such short periods, that any injurious or obnoxious law can very soon be repealed, it would appear unlikely that any great numbers should be found ready to resist the execution of the laws.

You, gentleman, and the country may be assured, that to the utmost of my ability, and to the extent of the power vested in me, I shall at all times, and in all places, take care that the laws be faithfully executed. In the disharge of this duty, solemnly imposed upon me by the Constitution, and by my oath of office, I shall shrink from no responsibility, and shall endeavor to meet events as they may arise, with firmness, as well as with prudence and discretion.

The appointing power is one of the most delicate with which the Executive is invested. I regard it as a sacred trust, to be exercised with the sole view of advancing the prosperity and happiness of the people. It shall be my effort to elevate the standard of official employment, by selecting for places of importance individuals fitted for the posts to which they are assighed, by their known integrity, talents, and virtues.

I am happy in being able to say that no unfavorable change in our foreign relations has taken place since since the Message at the opening of the last session of Congress. We are at peace with all nations, and we enjoy in an eminent degree the blessings of that peace, in a prosperous and growing commerce, and in all the forms of amicable national intercourse.

The company of citizens of the United States who have acquired from the State of Nicaraugua the privilege of constructing a ship canal between the two oceans, through through the territory of that State have made progress in their preliminary arrangements. The treaty between the United States and Great Britain, of the 19th of April last, above refered to, being now in operation, it is to be hoped that the guaranties which it offers will be sufficient to secure the completion of the work with all practical expidition.

I refer you to the report of the Secretary of the Treasury for a detailed statement of the finances.

The total receipts into the Treasury for the year ending 30th June last, were forty-seven million four hundred and twenty-one thousand seven hundred and forty-eight dollars and ninety cents, (47,421,748 90.)

The total expenditures during the same period were forty-three million two thousand one hundred and sixty-eight dollars and ninety cents, ($43,002, 168 90.)

The public debt has been reduced, since the last annual report from the Sreasury Department, four hundred and ninety-five thousand two hundred and seventy-six dollars and seventy-nine cents, (495, 276 79.)

All experience has demonstrated the wisdom and policy of raising a large portion of revenue, for the support of Government from duties on goods imported. The power to lay these duties is unquestionable, and its chief object, of course, is to replenish the treasusy. But if, in doing this, an incidental advantage may be gained by encouraging the industry of our own citizens, it is our duty to avail ourselves of that advantage.

A duty laid upon an article which cannot be produced in this country—such as tea or coffee—adds to the cost of the article, and is chiefly or wholly paid by the consumer. But a duty laid upon an article which may be produced here, stimulates the skill and industry of our own country to produce the same article, which is brought into the market in competition with the foreign article, and the importer is thus compelled to reduce his price to that at which the domestic article can be sold, thereby throwing a part of the duty upon the producer of the foreign article.

The continuwnce of this process creates the skill and invites the capital, which finally enables us to produce the article much cheaper than it could have been produced from abroad, thereby benefiting both the producer and the consumer at home. The consequence of this is, that the artisan, and the agriculturist, are brought together, each affords a ready market for the produce of the other, the whole country becomes prosperous; and the ability to produce every necessary of life renders us independent in war as well as in peace.

A high Tariff can never be permanent. It will cause dissatisfaction and will be changed. It excludes competition, and thereby invites the investment of capital in manufactures to such excess that when changed it brings distress, bankruptcy and ruin upon all who have been misled by its faithless protection. What the manufacturer wants is uniformity and permanency, that he may feel a confidence that he is not to be ruined by sueden changes.

But to make a Tariff uniform and permanent, it is not only necessary that the law should not be altered, but that the duty should not fluctuate. To effect this, all duties should be specific, wherever the nature ot the article is such as to admit of it. Ad valorem duties fluctuate with the price, and offer strong temptations to fraud and purjury. Specific duties, on the contrary, are equal and uniform in all ports, and at all times, and offer strong inducement to the importer to bring the best article, as he pays no more duty upon that than upon one of inferior quality,

I therefore strongly reccommend a modification of the present tariff, which has prostrated some of our most important and necessary manufactures, and that specific duties be imposed sufficient to raise the requisite revenue, making such discrimination in favor of the industrial pursuits of our own country as to encourage home production, without excluding foreign competition. It is also important that an unfortunate provision in the present tariff, which imposes a much higher duty upon the raw material that enters into our manufactures than upon the manufactured article, should be remedied.

It was hardly to have been expected that the series of measures passed at your last session, with the view of healing the sectional differences which had sprung from the slavery and territorial questions, should at once have realized their beneficient purpose. All mutual concession in the nature of a compromise must necessarily be unwelcome to men of extreme opinions. And though without such concessions our Constitution could not have been formed and cannot be permanently sustained, yet we have seen them made the subject of bitter controversy in both sections of the Republic. It required many months of discussion and deliberation to secure the concurrence of a majority of Congress in their favor. It would be strange if they had been received with immediate approbation by people and States, prejudiced and heated by the exciting controversies of their representatives. I believe those measures to have been required by the circumstances and condition of the country. I believe they were necessary to allay asperities and animosities that were rapidly alienating one section of the country from another, and destroying those fraternal sentiments which are the strongest supports of the Constitution. They were adopted in the spirit of conciliation, and for the purpose of conciliation, I believe that a great majority of our fellow-citizens sympathize in that spirit, and that purpose, and in the main approve, and are prepared, in all respects, to sustain these enactments. I cannot doubt that the American people, bound together by kindred blood and common traditions, still cherish a paramount regard for the Union of their fathers; and that they are ready to rebuke any attempt to violate its integrity, to disturb the compromises on which it is based, or to resist the laws which have been enacted under its authority.

The series of measures to which I have alluded are regarded by me as a settlement, in principle and substance—a final settlement, of the dangerous and exciting subjects which they embraced. Most of these subjects, indeed, are beyond your reach, as the legislation which disposed of them was, in its character, final and irrevocable. It may be be presumed from the opposition which they all encountered that none of those measures was free from imperfections, but in their mutual dependence and connexion they formed a system of compromise, the most cociliatory, and best for the entire country, that could be obtained from conflicting sectional interests and opinions.

For this reason I reccommend your adherence to the adjustment established by those measures, until time and experience shall demonstrate the necessity of further legislation to guard against evasion or abuse.

By that adjustment we have been rescued from the wide and boundless agitation that surrounded us, and have a firm, distinct, and legal ground to rest upon. And the occasion, I trust, will justify in exhorting my countrymen to rally upon and maintain that ground as the best, if not the only means, of restoring peace and quiet to the country, and maintaining inviolate the integrity of the Union.

☞ There are 8 churches in Plainfield—Population say 2,300. There are 256 churches in New York, Population 450.000. New York has 196 times the population and 32 times the churches of Plainfield, notwithstanding which the latter place has six times as many churches as the former according to population. To be equal, New York ought to have 1500 churches. Grog shops are in the inverse ratio.

Western Steamboats—Two Destroyed by Fire and three Sunk.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 30.

The steamboat Gayoso, a Memphis and Arkansas packet, while lying at the former place, caught fire near the stern, and was soon so much consumed that it was necessary to scuttle and sink her. The flames spread to the steamboat Swallow, an old siern-wheel boat, which was also destroyed. The Gayoso belonged te Capt. Timms and was insured for $8,000, The Swallow was worth about $2,000.

Three of our largest Western steamers have been sunk within the last few days, on their way to New Orleans, viz: Griffin Yeatman, Fashion, and Cincinnatus. The latter, after throwing overboard 400 bbls of pork, was raised; the others will also probably be raised.

Great Hurricane on the Mississippi—Dreadful Loss of Life and Property.

One of tee most appalling and destructive tornadoes which has been experienced in the Mississippi Valley for several years, occurred about 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

It swept over the town of Cape Girardeau, Mo., situated on the Mississippi river, just below St. Louis, and demolished some seventy or eighty buildings, many of them the finest and principal business in the place.

The Baptist and Catholic Churches, and the Catholic Convent were destroyed.

Two of the large and splendid telegraph masts belonging to the St. Louis and New-Orleans Telegraph Companies were cracked, shivered, and brought to the ground with as much ease as though they had been pipe stems.

The steamboat Saranic, No. 2, which had just rounded to at the wharf, had her upper works completely blown off, and several persons on her were severely injured, and some, it is probable, were drowned.

The wharf boat was likewise blown from her moorings, and almost irreparablp injured.

In order that you may judge of the tremendous violence of the storm, I will state that a cow was unceremoniously lifted off her feet on terra firma, and deposited in the top of a tree, 60 feet from the ground

☞ Application will be made to the next Legislature for a law to extend the jnrisdiction of Justice of the peace to $300 and upwards; and also fo reduce the fees of Sheriffs and County clerks,—Camden Democrat.

BRUTAL.—One of the most brutal and inhuman acts of which we ever heard, says the Carlisle Democrat, came to our knowledge a few days since, the particulars of which, as related to us by a gentleman conversant with the facts are chiefly these: A laboring man, lately in the employ of the Mount Holly Iron Works, in this county, lost a son, some 12 or 15 years of age, by death. The coffin being made according to the dimensions sent, was found, on placing therein the remains, to be entirely too small. Whereupon the inhuman father coolly took up the corpse, and carrying it to the woodpile, deliberately chopped off both the feet above the ankle. Such an act of monstrosity, in a commuity like this, is enough to curdle our heart's blood, and make us wonder to what manner of species we belong.

BOUNTY LAND CLAIMS.

BY a recent Act of Congress, Officers and Privates, whether of Regulars, Volunteers, Rangers or Militia, who served in the war of 1812, or in any of the Indian wars since 1790, as well as the war with Mexico; or in case of death, widows or minor children, of such officers and soldiers, are entitled, as follows: Those who served nine months, to 160 acres of land: those who served four months, to 80 acres; those who served one month to 40 acres. These claims will be promptly attended to for a proper compensation, by the subscriber, residing in Plainfield.

THE NEW JERSEY

HORSE POWER

Manufacturing Company.

HAVING improved, strengthened and perfected A. D. CRANE'S Patent Horse Power, are now prepared to furnish the same to all who may want.

This Power consists of an endless floor running over a series of pulleys, connected by cranks, without a rack or cog wheel about it: none being required from the fact, that the weight of the horse on the floor or platform causes sufficient adhesion between it and the pulleys to transmit all the power he is able to give. Also by this arrangement the chain is freed from the draught or strain (which cannot be avoided in any other Stall Power.) except, what is reqired to pass the floor around. The requisite speed is obtained direct from the machine thereby avoiding a great amount of friction and wear, and lessening the liability to get out of order. They run so easily as to require less than an inch elevation to the foot. A self acting brake is attached by which the motion is kept regular and uniform even when the work is unsteady and irregular.

From the above description it is evident that this is the most simple and efficient Power known.

They are highly recommended by those who have used them, for driving Circular Saws, Lathes, Drilling Machines, Threshers, Grist Mills, Pumps, &c.

The Company have certificates to prove the above and also to show that the Two Horse Power will grind 40 bushels of Corn to Meal (with Platt's Patent Mill,) in a day of ten hours, making it an invaluable Power for the Southern planter as well as others.

It has taken Silver Medals at the different Fairs where exhibited, and the only one given to Horse Powers by the American Institute last fall.

They also furnish Threshers of the most approved construction.

Price of Single Power with Belt, $75; Double do. with Belt, $110; Thresher and Separator, $35.

HERNIA.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.—This disorder, of very frequennt occurrence, may be considered as arising through weakness of the abdominal walls, inducing an enlargement in the natural openings formed therein for the transmission of blood and other vessels; such openings being enlarged, permit the escape of bowels or other viscera of the abdomen, devolving hernial swellings or rupture, which most generally occur outwardly, as at the navel, groins and thighs.

The complaint is likely to happen at birth, and therefore should be carefully looked for by those having the charge of children, that it may be arrested and cured promptly. It also occurs at any period of life, to either sex, without regard to the condition or mode of living, and when found, should be attended to without delay—the final penalty being death, and that may be induced through strangulation at any momennt.

RUPTURES, are always to be treated with the surgical instruments known as Trusses and Supporters, and these require to be skillfully applied. With this view, the HULL'S TRUSS OFFICE, now established some thirty years, has under the various managers, presented to the public both male and female attendants to apply its instruments directly to the persons, which is preferable in all cases, and has also made improvement at different times, showing that advancement which study and practice only yield toward the relief of this malady.

With much pleasure the fact is now published, that recent improvements BUTLER'S TRUSS PADS have been made, and sufficiently tested upon numerous cases to warrant, through the cures already affected, their submission to the public, as being in adaptation and efficiency superior to any heretofore made known.

These improvements, recently patented, are now being applied at this office, 4 Vesey street, in cases of rupture, gravitation of the bowels, prolapsus uteri, prolapsus ani and piles.

The public may rely upon that care being made in their application, which will most likely tend to the final cure of the several complaints.

Hull's Truss Office, 4 Vesey street. Astor House, opposite St. Paul's Church, New-York.

FRED'K M BUTLER, Proprietor.

N. B.—The ladies' department is attended by a female qualified to fit the instruments, having so attended this office for many years.

Children trussed when only two weeks old, and invariably cured. [145is.

MECHANICAL MEDICINE.

Dr. Banning, formerly of this city, asks to announce that he has returned to 341 Broadway; for consultation and management of weakneses of the vocal, pulmonary, digestive, nervous, spinal and female systems; and also of the drooping, languor and physical deformities, which are so destructive of both health and beauty at the present day.

As these and kindred maladies are usually the result of a violation of the laws of physical organization, he will treat them chiefly by those exercises, mechanical appliances and reformatory habits of body, in conjunction with hydropathy galvanism and other discoveries of the day, which, united with the cooperative efforts of the subject, are calculated to relieve and restore the energies of the suffering and neglected organs.

Having spent several years in traveling for investigation and practical experiment on the subject, he has, at length, greatly improved and multiplied his surgical and mechanical appliances for the purpose. In addition to his new supports for female and spinal weaknesses, are some combining the properties of a universal hernial truss and an effective general support, with which he challenges cases of general debility, constipation, piles and prolapsus, ani, lencorrhea, prolapsus uteri and every variety of hernia.

The distinctive peculiarity of these devices is, that they do not weaken or restrain the motions or growth of the suffering parts, but act imitatively and concordantly with the mathematical genius of the body's forces. Hence, by a most comfortable and gentle pressure, they at once give great support and render the oppressed system eligible to its own restoration.

Feeble invalids coming from a distance will command prompt and faithful attention.

For more definite information, see his revised edition of "Animal Mechanics," and also his circular, which will be sent gratuitously when requested.

His improved body-braces, spinal supports and supporter trusses applied at his office (341 Broadway) and to be had wholesale and retail- City and country physicians and druggists are invited to call and examine Office hours from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. [121.

CHERRY PECTORAL:

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, ASTHMA, WHOOPING-COUGH AND CONSUMPTION.

The annals of medical science, affording as they do ample proof of the power and value of many medicinal agents, have furnished no examples to compare with the sultary effects produced by 'AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL."

The remarkable cures of diseases of the Lungs which have been realized by its use, attested as they are by many prominent professors and physicians in this and foreign lands, should encourage the afflicted to persevere with the strong assurance that the use of the "CHERRY PECTORAL" will relieve and ultimately cure them.

We present to the public unsolicited tsteimonials from some of the first men in our country, upon whose judgment and experience implicit confidence may be placed.

DR, PERKINS, President Vermont Med. College, one of the most learned and intelligent physicians in the country, considers it a "composition of rare excellencies for the cure of that formidable disease, Consumption."

NORWICH April 26, 1846

DR. J. C. Ayer—Dear Sir:—Agreeable to the request of your agent, we will cheerfully state what we have known of the effects of your CHERRY PECTORAL, and they have been astonishing indeed. Mrs. Betsy Streeter had been afflicted with a severe and relentless cough, which reduced her very low; so low that little hope could be entertained of her recovery. Numerous remedies had been tried without effect before the CHERRY PECTORAL And that has cured her. George Watkinson Esq., had to our knowledge ben afflicted with Asthma, for eleven years, and grown yearly worse, until the CHERRY PECTORAL has now removed the disease and he is as free from any of its symptons as we are. The Rev. Mark Dane had been so severely attacked with the Bronchitis, as to disable him from his duties, and nothing had afforded him relief until I (Mr. Thorning) carried him a bottle of your PECTORAL, which cured him at once, and he now officiates as usual in his place.

These are three of the cases in which we have known it succesful, but never to fail. We have great pleasure in certifying to these facts; and are, respected sir, your humble servants.

REV. DAVID THORRING.
HON. JOSEPH BATTLES.

Among the distinguished authorities who have given their names to recommend CHERRY PECTORAL, as the best remedy that is known for the Affections of the Langs, are "The Loudon Lancet," "Canadian Journal of Medical Science," "Boston Medical and Surgical Journal," "Charleston (S. C.) Medical Review," "New Jersey Medical Reporter," Prof. WEBSTER, Harvard College, Prof. BARTLETT, Transylvania University of Medicine, President PERKINS, Vermont Medical College, Dr. VALENTINE MOTT, New York City, PARKER CLEVELAND, Bowdoin College, Prof. BUTTERFIELD, Willoughby College, Ohio, Prof. BRAITHWAITE, Leeds (Eng.) Medical School, Sir RICHARD KANE, Queen's College, Ireland, Prof. Rosenbaum, Leipsic.

The public have but to know the virtues and astonishing success of the "CHERRY PECTORAL," in curing diseases of the Lungs, when they will feel secure from these dangers, whenever this remedy can be obtained.

BLAKE'S PATENT

FIRE PROOF PAINT.

THE original and only genuine article, that can be obtained, without subjecting the purchaser to a prosecution for an infringement of my Patent. It has not yet been two year since the first counterfeit, was got up, but in that short time has proved itself, entirely worthless, as will be seen by the statement of more than twenty of the most respectable inhabitants of Sharon Ohio where mine as well as the Counterfeits are made. They say that we have examined recently, a house that was painted, with

Blake's Patent Fire Proof Paint,

SIX YEARS since (as an experiment) and now find the coating as hard as slate or stone. The action of the weather having no effect than to indurate and harden the substance. We will farther state that it has been such a complete failure in all the other kinds of stuff got up, and sold here, called Fire Proof paint (except Blakes) that his only is considered worth useing.

(Signed) Barnabus Crane and 20 others.

Hon. Daniel Webster has recently examined the patent and at the close of his report says, "I have no doubt whatever, but Mr Blake's Patent is good and valid. [104.

MARRIAGE:

WHY SO OFTEN UNHAPPY.

THE CAUSES AND THE REMEDY!

MANY and many a wife endures years of bodily suffering and of mental anguish, prostrate and helpless, embittering her life, that of her husband, and hazarding the future welfare of her children, arising from causes which, if known, would have spared the suffering, the anguish to the wife, and to the husband embarrassments and pecuniary difficulties having their origin in the mind being weighed down and harassed in consequence of the sickness of the companion of his bosom.

How important that the causes should be known to every wife, to every husband, that the dreadful and harrowing consequences to the health and happiness of both may be avoided! Life is too short and health too precious to admit any portion of the one to be spent without the full enjoyment of the other. The timely possession of a little work entitled as follows has been the means of saving the health and the life of thousands, as over copies have been sold since the first edition was issued.

The author has been induced to advertise it by the urgent and pressing request of those who have been indebted to its publication for all they hold dear (that all may have an opportunity of obtaining it), and who have favored him with thousands of letters of encomium, some of which are annexed to the advertisement.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

Twentieth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, $1.00.

THIS WORK IS INTENDED ESPECIALLY FOR THE MARRIED, or those contemplating marriage, as it discloses important secrets which should be known to them particularly.

Here, every female—the wife, the mother—the one either budding into womanhood, or the one in the decline of years, in whom nature contemplates an important change—can discover the causes, symptoms, and the most efficient remedies and most certain mode of cure, in every complaint to which her sex is subject.

The revelations contained in its pages have proved a blessing to thousands, as the innumerable letters received by the author (which he is permitted by the writers to publish) will attest.

SICKLY AND UNHAPPY WIVES.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Dayton, O.

"DAYTON, May 1, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU—My Dear Sir: 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion,' for which I enclosed one dollar to your address, came safely to hand. I would not have troubled you with these few lines, but that I am impelled by a sense of gratitude, for myself and wife, to give utterance to our sincere and heartfelt emotions.

"My wife has been perceptibly sinking for some three years or more, in consequence of her great anguish and suffering some months before and during confinement; every successive one more and more debilitated and prostrated her, putting her life in imminent danger, and which was, on the last occasion, despaired of. I supposed that this state of things was inevitable, and resigned myself to meet the worst. At this time (now about two months) I heard your book highly spoken of, as containing some matters reaching my case. On its receipt and perusal, I can not express to you the relief it afforded my distressed mind and the joy its pages imparted to my wife, on learning that the great discovery of M. M. Desomeaux provided a remedy. It opened a prospect to me which I little conceived was possible. No pecuniary consideration can ever repay the obligations I am under to you for having been the means of imparting to us the matters contained in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' But for this, ere another year would have passed over my head, in all human probability my wife would have been in her grave, and my children left motherless."

Extract from a Letter.

Competence and Health.

"LANCASTER, PA., Oct. 24, 1847.

"MY DEAR SIR: I know you will have the kindness to bear with me in encroaching upon your time, while I acknowledge (in behalf of myself and wife) the obligations we feel ourselves under to you in having made known certain matters, contained in your most invaluable 'Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' It has been worth its weight in gold to me. If I express myself rather warmly, you will see that I can not do so too warmly, when I inform you of the extent to which I have, through it, been benefited. I will state my situation when I obtained your book through the merest curiosity I look upon it as one of the most fortunate events of my life. I had been married some ten years, and was the father of seven children. I was long struggling unceasingly, to the end that I might gain a moderate competency, but the results of my utmost exertions at the end left me about where I was at the beginning of each year; and that only, with the most stinted economy, sufficing with barely the necessaries of life. Finally, this constant effort was beginning to have its effect upon my health: I felt less capable to endure its continuance, while I felt the necessity of perseverance.

"This constant, unceasing struggle on my part was imperative, in consequence of the prostrated condition of my wife (with occasional intermission) for six years, much of the time confined to her bed, and of course incapable of taking the charge and management of household affairs. Her condition arose from causes of which I was ignorant. Oh! what would I have given had I the six years to live over again! What would my wife have given to have been spared the long days and still longer nights prostrate on a bed of sickness!—all of which would have been avoided, had I then seen a copy of 'THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION.'"

From a Physician.

DANGEROUS DELIVERIES,

OBSTRUCTIONS, IRREGULARITIES, &C.

How many are suffering from obstruction or irregularities peculiar to the female system, which undermine their health, the effects of which they are ignorant, and for which their delicacy forbids seeking medical advice! How many suffer from prolapsus uteri (falling of the womb), or from fluor-albus (weakness, debility, &c., &c)! How many are in constant agony for many months preceding confinement! How many have difficult if not dangerous deliveries, and whose lives are jeoparded during such time, will find in its pages the means of prevention, amelioration, and relief!

Extract from a Letter.

To those just Married.—"Had I known!"

"PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU: Had I known of the im portant matters treated of in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion' some years ago. how much misery I might have escaped! I have suffered years from causes which you point out in your book, without knowing what to do. I obtained a copy, and found my case treated of. I trust every female will avail herself of the information contained in its pages."

Letters are daily received of this character, unnecessary to present.

To those yet unmarried, but contemplating marriage, or perhaps hesitating as to the propriety of incurring the responsibilities attendant upon it, the importance of being possessed of the revelations contained in these pages, so intimately involving their future happiness, can not be appreciated.

It is, of course, impracticable to convey more fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage; neither is it necessary, since it is every one's duty to become possessed of knowledge whereby the sufferings to which a wife, a mother, or a sister, may be subject, can be obviated.

☞ Copies will be sent by Mail free of Postage to the Purchaser.

☞ On the receipt of One Dollar, "THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION" is sent (mailed free) to any part of the United States. All letters must be post-paid (except those containing a remittance), and addressed to Dr. A. M. MAURICEAU, Box 1224, New York City. Publishing Office, No. 129 Liberty st., New York.

Over 20,000 Copies have been sent by MAIL within three months with perfect safety and certainty.

Booksellers and agents engaged in its sale, are making handsome competencies from the ready and extraordinary demand for it, and the extremely liberal terms afforded them.

Active local or travelling Agents, throughout the United States and Canadas, will be supplied on the same terms. Communications are required to be POST-PAID and addressed as above.

☞ CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against various catch-penies intended to be palmed off upon them initiating the title of the work as "The Married LADIES' Medical Companion," and various other titles. The title of the work is "THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION," BY Dr. A. M. Mauriceau. [105

FOR FEMALES AND MALES

Dr. Lazetti's Juno Cordial, or Protective Elixir.

This is the only actual remedy ever discovered for impetency, Genital Debility, Nocturnal Emissions, and all diseases occasioned by certain secret habits; and many of the nostrums recently recommended for the same complaints are worthless imitations which its unrivalled excellence. fame and popularity have brought into the market. The Medical Faculty of Europe and the United States are unanimous in their recommendations of the Juno Cordial and have not given their sanction in a single instance that has been authenticated, to any compound for the same purposes. The nature of the maladies relieved by the Juno Cordial are generally such as to leave the publication of certificates of cures out of the question, or the proprietor could produce a host of the most conclusive testimony to show that the great reputation that it enjoys was not accidentally obtained, but is firmly based upon its positive, and apparently miraculous virtues. In all directions are to be found the happy parents of healthy offspring, who would not have been so, but for this extraordinary preparption. And it is equally potent in the many diseases for which it is recommended. Objection has been naturally made to the price of the Juno Cordial, because the trash that has been thrown into the market in opposition to it is sold cheaper; but the fact is, the Cerdial cannot be afforded for less, and ought to be much dearer, as many of the ingredients which compose it are among the costliest things in nature; whereas the others are made up of cheap drugs, worth but little in money, and less in merit. We assure the reader that the utmost reliance may be placed on the Juno Cordial in the cure of the maladies mentioned above, and also those that follow, viz: Loss of Muscular Energy, Physical Lassitude and General Prostration, Irritability, and all Nervous Affections, Indigestion, Sluggishness of the Liver, Gleet, Lucorrhoea or Whites, and Flour Albus and every disease in any way connected with the disorder of the Procreative Functions—in all of which it will afford almost immediate relief, and, if used as directed, is almost certain to produce a positive and permanent cure. Persons about to marry, if conscious of any weakness or disability of a certain nature, should take this Cordial, as it will infallibly restore health and vigor in a brief period, and where want of offspring is a cause of regret, if recourse be had to it the most beneficial results may be anticipated with confidence. It is of priceless value to those without offspring. It has taken the precedence in Italy and will in all other countries where it may become known.

It also possesses the unrivalled qualities of curing incipient Consumption, and I have administered it with great success to patients who have sought our delightful climate for the restoration of their health and the result is that a medicine has been added to the catalogue for the cure of insipient consumption.

To spread wide the blessings of this medicine, I have appointed Messrs. Judson & Co., of the City of New York, in the United States of America, my sole Agents for its sale; and none can be genuine unless it comes through them, and their signature is on the weapper.

Swedenborgian Hymn.

ON THE DEATH OF AN INFANT.

PARENTS bereaved, your grief subdue,
Nor think your God severe;
Arise! to Heaven direct your view,
And words of comfort hear.

Your infant is by Love withdrawn
From sorrow, sin, and pain;
And now beholds the glorious dawn
Of Love's eternal reign.

Removed before that age mature
When man account must give,
His bright inheritance is sure;
With God his soul shall live.

Angels the welcome guest receive
To their affection given.
And train him up to know, believe.
And serve the God of Heaven.

Daily shall he in knowledge rise,
In beauteous stature grow;
Become, like angels, good and wise,
And with their rapture glow.

Then comfort take! your transient loss
Is his eternal gain;
Resigned to Jesus, bear your cross,
Nor his kind will arraign!

Chronicles of the Latter Days.

CHAPTER XIV.

Barnum the Humbug—The Lind Fever.

1. Howbeit the scribes, Pharisees and hypocrites of Gotham built a temple for the damsel to sing in, and the chief priests and rulers of the synagogues, and such as had forgetten God and wandered from the truth, and had itching ears flocked to hear her.

2. Howbeit they did not follow the damsel because they desired knowledge of the truth, to seek instruction and to turn from the evil of their ways, to become wise and follow after righteousness, but to have their ears tickled with pleasant sounds, to gratify their passions or increase in worldly gains.

3. And it came to pass that the tickets were sold at auction, and there was a great strife among the members of the synagogues, which should have the uppermost seats, for there were craftsmen whose god is gold, and each one said in his heart, "Behold, if I gain the chief seat my name will be noised about throughout all the land and my business will be advertised, and people will flock unto me, the sale of my wares will increase, and I shall get great gain.

4. So there were priests and rulers, lawyers and doctors, hatters, tailors, and all who traded in the wares of Babylon were seen bidding one against another.

5. And it came to pass that the chief seat was sold to a cunning craftsmen who maketh hats, for six hundred and twenty-five pieces of silver

6. Howbeit Judas sold Jesus for thirty pieces of silver, but this man, who hath more cunning than Judas, sold him for six-hundred and twenty-five pieces, whereby is shown the greedines of this generation after gold, beyond the greediness of those of ancient time.

7. And the multitudes flocked to hear the singing of the damsel, and men whose families suffered for food and raiment, and those who do not pay their honest debts, parted with their money for songs, so that the temple was crowded

8. And it came to pass that when the damsel had sung, the people shouted as though a God had spoken, for their heads were utterly turned; yea! they had no desire for righteousness and truth, but were caried away with sounds which only tickle the ear and the senses.

9. And it came to pass that when they had worshiped the damsel with shouts, and with stamping their feet and clapping their hands, and waving their handkerchiefs and acting like mad men, they called for Barnum whose surname is Humbug.

10. And Barnum appeared before them and made a speech.

11, Howbeit Barnum had talked with the damsel saying, "I pray thee now hearken to me, for I know what is in this people; then give I pray thee the profits of the first night to charitable objects, for behold the scribes are bribed with free tickets and with money and are ready to do my will.

12. And I will command them to print in all their papers and spread abroad throughout all the land that thou art liberal above all that was ever heard of, giving to the poor and needy, the sick and afflicted, and this will bring us great gain.

13. Howbeit the people who run after us care not for the poor, for the starving widow is daily turned empty from their door, and half famished orphans who have no homes are compelled by hunger to steal their food in the streets of Gotham, and to sleep in boxes and barrels, or wherever they can find a partial shelter from the storm.

14. No, the people that follow us care not for the poor, their heart is closed against charity, but they are ashamed to be seen running after empty sounds, spending their time for nought and their money for that which profiteth not; therefore I pray thee give the profit of the first night for charitable purposes, and when the scribes whom I have bribed noise abroad thy liberality, those who are ashamed to be seen spending their money for idle sounds and those who have some little conscience against enriching us will have an excuse.

15. And behold they will say, "We can now follow after Humbug and the damsel, for behold she giveth liberally to the poor."

16. And when Barnum had finished his speech to the damsel in private, she answered him saying, "Be it even as thou hast said."

17. So when the people shouted for Barnum, after that they had worshiped the damsel, he came upon the stage and made a speech to the people, for behold he was puffed up with humbug and deception, but he knew the people, were too much blinded by excitement to know it.

18. So he told them of the liberality of the damsel, and how she would give seven thousand pieces of silver, all the gains of that evening to charitable objects; the people all shouted aloud for they could not see the craft that was concealed in the speech of Humbug.

19. So the scribes wrote and the cunning craftsman who work at the case and the press, printed the praises of the damsel, and of her liberality, and the runners ran with it through the city of Gotham and the people read it in their houses, and in their stores, and their offices and workshops and in the streets, and nothing was heard of but the liberality of the singer. Howbeit she gave her gifts only to to those who shouted her praises and excited the people to run after her and pour out their treasures at her feet.

20. So it came to pass as Humbug had declared that those who were ashamed to be seen squandering their money for sounds, and many who had a principle about spending thousands on Humbug, had and excuse and said in their hearts, "Now we can run after vanity and none will reproach us, for he that giveth to Barnum giveth to the poor, and he who giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord, so we can run after vanity, have our ears tickled, and escape the reproofs of the wise, and lay up treasures in heaven without bearing the cross."

21. So the people thronged Barnum and the damsel, and ten pieces of silver were poured upon them in return for each one they had given away.

Jesus and his pretended followers.

A Church rightly named. The pews in Calvery Church, N. York, were lately sold at auction for forty thousand dollars; and it is said, that the society in addition to a salery of five thousand dollars per year, has given its Rector fifteen thousand dollars, furnished a parsonage house, and insured his life to the amount of ten thousand dollars!

This church is rightly named; it was at Mt. Calvary that the body of Christ was crucified; and at this New York Calvary, this mountain of pride and sin, he is "crusified afresh, and put to open shame." Just think of the poor carpenter's Son with a little band of humble fisherman, going up and down the world doing good, without where to lay his head, preaching from fishing boats, among the poor, the sick and afflicted, gathering grain and rubbing it out of the chaff with his hands to appease his hunger, eating with the poor, tarrying a night with those most despised of the world, without popularity, despised, hated, reviled, persecuted; without salery, asking none, yet continuing to do good even to his enemies, and in his last breath asking forgiveness for those who nailed him to the tree,—just think of him and his humble course through poverty and abuse, and then think of the Right Rev. Dr. Hawks of New York, the professed disciple of this lowly master, in his forty thousand dollar church with a present of fifteen thousand dollars in his pocket and a yearly salary of five thousand more! with his life insured at a gambling house to the amount of ten thousand, that should he die, his family may live in idleness and not starve to death in the bosom of his beloved church. Verily! if this be the religion of Jesus, it has wonderfully changed since first preached on the mountains and by the sea side, eighteen hundred years ago!

A forty thousand dollar church built with money gained by selling rum, by huckling, cheating, lying, grinding the face of the poor, robbing the widows and fatherless, letting buildings for theatres, grogshops and brothels! A fifteen thousand dollar present and a five thousand dollar salery, the money gained by the same means! Now who is there in all this broad nation that does not know that such a religion must be a curse and nothing else than a curse to all concerned? Who has not sense enough to see that this is as directly opposite to the religion of Jesus as darkness is to light? and yet my friends, whether you will believe it or not, this church is no worse at heart than nearly all other churches in the land; but give them the means, and small is the number of such as would not wander just as far from the truth and be just as ready to crucify Christ afresh and put him to open shame.

Is it surprising that there are infidels in the world and that the number increases while the professed followers of the meek and lowly Jesus manifest such monstrous hypocracy?

Beauties of State-Churchism.

Within the last three years, the head of the English Church, the Archbishop of Canterbury, has died, and left behind him a fortune of 100,000*l*, which he has beqeuathed to his rich relatives, and not a penny to the poor! Is it possible that the head of this English Church believed in the doctrines which he taught? The twenty five State Bishops of England divide among them annually, as shown by a late Parliamentary return, the sum of One Hundred and Eighty Thousand Pounds sterling! The sums which they leave behind them at their deaths are enormous. From another Parliamentary return, it is proved, as stated in the House of Commons, that 11 Irish State Bishops left behind them amassed wealth to the amount of 1,875,000*l* accumulated within a period of from 40 to 50 years. The following is the list extracted from the Parliamentary return:—Probates of wills of Irish Bishops—Stopford, Bishop of Cork, 25,000*l*; Percy, Bishop of Dromore, 40,000*l*; Cleaver, Bishop of Ferns, 50,000*l*; Bernard, Bishop of Limerick, 60,000*l*; Knox, Bishop af Killaloe, 100,000*l*; Fowler, Bishop of Dublin, 150,000*l*; Beresford, Bishop of Tuam, 250,000*l*; Hawkins, Bishop of Raphoe, 250,000*l*; Stuart, Bishop of Armagh, 300,000*l*; Porter, Bishop of Clogher, 250,000*l*; Agar Bishop of Cashel, 400,000*l*; making a total of 1,875,000*l*. How great, inded, must have been the privations of the Apostolic Bishop of Cashel, through which he could save 400,000*l* in a single life, from the tribute levied on the poorest, worst fed, and worst clad of all nations on the face of the earth? How much charity and Christian virtue must the prelates of Dublin, Tuam, Armagh, and Clogher have exercised, to enabled, them to hoard up fortunes of from 250,000*l* to 300,000*l* a piece. And these are the Bishops of the Church of Ireland, for which we are now keeping up an army in that country of 34,000 soldiers, besides an army of police to mount guard over its safety.—London Patriot.

☞ There is great emigration to Texas; about 500 per week have arrived at Galveston, and it is estimated that 25,000 have arrived during the present season, many bringing large numbers of slaves.

The Profession of Agriculture.

The great business of our country is Agriculture. Because it feeds us, and furnishes the materials for our clothing; it gives employment to five sixths of our populotion; it is the primary source of our individual and national wealth; it is the nursing mother of manufactures and commerce; it is essential to national independence. Agriculture is worthy the most liberal patronage of our governments, State and National; it ought to be enlightened by a better (and through) education of the Agricultural class. Agriculture, manufactures, and commerce, stand together; like pillars in a cluster, the largest in the centre, and the largest is Agriculture. We live in a country of small farms; a country in which men cultivate, with their own hands, their few simple acres; drawing not only their subsistence, but also their spirit of independence, and manly freedom from the ground they plow. They are at once its owners, its cultivators, and its defenders. And whatever else may be undervalued, or overlooked, let us never forget that the cultivation of the earth is the most important labor of man. Man, without the cultivation of the earth, is, in all countries, a savage. When tillage begins, either arts follow. The farmers, therefere, are the founders of human civilization. If there lives the man who may eat his bread with a conscience at peace, it is the man who has brought that bread out of the earth by his own honest industry. The profession of Agriculture brings with it none of those agitating passions which are fatal to peace, or to the enjoyment even of the common blessings of life; it presents few tempations to vicious indulgence; it is favorable to health and to long life; to habits of industry and frugality; to temperance and self-government; to the cultivation of the domestic virtues; and to the calm and delicious enjoyments of domestic plesures in all their purity and fulness!—Clarke's Am. lib.

Railroad Telegraph.

We have been informed by Mr. Post, engineer of the N. Y. and Erie Railroad, that a line of wire for an exclusive telegraph of the railroad, has been laid down. This is a measure which he reccommended two years ago. This is a right worthy measure, and one which we have advocated, about the same time, nearly. Every railroad in our land should have an exclusive telegraph, more especially those who have no more than a single extended track each. We rejoice to know that with our go-ahead people the telegraph has been signally succesfully, but we are no more than in the infancy of telegraphing. We learn that one of our Telegraph Companies, whose wires extend between New York Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington, with stations at all the intermediate places of any consequence, have increased their facilities for the prompt transaction of business, and have also made arrangements by which persons travelling through the places of any of the Telegraph Way Stations, can telegraph to any other place along the line, without having to leave the cars. A boy will pass through the cars at each station, and receive the dispatches, so that it will only be necessary for travellers to have their dispathes written before the cars stop, to secure their being safely sent to the desired place.—Sci. American.

General Laws.

The N. J. papers contain a large number of notices of applications to The Legislature for the charter of new Banks, the re-charter of old Banks the incorporations of Rail Road, and Plank road Companies, &c. &c. We trust that every one of these Special Laws will be refused, and that General Laws will be passed under which all our citizens will fare alike. The General Banking Law passed last year needs alteration, so as to make it practicable, and we hope the Legislature will make the necessary changes in the law, and that every Banking Co. in the State wil be compelled to organize under this law or close up its affairs.

The people of New Jersey expect the passage of General Rail Road and Plank Road Laws. We hope a democratic House will pass such laws, and if the Whigs in the Senate chose to defeat them, let them do so. The Democratic party has promised General instead of Special Laws and the people will insist upon the fulfillment of these promises.—N. B. Times.

Discovery of a Third Ring to Saturn.

We learn from the "Boston Traveller," that on Friday night, the existence of a third ring around this Planet, which had been for some time suspected, was ascertained by the astronomers at Cambridge. It is interior to the two others, and therefore its distance from the body of Saturn must be small.

Common School Convention.

We propose to the friends of Common Schools, free for all children to hold a State Convention in Trenton, early in January. Such a meeting will be of essential service in carrying out the proposed system of free schools. Who will second the motion? What County or Town will be the first to elect delegates to the first Free School Convention?

Brethren of the Press! You who are in favor of educating all children—poor as well as the rich, will you not favor this movement? Depend upon it, it will put a ball in motion which will roll on until New Jersey shall be regarded as the model State in the work of Educational Reform.—N. B. Times.

A Mammouth Globe.

A curious exhibition is in course of preparation for the World's Fair, by Mr. Wyld, M. P., the eminent map engraver. He is constructing a huge globe, of 56 feet in diameter, which will be provided with a convenient mode of ingress and egress; the different countries of the world will be represented upon the inner, and not upon the outer surface, and the interior will be fitted up with galleries and staircases, so as to enable visitors to make a tour of the World, and visit each of the countries whose industry or productions will be displayed in the Great Exhibition.—*Sct. Temperance Address.

The Rev. Lewis Bond will deliver an address before the "Sons of Temperance" at their Division Room on Saturday Evening, Dec. 14. at 7 o'clock. ☞ The public are respectfully invited to attend.

☞ A full attendance of the members is requested at 6 1-2 o'clock.

☞ This number of our paper completes the second year of its existence. Commenced under unfavorable circumstances, a paper being already established in our village, with some twenty years experience, could, it was stated to us, barely manage to exist. As the result has proven, it was more for the want of stamina, or appreciation of the wants of the public and therefore of its own proper value, than of the public neglect. A newspaper to succeed in the present age requires something more than a mere mechanical existence, it must have vitality; it must be awake to the world around it, leading on the masses to a just appreciation of their own rights and duties, ever advocating liberty, diffusing intelligence and commending to virtue; thus and thus only shall it reap its own proper reward.

Notwithstanding the sad prognostications that were held out to us, and despite of all adverse circumstances, of the want of experience, we commenced the publication of the Gazette. We have so far succeeded; succeeded far beyond our most sanguine expectations; not only in having established the Gazette on a permanent basis, by the advocacy of the interests of our fellow citizens in a fearless and independent manner, but we have imparted somewhat of vitality to our honorable cotemporary; and trust yet, with the approbation of our fellow citizens and the patronage of an appreciating public, to advance on the road of prosperity until the Gazette, and we trust also our neighbor "The Union," from a little wholesome competition, shall be refered to with pride as model public journals, receiving their approbation for having promoted the cause of morality and virtue, and as instruments not to be despised, for promoting the liberty, equal rights, intelligence and happiness of our fellow man.

An independent journal, free from the corruption of political cliques and the dictation of party demagogues, having nothing but its own interest, as that interest is connected with the public welfare, to promote, with the approbation and liberal support of independent thinking freemen, is prepared to do an incalculable amount of public good. On the other hand, where a public journal is wedded to the interests of party, the prejudices fanaticism and bigotry of sects, catering from these selfish motives to the ignorance, superstition and vices of the age, it is well prepared to do a vast amount of evil.

It has ever been our endeavor to promote the public good, as being the only permanent means to promote our own, by the advocacy of a liberal system of government, National and State, by the enactment of such general laws, and such only, as shall best promote the equal rights, prosperity and happiness of all; the strenuous advocates of a liberal system of Common School Education, as the most efficient and certain guarantee of the advance and stability of republican principles, and the enlightenment and happines of the human race.

With this allusion to the past and present course of the Gazette, we would simply add that it is our determination to continue on in the advocacy of whatever we conceive will best promote these ends, independent of all influences other than those we conscientiously believe will best promote these objects, trusting that the intelligence, virtue, liberal and tolerant spirit we shall awaken shall be sufficient to promote the happiness and prosperity of us all, and that out of this we shall be abundantly rewarded for our labors.

Being conscious of no other desire than the promotion of the general welfare, our own being so intimately connected therewith, we shall not be detered by any trifling obstacle or the machinations of the evil disposed from the accomplishment of our object; whenever we cease to prosper by such a course, we shall aspire to that means for a livelihood which shall so support us; the equally honorable and independent profession of boot black or wood sawyer to their majesties the people being always open to those who have independence and philosophy sufficient to adopt them.

We had determined at the outset to succeed, and we have succeeded; we are still determined unitedly with and by the approbation of our fellow citizens to prosper, and we shall prosper.

Concert.

A grand concert will be given at Laing's Hall this Thursday, (Thanksgiving day evening) by Mr. M. Colburn of New York—the American Tenor singer. The following are the opinions of the New-York Presss.

Oratorio of David.—This Oratorio was splendidly performed last evening at the Tabernacle. Mr. M. Colburn who sang the part of David, won "golden opinions." He has a powerful voice with a fine compass, and gives the most effective expression to the music. We hope to be able to give to our readers in a few days, a full criticism of this noble performance.

Mr. Colburn sustained the tenor part in the Oratorio of David for 40 nights in Boston. He can whisper soft like the low murmur of woods, or he can thunder in tones to satisfy the most fastidious. In many things he is superior to Mr. Braham. His chromatic passages are more sure and his utterance more powerful. He has given instruction to over 2000 pupils.

☞ Of the News from Europe there is nothing to be said, except that it is of the same sort as the advices by the Arctic. The submission of Prussia to Austria is fully confirmed, while there is nothing to show that either people or army design any serious resistance to that consummation. We expect soon to hear that order reigns triumphant in both Heese Cassel and Schleswig-Holstein. Thus let Germany sink into that congenial repose in which classical learning, metaphysics, sentimentally, Bavarian beer and tobacco smoke can be cultivated with equal felicity!—Tribune.

The People—Their Rights and Duties.

When we speak of the people we mean more particularly those who get their bread by the sweat of their brow. Not alone those who till the soil but those who build our houses, churches, railroads and canals; those who manufacture our locomotive engines and loco-foco matches; those who build our ships and those by whose labor they are freighted and sailed; those who manufacture our cloth and those who make it into garments to cover our bodies; in fact all those by whatever name or occupation who by their labor create the wealth of the world, and produce the necessaries, comforts and luxuries of civilized life. These are they whom we more particularly designate The People. These are they to whom we would apply and to whose condition the oft quoted passage of Scripture is so particularly appropriate, "The laborer is worthy of his hire."

They, The People have one common interest, an interest arising out of their situation as the producers, as the creators of wealth, and all its manifold comforts and enjoyments, that should unite them in one common effort for the general good, for their general good. In this lies their individual as well as their united associate prosperity and happiness.

In a republican government The People have the Power, (they have it everywhere did they but know—appreciate—it,) it is therefore their duty to use it; to use it as becomes men who have power,—for the enfranchisement, instruction and elevation of the People, for the political and social regeneration of the human race.

Every man who has these objects at heart; every man who would accomplish this object for himself and for his family, can in no way so easily, so effectually, and so permanently do this as by uniting with his fellow laborer in accomplishing it for all.

By the union of Tyrants is tyranny sustained—(whether that tyranny be in a professed republic or in an acknowledged absolute monarchy, tyranny is none the less tyranny in the one than in the other, neither is it any the less dangerous,)–not by a union of physical power, or even yet by the united physical force of their allies, the priests and aristocracy of the land;—such a power would be and is but nought;--but by an assumption of superiority, by the assumption that they possess the delegated authority and grace of God do they claim to be established as His vicegerents on earth.

Thus by the acquiescence of man, or rather through that blind idolatry and ignorauce which this monstrous assumption of power has made it their interest to keep him in, have they been enabled to rule over him with a rod of iron, subjecting him to the most degrading bondage, crushing with the malignity of Demons, his spirit to the earth. It is by such a union, by a union of such interests that man has been made the Slave of his fellow man; robbed of the reward of his labor; ignominiously deprived of his birthright to a portion of the soil and of his political, religious and secular rights and privileges that corrupt and designing men might in splendor and idleness rule over him. Therefore we again urge that it is by the union of interests of those who are oppressed and of those who believe in man's equality of rights and privileges, that those rights and privileges can alone be sustained.

Freedom is the birthright of all; Labor also is equally the birthright of all men; both are the conditions on which the perfection of their physical, political and social happiness depends.

Without Liberty the laborer can not enjoy the the full degree of happiness which his nature is susceptible of and which he was designed by God to attain. Without labor, neither can he who is free enjoy that full measure of happiness which these God endowed conditions of existence make him fully susceptible of; therefore he who would enjoy the full amount of happiness, political, social and physical, which his nature is fully capable of and which God designed and has endowed him for, he must make use of the means which God has given for their attainment.

The history of all nations conclusively proves that unless these means are made use of—enjoyed and appreciated by all—there is no such thing as continued national or individual prosperity and happiness—these are the conditions alone upon which it can be enjoyed; when will men be wise enough to earnestly lay hold of these blessings which lie immediately in reach of all? How preposterously absurd to attempt to evade the conditions which the laws of nature and nature's God have so immutably fixed as the condition of their enjoyment.

If we revert back to the history of the past, to ancient Rome, and Greece, to their rise and fall, and so down through the rise and fall and present condition of the nations of the earth, do they emphatically teach and conclusively prove that as these conditions have been complied with and fulfilled have they enjoyed that true and permanent political and social prosperity and happiness which has been the admiration of all, and which has ever been the desire of the wise and good in all ages, that the nations of the earth might attain?

We think it must be the unbiassed conclusion of every reflecting mind, which makes such investigation, that as the aforesaid conditions, Liberty and Labor, have been universally, or where they have been most universally complied with, that that nation or people have in the greater degree enjoyed, and in proportion to their compliance, greater than any other, political and social prosperity, power and happiness.

If this be so, if a nation is powerful, prosperous and happy in proportion to the enjoyment of Liberty and intelligence by the mass and in proportion to the participation of all in the Labor which is necessary to accomplish and sustain it, then is it the duty of all by every honest effort to aid in accomplishing so desirable a result.

Therefore do we spread before you, in the humble attempt to aid this all important and benifient design of the Creator, these our thoughts on the subject, that it may induce others to think, and if thinking concludes it plausible, and worthy, that they will give it their serious attention and aid. This gentle reader is our design, our object; first, to induce you to think, and when you have given the subject proper attention and believe it correct and worthy of accomplishment that you will lend it your most potent and efficient aid. Thus and thus only can great ends be accomplished.

As before stated, in a republican government The People have the Power. All political power is inherent in the People. "Man is endowed by his Creator with certain inalienable rights; among which are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of happiness." A necessary condition of Liberty and happiness is Equal Rights. These therefore are also inalienable; for this purpose, for the guarantee of Liberty and Equal Rights, that happiness might be enjoyed, was governments instituted among men; for this object, was this government, more particularly than any which has preceded it, established. Therefore is it the duty of all men, and more particularly all those under this, our, your and my government,—it being so proclaimed, and for such a government were the protection and blessing of heaven invoked, by those who pledged their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor to establish it—to use the strength of their minds and the power of their right arm and every other means which God has given for its lawful attainment, that the benificent purpose of the Almighty, the prosperity and happiness of man may be here and hereafter accomplished.

That the sequence may be more clearly perceived it is necessary that the reader should follow out for himself the legitimate conclusion of Liberty and Labor; trace them through history and compare them with his own experience; thus shall he be convinced of their truth, their necessity to the accomplishment of man's welfare and happiness. We would also that he would view, with the whole powers of his mind, and follow out to its legitimate result and conclusion, the object for which governments are established, and particularly of that of these United States; then will he be better prepared to aid us, to aid himself and his fellow man in securing, for their benefit the legitimate objects of its creation.

When the reader is prepared by such examination and consideration of the subject we would, if in accordance with his convictions, that he should consider and act in accordance therwith in putting in practice the following suggestion.

Whenever any political measure is brought before him for his decision, by his vote, let him give it that consideration which its importance demands; if upon such consideration he approve of it it is his duty, which no considerations, either for the attainment of personal power, pecuniary profit, or honor, should induce him to forego, to sanction it for the welfare and happiness of all; for therein as we have attempted to show, and as we believe and constantly teach and endeavor to practice, does the individual as well as general prosperity and happiness consist, and can only be made secure.

This is not only the true and benficial policy to pursue in regard to all polical measures, but also in regard to all others which have a bearing—and what so insignificant that does not—upon man as a member of society—as our equal in his God endowed rights; created by the same power, designed for the same happiness, the same glorious eternity.

This is particularly the case in regard to men as well as to measures; the question should always be put to the mind, "is he capable, is he honest;" is he a firm and consistent friend of those measures which will guarantee to all Liberty and equal rights? If he is, if his acts prove the consistency of his professions therewith, then is it the duty of all to give him their support. It matters not by what name his enemies or the partiality of friends may have bestowed upon him—he is a republican, a democratic republican, and deserves the countenance and support of every lover of liberty, of every good citizen.

On the other hand, no matter what his professions may be, no matter how high sounding and melifluous his titles, if his acts show that he despises labor, or those who from necessity and choice have adopted it for honorable purposes, or denies to the more humble his equal and inalienable rights, then is he a tyrant, an aristocrat, unworthy the support of his fellow man, and deserves their pity or contempt, as the case may be, of every friend and well wisher of the human race.

As the consideration of these subjects shall induce you to act kind reader, or as through ignorance you may act for the want of their due cosideration, will the result be to our country, to the welfare and happiness of the human race.

If you have made up your mind after due consideration, and believe from having thought on the subject, that man is entitled to equal political rights and privileges, and that it is your duty as one who claims and enjoys these priviliges, to assist him by all lawful means to acquire the same, then will Liberty triumph and equal rights and privileges be enjoyed by those whom God designed, endowed and made capable of such enjoyment; then will man walk erect in the likeness and image of his Maker. But if you, claiming these privileges for yourself, do not believe from such investigation or for the want of such investigation that he is so entitled, then do you renounce all claims to the fundamental basis of pure religion and true republicanism—"Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you do ye even so unto them"—and are a tyrant a knave or a fool, and would deservedly occupy the place and station of those whose privileges you usurp and monopolize.

Liberty is attained rather by individual exertion and concession than by the action of government, it is therefore the particular duty of all to act individually for its accomplishment. Let them therefore be true to themselves—true to the spirit of Liberty which God has personified in us, and no combination of tyrants shall be enabled to dispossess us of its glorious attributes, equal rights and equal privileges, until man shall fulfil his destiny by enjoying them, by being in the likeness and image of his Maker the Man upright which God created him.

Thus have we, without preconsideration, in as able a manner as we are capable of, in the limits we are circumscribed to, laid before you what we conceive to be the Rights and Duties of our feilow man: trusting that a due consideration of the subject will lead all to adopt it, or at least if it does not, if they are opposed, that they will give us something more worthy of our consideration.

Correspondence of the Newark Daily Advertiser.

Burlington, Nov. 30th.

A large and interesting meeting of the Burlington County Bible Society, was held in the Court House at Mt. Holly, Nov. 19th. The venerable John Griscom, LL. D., President of the Society, and one of the founders of the American Bible Society, held the chair. The presence of this venerated patriarch, so long the companion of education and christianity, as well as the great and important work already accomplished by the Society, and the instructive character of several of the addresses, seem to have rendered the meeting one of more than ordinary interest. It must have been affecting to the friends of Dr. G. to hear him apologizing for not having written out his opening remarks on account of his rapidly failing eye-sight, which seems, it is feared, about to leave him in total blindness; also, that the powers of good men should ever fail! Rev. Samuel Miller, so long the able and effieient corresponding secretary made the report of the managers, from which it appeared their colporteurs, in travelling their large and populous county, had visited 4,402 families; 502 of which were found living without the Sacred Scriptures. It was stated as a matter of congratulation, that a work so much needed, not having been attempted in an interval of more than 20 years before, had been in a good degree accomplished. Measures had also been taken to have the County Poor House, and County Prison provided with Bibles and Testaments. The Managers, in closing their report, say—"We felt bound to call to remembarnce with greatful hearts, the efficient aid received from the Rev George Sheldon, Agent of the American Bible Society, in the prosecution of thir efforts. The whole State of New Jersey will have lasting reason to remember his labors, as well as those of his predecessors, representing the same great institution."

Mr. Sheldon, who was present, made some remarks on the call there had evidently been for the work in hand; the commendable willingness of the people to coöperate in it; and also adverted to the numerous changes that had taken place in the world since the formation of the american Bible Society.

☞ This day, Thursday Dec. 12th, the Governor of New Jersey has designated and reccommended as a day of Public Thanksgiving.

California News.

The United States Mail steamship Georgia, arrived from Chagres via Havana, with the Pacific, mails and 330 passengers; 250 passengers were left at Havanna to go to New Orleans by the Ohio. The Georgia sailed from Chagres on the 26th inst., and left there the steamship Empire City, waiting for the specie. Two millions five hundred thousand dollars came down in the Panama.

The Empire City had 280 passengers. Among them is Mr. Gershom Frazee, of this place.

The Nothern and Panama were the only two steamers from San Francisco.

It rained incessantly while the Georgia was at Chagres, and the roads were uncommonly bad. Four vessels, two brigs and two schooners, names unknown, were ashore on the beach, to the north and west of Chagres harbor, three were a total loss, the others would be got off. The Georgia brought about a million of gold in the hands of passengers, and one hundred thousand on freight.

Among the passengers are Senators Downs, Foote and Gwin; also Gen. Herrera and his son.

The only item of California news given is the explosion of the steamer Sagamore at San Francisco, and the probable loss of some twenty-five lives and a great number of woundred. There is said to have been near one hundred passengers on board at the time of the accident.

Two passengors died on board the Georgia, from the effects of Californa dysentery.

The Cholera had appeared at San Francisco and was committing serious ravages.

CONGRESS—Monday.

The Senate referred the President's Message to appropriate Committees, passed one or two private bills, and went to dinner.

In the House, the Standing Committees were announced, and the Message referred. On the reference of that part relating to the Fugitive Slave Law, a debate arose on the novel subject of Slavery, in which Messrs. Giddings of Ohio and McClernand of Ill. participated.—Tribune.

THE NEW JERSEY
HORSE POWER
Manufacturing Company.

HAVING improved, strengthened and perfected A. D. CRANE'S Patent Horse Power, are now prepared to furnish the same to all who may want.

This Power consists of an endless floor running over a series of pulleys, connected by cranks, without a rack or cog wheel about it: none being required from the fact, that the weight of the horse on the floor or platform causes sufficient adhesion between it and the pulleys to transmit all the power he is able to give. Also by this arrangement the chain is freed from the draught or strain (which cannot be avoided in any other Stall Power) except what is reqired to pass the floor around. The requisite speed is obtained direct from the machine thereby avoiding a great amount of friction and wear, and lessening the liability to get out of order. They run so easily as to require less than an inch elevation to the foot. A self acting brake is attached by which the motion is kept regular and uniform even when the work is unsteady and irregular.

From the above description it is evident that this is the most simple and efficient Power known.

They are highly recommended by those who have used them, for driving Circular Saws, Lathes, Drilling Machines, Threshers, Grist Mills, Pumps, &c.

The Company have certificates to prove the above and also to show that the Two Horse Power will grind 40 bushels of Corn to Meal (with Platt's Patent Mill,) in a day of ten hours, making it an invaluable Power for the Southern planter as well as others.

It has taken Silver Medals at the different Fairs where exhibited, and the only one given to Horse Powers by the American Institute last fall.

They also furnish Threshers of the most approved construction.

Price of Single Power with Belt, $75; Double do. with Belt, $110: Thresher and Separator, $35.

HERNIA.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.—This disorder, of very frequennt occurrence, may be considered as arising through weakness of the abdominal walls, inducing an enlargement in the natural openings formed therein for the transmission of blood and other vessels: such openings being enlarged, permit the escape of bowels or other viscera of the abdomen, devolving hernial swellings or rupture, which most generally occur outwardly, as at the navel, groins and thighs.

The complaint is likely to happen at birth, and therefore should be carefully looked for by those having the charge of children, that it may be arrested and cured promptly. It also occurs at any period of life, to either sex, without regard to the condition or mode of living, and when found, should be attended to without delay—the final penalty being death, and that may be induced through strangulation at any momennt.

RUPTURES, are always to be treated with the surgical instruments known as Trusses and Supporters, and these require to be skillfully applied. With this view, the HULL'S TRUSS OFFICE, now established some thirty years, has under the various managers, presented to the public both male and female attendants to apply its instruments directly to the persons, which is preferable in all cases, and has also made improvement at different times, showing that advancement which study and practice only yield toward the relief of this malady.

With much pleasure the fact is now published, that recent improvements BUTLER'S TRUSS PADS have been made, and sufficiently tested upon numerous cases to warrant, through the cures already affected, their submission to the public, as being in adaptation and efficiency superior to any heretofore made known.

These improvements, recently patented, are now being applied at this office, 4 Vesey street, in cases of rupture, gravitation of the bowels, prolapsus uteri, prolapsus ani and piles.

The public may rely upon that care being made in their application, which will most likely tend to the final cure of the several complaints.

Hull's Truss Office, 4 Vesey street, Astor House, opposite St. Paul's Church, New-York.

FRED'K M BUTLER, Proprietor.

N. B.—The ladies' department is attended by a female qualified to fit the instruments, having so attended this office for many years.

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, ASTHMA, WHOOPING-COUGH AND CONSUMPTION.

The annals of medical science, affording as they do ample proof of the power and value of many medicinal agents, have furnished no examples to compare with the sultary effects produced by 'AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL."

The remarkable cures of diseases of the Lungs which have been realized by its use, attested as they are by many prominent professors and physicians in this and foreign lands, should encourage the afflicted to persevore with the strong assurance that the use of the "CHERRY PECTORAL" will relieve and ultimately cure them.

We present to the public unsolicited tsteimonials from some of the first men in our country, upon whose judgment and experience implicit confidence may be placed.

DR, PERKINS, President Vermont Med. College, one of the most learned and intelligent physicians in the country, considers it a "composition of rare excellencies for the cure of that formidable disease, Consumption."

NORWICH April 26, 1846

DR. J. C. Ayer—Dear Sir:—Agreeable to the request of your agent, we will cheerfully state what we have known of the effects of your CHERRY PECTORAL, and they have been astonishing indeed. Mrs. Betsy Streeter had been afflicted with a severe and relentless cough, which reduced her very low; so low that little hope could be entertained of her recovery. Numerous remedies had been tried without effect before the CHERRY PECTORAL And that has cured her. George Watkinson Esq., had to our knowledge ben afflicted with Asthma, for eleven years, and grown yearly worse, until the CHERRY PECTORAL has now removed the disease and he is as free from any of its symptons as we are. The Rev. Mark Dane had been so severely attacked with the Bronchitis, as to disable him from his duties, and nothing had afforded him relief until I (Mr. Thorning) carried him a bottle of your PECTORAL, which cured him at once, and he now officiates as usual in his place.

These are three of the cases in which we have known it succesful, but never to fail. We have great pleasure in certifying to these facts; and are, respected sir, your humble servants.

REV. DAVID THORRING.
HON. JOSEPH BATTLES.

Among the distinguished authorities who have given their names to recommend CHERRY PECTORAL, as the best remedy that is known for the Affections of the Lungs, are "The Loudon Lancet," "Canadian Journal of Medical Science," "Boston Medical and Surgical Journal," "Charleston (S. C.) Medical Review," "New Jersey Medical Reporter," Prof. WEBSTER, Harvard College, Prof. BARTLETT, Transylvania University of Medicine, President PERKINS, Vermont Medical College, Dr. VALENTINE MOTT, New York City, PARKER CLEVELAND, Bowdoin College, Prof. BUTTERFIELD, Willoughby College, Ohio, Prof. BRAITHWAITE, Leeds (Eng.) Medical School, Sir RICHARD KANE, Queen's College, Ireland, Prof. Rosenbaum, Leipsic.

The public have but to know the virtues and astonishing success of the "CHERRY PECTORAL," in curing diseases of the Lungs, when they will feel secure from these dangers, whenever this remedy can be obtained.

MECHANICAL MEDICINE.

Dr. Banning, formerly of this city, asks to announce that he has returned to 341 Broadway; for consultation and management of weakneses of the vocal, pulmonary, digestive, nervous, spinal and female systems; and also of the drooping, languor and physical deformities, which are so destructive of both health and beauty at the present day.

As these and kindred maladies are usually the result of a violation of the laws of physical organization, he will treat them chiefly by those exercises, mechanical appliances and reformatory habits of body, in conjunction with hydropathy galvanism and other discoveries of the day, which, united with the cooperative efforts of the subject, are calculated to relieve and restore the energies of the suffering and neglected organs.

Having spent several years in traveling for investigation and practical experiment on the subject, he has, at length, greatly improved and multiplied his surgical and mechanical appliances for the purpose. In addition to his new supports for female and spinal weaknesses, are some combining the properties of a universal hernial truss and an effective general support, with which he challenges cases of general debility, constipation, piles and prolapsus, ani, leucorrhea, prolapsus uteri and every variety of hernia.

The distinctive peculiarity of these devices is, that they do not weaken or restrain the motions or growth of the suffering parts, but act imitatively and concordantly with the mathematical genius of the body's forces. Hence, by a most comfortable and gentle pressure, they at once give great support and render the oppressed system eligible to its own restoration.

Feeble invalids coming from a distance will command prompt and faithful attention.

For more definite information, see his revised edition of "Animal Mechanics," and also his circular, which will be sent gratuitously when requested.

His improved body-braces, spinal supports and supporter trusses applied at his office (341 Broadway) and to be had wholesale and retail. City and country physicians and druggists are invited to call and examine Office hours from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. [121.

BLAKE'S PATENT

FIRE PROOF PAINT.

THE original and only genuine article, that can be obtained, without subjecting the purchaser to a prosecution for an infringement of my Patent. It has not yet been two year since the first counterfeit, was got up, but in that short time has proved itself, entirely worthless, as will be seen by the statement of more than twenty of the most respectable inhabitants of Sharon Ohio where mine as well as the Counterfeits are made. They say that we have examined recently, a house that was painted, with

Blake's Patent Fire Proof Paint,

SIX YEARS since (as an experiment) and now find the coating as hard as slate or stone. The action of the weather having no effect than to indurate and harden the substance. We will farther state that it has been such a complete failure in all the other kinds of stuff got up, and sold here, called Fire Proof paint (except Blakes) that his only is considered worth useing.

(Signed) Barnabus Crane and 20 others.

Hon. Daniel Webster has recently examined the patent and at the close of his report says, "I have no doubt whatever, but Mr Blake's Patent is good and valid. [104.

MARRIAGE:

WHY SO OFTEN UNHAPPY.

THE CAUSES AND THE REMEDY!

MANY and many a wife endures years of bodily suffering and of mental anguish, prostrate and helpless, embittering her life, that of her husband, and hazarding the future welfare of her children, arising from causes which, if known, would have spared the suffering, the anguish to the wife, and to the husband embarrassments and pecuniary difficulties having their origin in the mind being weighed down and harassed in consequence of the sickness of the companion of his bosom.

How important that the causes should be known to every wife, to every husband, that the dreadful and harrowing consequences to the health and happiness of both may be avoided! Life is too short and health too precious to admit any portion of the one to be spent without the full enjoyment of the other. The timely possession of a little work entitled as follows has been the means of saving the health and the life of thousands, as over copies have been sold since the first edition was issued.

The author has been induced to advertise it by the urgent and pressing request of those who have been indebted to its publication for all they hold dear (that all may have an opportunity of obtaining it), and who have favored him with thousands of letters of encomium, some of which are annexed to the advertisement.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

Twentieth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, $1.00.

THIS WORK IS INTENDED ESPECIALLY FOR THE MARRIED, or those contemplating marriage, as it discloses important secrets which should be known to them particularly.

Here, every female—the wife, the mother—the one either budding into womanhood, or the one in the decline of years, in whom nature contemplates an important change—can discover the causes, symptoms, and the most efficient remedies and most certain mode of cure, in every complaint to which her sex is subject.

The revelations contained in its pages have proved a blessing to thousands, as the innumerable letters received by the author (which he is permitted by the writers to publish) will attest.

SICKLY AND UNHAPPY WIVES.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Dayton, O.

"DAYTON, May 1, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU—My Dear Sir: 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion,' for which I enclosed one dollar to your address, came safely to hand. I would not have troubled you with these few lines, but that I am impelled by a sense of gratitude, for myself and wife, to give utterance to our sincere and heartfelt emotions.

"My wife has been perceptibly sinking for some three years or more, in consequence of her great anguish and suffering some months before and during confinement; every successive one more and more debilitated and prostrated her, putting her life in imminent danger, and which was, on the last occasion, despaired of. I supposed that this state of things was inevitable, and resigned myself to meet the worst. At this time (now about two months) I heard your book highly spoken of, as containing some matters reaching my case. On its receipt and perusal, I can not express to you the relief it afforded my distressed mind and the joy its pages imparted to my wife, on learning that the great discovery of M. M. Desomeaux provided a remedy. It opened a prospect to me which I little conceived was possible. No pecuniary consideration can ever repay the obligations I am under to you for having been the means of imparting to us the matters contained in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' But for this, ere another year would have passed over my head, in all human probability my wife would have been in her grave, and my children left motherless."

Extract from a Letter.

Competence and Health.

"LANCASTER, PA., Oct. 24, 1847.

"MY DEAR SIR: I know you will have the kindness to bear with me in encroaching upon your time, while I acknowledge (in behalf of myself and wife) the obligations we feel ourselves under to you in having made known certain matters, contained in your most invaluable 'Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' It has been worth its weight in gold to me. If I express myself rather warmly, you will see that I can not do so too warmly, when I inform you of the extent to which I have, through it, been benefited. I will state my situation when I obtained your book through the merest curiosity I look upon it as one of the most fortunate events of my life. I had been married some ten years, and was the father of seven children. I was long struggling unceasingly, to the end that I might gain a moderate competency, but the results of my utmost exertions at the end left me about where I was at the beginning of each year; and that only, with the most stinted economy, sufficing with barely the necessaries of life. Finally, this constant effort was beginning to have its effect upon my health: I felt less capable to endure its continuance, while I felt the necessity of perseverance.

"This constant, unceasing struggle on my part was imperative, in consequence of the prostrated condition of my wife (with occasional intermission) for six years, much of the time confined to her bed, and of course incapable of taking the charge and management of household affairs. Her condition arose from causes of which I was ignorant. Oh! what would I have given had I the six years to live over again! What would my wife have given to have been spared the long days and still longer nights prostrate on a bed of sickness!—all of which would have been avoided, had I then seen a copy of 'THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION.'"

From a Physician.

DANGEROUS DELIVERIES,

OBSTRUCTIONS, IRREGULARITIES, &C.

How many are suffering from obstruction or irregularities peculiar to the female system, which undermine their health, the effects of which they are ignorant, and for which their delicacy forbids seeking medical advice! How many suffer from prolapsus uteri (falling of the womb), or from fluor-albus (weakness, debility, &c., &c)! How many are in constant agony for many months preceding confinement! How many have difficult if not dangerous deliveries, and whose lives are jeoparded during such time, will find in its pages the means of prevention, amelioration, and relief!

Extract from a Letter.

To those just Married.—"Had I known!"

"PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU: Had I known of the im portant matters treated of in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion' some years ago, how much misery I might have escaped! I have suffered years from causes which you point out in your book, without knowing what to do. I obtained a copy, and found my case treated of. I trust every female will avail herself of the information contained in its pages."

Letters are daily received of this character, unnecessary to present.

To those yet unmarried, but contemplating marriage, or perhaps hesitating as to the propriety of incurring the responsibilities attendant upon it, the importance of being possessed of the revelations contained in these pages, so intimately involving their future happiness, can not be appreciated.

It is, of course, impracticable to convey more fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage; neither is it necessary, since it is every one's duty to become possessed of knowledge whereby the sufferings to which a wife, a mother, or a sister, may be subject, can be obviated.

☞ Copies will be sent by Mail free of Postage to the Purchaser.

☞ On the receipt of One Dollar, "THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION" is sent (mailed free) to any part of the United States. All letters must be post-paid (except those containing a remittance), and addressed to Dr. A. M. MAURICEAU, Box 1224, New York City. Publishing Office, No. 129 Liberty st., New York.

Over 20,000 Copies have been sent by MAIL within three months with perfect safety and certainty.

Booksellers and agents engaged in its sale, are making handsome competencies from the ready and extraordinary demand for it, and the extremely liberal terms afforded them.

Active local or travelling Agents, throughout the United States and Canadas, will be supplied on the same terms. Communications are required to be POST-PAID and addressed as above.

☞ CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against various catch-penies intended to be palmed off upon them initiating the title of the work as "The Married LADIES' Medical Companion," and various other titles. The title of the work is "THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION," BY Dr. A. M. Mauriceau. [105

FOR FEMALES AND MALES

Dr. Lazetti's Juno Cordial, or Protective Elixir.

This is the only actual remedy ever discovered for impetency, Genital Debility, Nocturnal Emissions, and all diseases occasioned by certain secret habits; and many of the nostrums recently recommended for the same complaints are worthless imitations which its unrivalled excellence, fame and popularity have brought into the market. The Medical Faculty of Europe and the United States are unanimous in their recommendations of the Juno Cordial and have not given their sanction in a single instance that has been authenticated, to any compound for the same purposes. The nature of the maladies relieved by the Juno Cordial are generally such as to leave the publication of certificates of cures out of the question, or the proprietor could produce a host of the most conclusive testimony to show that the great reputation that it enjoys was not accidentally obtained, but is firmly based upon its positive, and apparently miraculous virtues. In all directions are to be found the happy parents of healthy offspring, who would not have been so, but for this extraordinary preparption. And it is equally potent in the many diseases for which it is recommended. Objection has been naturally made to the price of the Juno Cordial, because the trash that has been thrown into the market in opposition to it is sold cheaper; but the fact is, the Cordial cannot be afforded for less, and ought to be much dearer, as many of the ingredients which compose it are among the costliest things in nature; whereas the others are made up of cheap drugs, worth but little in money, and less in merit. We assure the reader that the utmost reliance may be placed on the Juno Cordial in the cure of the maladies mentioned above, and also those that follow, viz: Loss of Muscular Energy, Physical Lassitude and General Prostration, Irritability, and all Nervous Affections, Indigestion, Sluggishness of the Liver, Gleet, Leucorrhoea or Whites, and Flour Albus and every disease in any way connected with the disorder of the Procreative Functions—in all of which it will afford almost immediate relief, and, if used as directed, is almost certain to produce a positive and permanent cure. Persons about to marry, if conscious of any weakness or disability of a certain nature, should take this Cordial, as it will infallibly restore health and vigor in a brief period, and where want of offspring is a cause of regret, if recourse be had to it the most beneficial results may be anticipated with confidence. It is of priceless value to those without offspring. It has taken the precedence in Italy and will in all other countries where it may become known.

It also possesses the unrivalled qualities of curing incipient Consumption, and I have administered it with great success to patients who have sought our delightful climate for the restoration of their health and the result is that a medicine has been added to the catalogue for the cure of insipient consumption.

To spread wide the blessings of this medicine, I have appointed Messrs. Judson & Co., of the City of New York, in the United States of America, my sole Agents for its sale; and none can be genuine unless it comes through them, and their signature is on the weapper.

"Brethren, fear not: for Error is mortal and cannot live, and truth is immortal and cannot die." A. J. Davis.

Brethren of Progress—ye Cohorts of Right,
And dauntless defenders of Truth;
Not with weapons barbaric go ye to the fight
Grey bear'd eld'—young manhood—and youth.

But sky-tempered armor, of Reason and Love,
Christ-proven, successful and shure,
Unknown yet, to bigot, to priest, or to king—
Consecrated to all that are pure.

Then bravely to battle with error, go forth,
Tis mortal—and cannot survive;
But Truth is immortal, in its nature designed,
To triumph—and ever to live. J. L. B.

I saw thee! I saw thee! nor can I forget:
The feelings that moved me the first time we met;
That impression will last until Death somber wave,
Shall bury this form in the night of the grave.

I saw thee! perhaps I shall see the no more:
Till immortal we meet on eternity's shore;
Where the world can no longer oe'r shadow the sky,
Or dim the bright sunshine that beam's from thine eye.

I saw thee! methinks, I can see even now:
The silvery ringlets that cluster thy brow:
As the smiles of complacency thy sweetness bespeak,
And the blushes of modesty dance on thy cheek.

I saw thee! and loved thee! and still will I prove;
That my bosom retains its first impress of love:
But fate bade me leave thee, and words cannot tell;
The pains I endured when I whispered—Farewell.

Essay on the Broom.—No 2.

In our last essay we treated of the use of the Broom, with a particular regard to neatess and cursorily glanced at its importance to health. We now propose to consider it as a valuable medium of exercise, with a special reference to its agency in promoting mental, and physical salubrity. The intelligent reader is already too fully aware of the striking effect of habitual exercise upon intellectual, and corporal development, to render so glaring a fact a topic for public discussion. There can be no skepticism on this point, while the mind is actuated by the dictates of experience and by a knowledge of the world around; or while fancy can graphically portray the lazy Turk lounging upon his silken ottamon, a loathsome spectacle of disease, and wearing out his ephemeral existence by the stifled groans of intolerable anguish; or while we can literally discern within our own spheres of observation, the multiform plagues of "Pandora," baffled by the sturdy arm of exercise, and fleeing the ruddy cheek, and vigorous frame, to find a more fitting haunt in the gorgeous mansions of affluence, where humble industry bows submissive to the despotic rod of aristocratic indolence; where blushing health shrinks from the pallid face of grim disease: unfolds her rosy pinions to the air; and wings her flight to a more genial clime.

But while it would be a futile and fatiguing task upon our mental machinery, and perhaps insulting to the reader, to endeavor to establish universally admitted facts, or to illustrate truths at once palpable, and familiarly understood; it will not be superfluous to arouse the attention of people to the great neglect of the Broom, in modern female education, as a serious and mischievous evil; and ultimately producing the most pernicious effects upon the health and well being of a sex whose relative position, and whose admirable qualities, imperiously demand our deepest solicitude and unremitting attention.

It has been remarked by a celebrated American writer that we have had successive ages of Iron, Brass, Silver, and Gold, and we may add (with much truth) that we are now living in a lazy, silly age: an age of Novels, Romances, Pianos: an age of human frailties, palefaces, dyspeptics, nervous disorders, and broom haters: an age in which mothers seem to take peculiar pleasure in trying to outvie each other in the superflous luxuries of life, and in habitual domestic indolence: an age in which mothers prompted by a spirit of emulation, seem jealous to lend to the social world the most delicate, the most fragile, and the most puny specimens of degenerate humanity. When we take a retrospective view of the past history of our country; when we look at the methods of moral and physical discipline, peculiar to her earlier years: the association of manual, with mental exercise: the wholesome practical knowledge instilled into the youthful mind: the fastidious regard to the proper cultivation, and controll of the appetites and passions: and its salutary effect every where conspicuous in the indomitable energy of mind; the warm patriotism of the soul; the vigorous development of body; the graceful symmetry of form; the healthful glow of expression; the sprightly intelligence of countenance; and the great insusceptibility to disease; contrasted with the widely different character of the present day; we are led to exclaim in the language of the distinguished Roman orator—"O Tempora—O Mores" We regret to state (while at the same time we challenge contradiction to the verity of our remarks,) that the female sex as a whole have become lamentably deteriorated; that they are not what they once were, or what they should be, in the middle of the nineteenth century when the blaze of illuminated truth burns with superlative splendor; when a careful contrast of the past, with a cool contemplation of the present, should awaken a spirit of reform in the maternal breast on the momentous subject of female education.

We would ask the fashionable mother why are diseases so frequent, so obstinate, so severe, at the present day among juvenile members of her own sex? What subtil power shatters their physical energies; drains or adulterates the great fountain of life; and paralyzes the secret forces of existence? Why grows the cheek wan and haggard; the eye dim and vacant? Why that hebitude of mind; and that morbid sluggishness of disposition? O Why is it that so many fall the early victims to the cold and silent solitude of the grave? Is it not, I ask, the unnatural, injudicious, and murderous, manner of modern female education? Let mothers ponder these truthful interrogatories, and they will soon be startled by the terrible conviction that health, and social happiness, nay even life itself, are daily immolated upon the cursed altar of fashionable indolence.

It may not be improper to illustrate our position by a hasty portrait of the exquisite Miss of 1850.

The reader will find her a perfect dupe to the many absurd foibles of gayety, and fashion. Her intellectual powers have been stupefied, by intense mental application: Her mind is crammed with a heterogeneous mass of "Polite Literature;" and deluged by the profound erudition of modern literary adepts. She is scarcely allowed the invigorating and balmy influences of the morning air; or the enlivining beams of the beneficent sun lest her fair complexion should become sullied by the bronzed tinge of the "healthy vulgar." She is seldom permitted to walk, lest her tiny feet should become more largely developed; and thus mar her effeminacy, and beauty of shape. She has been taught to despise the exertion consequent upon domestic duties as too laborious; too gross; and too unladylike for a daughter of wealth and aristocracy. She spurns the thought that her neat and pearly hands were ever intended to be blistered by the rude implements of "humble industry;" she fervently "thanks God" that she is not as other girls "are;" and with a scornful lip, and indignant frown, and a volley of sarcastic epithets, she stigmatizes the immaculate character of the time honored Broom.—Her tedious life is worn away by reclining upon a plush covered lounge perusing the licentious trash of some late novelist; memorizing detached phrases of current French authors; or cheering her solitary hours by striking the symphonious keys of the deep toned Piano; now exhilerated by the martial strains of some war piece; now amused by the rediculous beauty of an Ethiopian melody; and now melted to tears by the charming pathos of some silly love song. But a few years roll over her head, and you find her fast fading like the shaded rose; while a sunken eye, and an emaciated countenance, tells with mournful accents that she has been touched by the blighting finger of disease; or perhaps the monumental marble silently marks the neglected spot where youthful innocence lies forever clasped in the cold arms of insatiate death.

Gentle reader this is no immaginary picture; medical experience daily attests its truth; and every youthful sepulchre is vocal with thundering denunciations against those who despise the health giving Broom. We cannot conclude our essay without briefly adverting to the fact that these tender creatures are destined to become wives and mothers, to fill important stations in life, and to act in a most interesting capacity. And while we regret their incapability to assume the arduous duties of domestic life, we cannot but lament this prolific source of hereditary disease entailed upon succeisive generations scattering infection throughout universal creation, and augmenting the ills and woes of man's miserable existence. THE HERMIT.

My First Sparking.

BY PETER PEPPERPOD, ESQ.

Right well do I remember my first introduction to the thrilling delights of courtship. I had just attained the enthusiastic age of eighteen, and being of a very ardent, susceptable disposition, was in a manner peculiarly prepared to take impressions from the fair sex on the shortest notice, and most reasonable terms. But I was, unfortunately, bashful even to girlishness; extremely modest, painfully diffident—in fact, to use one comprehensive phrase, "was green" in all matters having the slightest reference to the dear beings for whose society I was lingering with all the anxiety of a little miss for a new doll. I did use to wish the rule was reversed, by which it established that all first advances shall proceed from the gentlemen, and that some kind creature would give me a course of instruction; in plain terms—'put me through,' and then, after I had advanced sufficiently far in the rule of two to match a miss without absolutely fainting away, thought, perhaps, I might afterwards succeed as easily as rolling off a log But no: the teazing little angels! instead of showing pity for my distress, they positively seemed to enjoy the fun amazingly, as they were pleased to term my gawky attempts to do the agreeable, and at the very moment I was blushing to the roots of my hair in consequence of my being spoken to by some beautiful creature whose black eyes and wicked smiles alone, set my whole soul in a blaze; my cousin Nell—dark-eyed, rosy-cheeked Nell—would laughingly cry, as she patted me patronizingly on the shoulder, "poor verdant little fellow! what a fine lady's man it would be if he wasn't so shy." And what made it so much harder to bear with anything at all like a good grace, arose from the presence of a fellow—how I did hate him—named Tom Smart; a little undersized puppy, with red hair, and a turn-up nose, who had every girl doting on him to distraction, and took any of them out for a a walk, to balls, parties, or theatre, whenever he wanted to. I leave it to my male readers whether it was not peculiarly galling to be beaten by a chap at least a head and shoulders less than myself, and so far from being good-looking, that he was not fit to be mentioned on the same day of the month, except in contrast! At length, however the fates kindly interposed in my behalf, by throwing a divine creature in my way, who taught me more of the mystetious art of courtship in one evening than, had I been left to my unaided resources, should have found out in a twelve-menth.

Ah, Mrs. Clara Bell was indeed a charming woman. United to a clear complexion of the most beatiful contour, in which the rose and lilly seemed to vie for precedence, an exquisite form inclining to that delightful proportion by the French called embonpoint, she was possessed of the most winning manners, and had a certain attractive way with her which nothing earthly could withstand. The first glance of her bright hazel eye threw me into such a whirl of tumultuous emotion, that, I scarcaly knew whether I was standing on my head or heels, and I stood gazing on her with open mouth and distented eyelids, like one demented; nay, I was so completely fascinated, that a moment afterwards, when she handed me her tea-cup with the most graceful air imaginable and in a sweet, soft voice desired me to be so kind as to pass it down the table to be replenished, I let it fall in the slop basin, and returned her the sugar bowl; and then in my attempts to repair the blunder, I perfermed such a complicated series of clumsy mishaps, ending in jerking off the table-cloth with the entire equipage, that I was fain to hide my agonized distress in another apartment, and wish the house wold fall on my head and bury me out of sight forever—for that odious Tom Smart had witnessed my blundering carelessness, and his taunting laughter rung in my ears as painfully as though I had been stretched upon the rack.

'Come, come, Peter," said a musical voice, tender and soothingly, as I felt a small hand on my shoulder, after having kicked my toes on a sofa-cushion for a full half an hour, in the misery of endurance, 'you musn't let such trifles trouble you, indeed you mustn't.'

I looked up, and beheld the dimpled chin of Mrs Clara Bell hanging over me, encircled by such meditating smiles as wrapped my soul in elysium, and transported me to the inner regions of paradise in the twinkling of a dew drop. (There is a poetic image for you; and we beg leave to warn all those distinguished versifiers who may appropriate it for their next Parnassian effort, that we shall expect them to give us the proper credit, or dread our severest displeasure)

"Get up, there's a dear, fellow," she continued, "and escort me home."

"Will you—will you allow me to walk home with you?" I cried, springing up with wonderful alacrity, and then feeling alarmed at my enthusiasm, I sunk back, the very victure of frightened terror, and bent my half closed eyes on the floor in dread confusion.

'To be sure I will," she replied, laughing at my bashful behaviour. "Get your hat and I will put on my bonnet and shawl in a moment."

Arrived in the street, she took my arm with all that confident ease which none but a widow can assume, instead of silly-sallying as embarrassed as myself, as would have been the case had she been a mere young miss, untutored in several years' experience in the life matrimonial. And surely no budding youth felt so unexceptionably big, as I did while strutting along the streets with the fair widow hanging so affactionately on my arm. But vain would be my effort to describe the thrill which shot through me, tingling from the topmost hair of my head down to my boots, when her taper fingers became gently pressed against my throbbing heart. Speak! I could not have gasped an articulate word to have saved my neck from the halter. I actually felt as tho' I were heated up to such a volcanic glow, that I shold scarcely have been much astonished had an eruption taken place, causing me to evaperate in a cloud of consuming fire.

Not so my companion, however. She rattled away unceasingly, every now and then taking a sly peep at my blushing face as wishful to note the effect of her words.

First she delivered an eloquent eulogium upon the brightly shining moon, which she said was the goddess of love; and then catching a glimpse of my countenance, to which the allusion had called a whole paint-can full of vermillion, she added that Luna had certainly smitten with her beams, for that I looked the most decidedly moon-stricken gentleman she had seen for some time, bursting into such a merry-hearted laugh, that several gentleman near suddenly stopped, and strained their heads forward to catch the faintest echo of such angel music; and I—shivered from head to foot in a perfect delirium, and thought if I could only then and there be permitted to eat the lovely widow bodily in a mouthful, I should be the happiest young fellow in the world.

At length to my great disappointment, we arrived in front of my companion's dwelling, for though I had been unable to join in the conversation as we walked along, I had experience such ungratified enjoyment from her words and encouraging behavior, that I could have wished to ramble with her forever, if that had been possible; and of course, never dreamed of her extending complacency towards such a backward fellow as me, so far as to invite me within. But in this I was agreeably mistaken, for when I had bid her good night, and was on the point of retracing my steps, she cast on me, as I thought, a look of gentle reproach saying:

Concluded next week.

An Affecting Scene.

In a lawyer's office, in a remote part of Connecticut, laid a mortgage for eleven hundred dollars, which was within a few days of being due. One morning, the man on whose place the mortgage was held, called and enquired if the payment could be put off for a short time. He was somewhat advanced in life, and very intemperate. The lawyer in reply to his inquiries, said that the man that held the mortgage wanted his money—that he was sorry, but that it could not be extended. The tears came in the old man's eyes, and after standing a few moments a perfect image of despair, he turned and left the office. He retnrned home, believing that in a few days his aged and infirm wife and invalid daughter, would have to quit the roof which had so long sheltered them, and seek a home he knew not where.

He could say nothing to them about it, it would cause them so much grief. The mortgage became due, and in the morning early the farmer again repaired to the lawyer's office

He pleaded for a time, but to no purpose. Overcome with emotion, the old man sunk into a chair and there sat for two hours apparently unconscious of anything that was passing around him, when a carriage drove up to the door; and a lady stepped from it. She entered the office. After standing a few moments, eyeing the old man with interest and emotion, she spoke. The old man looked up.

"Father how do you do?"

"Oh, Sarah I am well but sad. I am glad to see you, but sorry for your aged mother and invalid sister; I cannot return to them, for it will be to tell them they have no home, and this I cannot bear.—It will kill your poor mother."

"Father, father," said the daughter, "could you live a temperate man if this were paid?"

"Yes, oh yes! I would; but it cannot be, I have nothing to pay it with."

"Now sign the pledge, and here is the money."

The old man put his name to the redeeming pledge, and departed to his home with a happy heart.

The daughter had saved the eleven hundred dollars by working in a factory.

☞ Mr. E. W. Carr, Third street, Philadelphia, opposite the Exchange, is our authorised agent for that city.

☞ EDUCATION.—The Lecture of the Rev. Dr. Messler, of Somerville, on Tuesday evening, on this important subject was one of rare interest. It was listened to with breathless attention by the audience who seemed to feel its vast importance. We believe we but express their entire sentiment when we say that it was worthy of the subject, and its learned author, and adds another to the many obligations the public are under to this distinguished friend of human progress. May the action of his hearers in the cause show that the seed was sown on good ground, bringing forth fruit; some thirty, some sixty, and some an hundred fold.

☞ With heartfelt gratitude for the many kind favors and for the liberal patronage bestowed upon us in the past, we enter upon our duties for the future with a light heart and a cheerful spirit, knowing that an appreciating public will reward our efforts in its behalf. The liberal encouragement received induces us to believe that every future effort we make for the public welfare will meet with its corresponding reward.

The many advantages and true and real value of a newspaper to the prosperity of a town and the surrounding country where it is located, although justly valued by many, is not so generally appreciated for its intrinsic value as we could wish, and trust soon to see it. To properly appreciate its value it will necessary to follow it into those families where it is a constant and familiar visitor. There, while the family are seated around the hearth-stone and while the glowing fire casts around its cheering influence, after the daily toil is done, some one of its members, as was wont to be the custom, reads aloud the varied incidents and accidents of life, which mirror forth in the truth of actual experience the causes of prosperity and happiness, and warn, with timely notice, and with the certainty of the consequences boldly staring them in the face, against the infraction of the laws of our being, immutably fixed by the laws of nature and nature's God as the rewarder of those who live in accordance with and the punisher of those who have the temerity to defy them. It also presents the many treasured thoughts and reflections of the wise, the good, and the great; suggestive of thoughts in their own minds, leading to and giving value to conversation and discussion, which, imperceptible though it may be, yet certainly and triumphantly leads that family to intelligence and virtue, and places them in social comforts and happiness, far above the family which does not enjoy such means of preferment.—There and there only, by the contrast, can you see their true value; the more isolated the families are from the influences society receives from such sources the greater will be the contrast. In the one will be found intelligence, consequently thrift, independence, honor, virtue and happiness; while in the other, and especially where other powerful influences have not prevented it, will be found ignorance, squalid misery, vice and crime.

This is no fancy sketch, but a startling and sad reality. A personal reference or inspection by those who have not already witnessed its reality will speedily confirm its truth. The statistics of our poor-houses county and state prisons, and also of the state prisons of other states and countries abundantly prove it. The evidence thus presented is incontestible, that where ignorance abounds that there crime and misery stalk abroad, even at noon day.

Such is the influences of knowledge; such is the influences which newspapers, properly appreciated, are enabled to bestow on every family in the land; such too are the consequences of their neglect—What stronger inducements; what more glorious privileges can the intelligent and well to do in the world have held out to them to induce them to advance the general good? How so readily, so economically, so beneficially can the general welfare and happiness be promoted and secured?

Free schools, securing to every child in the State a Common School Education are the fundamental basis, and Newspapers located in every county and town in the land, are the medium, the aid, the nucleus around and through which Liberty can ever be maintained. Neglect these and the masses become ignorant, corruption sweeps over the land, special and exclusive privileges are easily purchased by wealth, aristocracy struts abroad and the people become the hewers of wood and drawers of water, the abject and degraded slaves of a priviliged class.

The enlightened, liberal and wise statesman, the true pure and prudent legislator, perceiving these contingencies provides, ere it be too late, this safeguard and protector of the people's rights; secures by their intelligence and virtue the advancement and stability of republican principles, and thus eventually secures the liberty and happiness of the whole human race.

Will our statesmen and legislators carry out the will of their constituents, by securing as they have thus been directed, the equal rights and liberties of the people? Any remissness of their duty we trust will be the signal for their disgrace, while conformity thereto shall cause them to be held in esteem and honor.

What would soon be the condition of the world if FreeSchools and Newspapers were established in every town and village in the despotic kingdoms of the earth; would not tyranny soon crumble into dust and misery be banished the land? Can the people then who have or can have these blessing in their midst, over appreciate them as the assertors; protectors and defenders of their rights?

Having faintly traced the benefit of a newspaper to a community to a conclusion, we would respectfully ask kind reader if you, seeing its benefits, perhaps having felt them, will lend it your aid? The broad and powerful "father of waters," the Mississippi, gathers its force from small springs and little rivulets; the Locomotive receives its power from a little water and a few billets of wood; so shall Education by your small might to its adjunct, the newspaper, be created into a power that shall disenthrall and regenerate the world.

☞ Public attention is called to the advertisment of Messrs. Dean & Swift, in another column. These gentlemen are prepared to supply Dealers, with the various descriptions of Fancy Foods, Perfumery &c of a superior quality, at as low a rate as can be had in the city of New York, or elsewhere. Those wishing to purchase will find it to their advantage to give them a call.

PRESIDENT FILLMORE AND THE VETO.—Once and again—aye, times almost without number—have the party known at present by the appellation of "Whig," been forced by circumstances to change their posision on measures of national policy. These changes have invariably been in favor of the Democratic policy; and at the present day, they stand committed to almost every public measure which they formerly opposed, and which originated and have been sutained by the democratic party of the country. Even the Veto power, which no longer ago than pending the last presidential election, they professed to scorn as an arbitrary "one man power," we find Mr. Fillmore, their President, claiming a right and avowing his determination to exercise, to quite as unlimited an extent as it has ever been exercised by any democratic President, not excepting Jackson. Note the language of his late Message:

"If (which I do not anticipate) any act should pass the two houses of Congress which should appear to me unconstitutional, or an encroachment on the just powers of other departments, or with provisions hastily adopted, and likely to produce consequences injurious and unforseen. I would not shrink from the duty of returning it to you, with my reasons, for your further consideration."

Here is a full endorsement of democratic views, made by one elected by the whig party to the highest seat of power.

The measures on which there remains the widest difference of opinion, is the Tariff. Here too the whig party are fast adopting democratic views. They have hitherto contended for protection as the primary object of impost duties, and a revenue as incidental and a consequence—hence have been great sticklers for a high tariff. Mr. Fillmore tells them they are wrong—that revenue is the only legitimate object acknowledged by the constitution, and that protection can only follow as incidental thereto. His views on this subject, as well in regard to the Veto power, quite as nearly approximate to the democratic position as that which his political friends have hitherto maintained. In fact, so nearly does the President espouse democratic doctrines in his message, we are not without fears that he and his friends will appropriate to themselves the whole democratic platform, and avow that they are the democratic party. We hope their forgetfulness of the past, will not cause them to christen us the Whig party, and thus make us responsible for the numerless inconsistencies of which that party have been guilty.—Paterson Guardian.

THE ARMY AND NAVY.—There is it seems a disposition in Washington to create new titles, and ranks in the army and Navy: but we trust that the good sense of Congress will refuse to entertain any of these suggestions. It is now proposed to appoint a Lieutenant General in the Army, and to have officers of higher rank in the Navy such as admirals. Now we have no petty spirit of opposition to proper distinctions in a service, but we object to any departure from the simplicity which a republican Government should preserve. There is already a jealously existing on the part of the people, of both branches of the public service; and we cannot but deem that the adoption of any such plans would highly unwise. We are already departing too much from that simple and economical administration of pulic affairs, which marked us formerly. We hear continually that such and such sums, paid to our public functionaries are not enough to give dignity and credit to the country abroad. All this cry is the merest trash. Franklin, and Jefferson and Adams were ministers abroad without neglect, under much smaller salaries. The truth is that there is danger in this perpetual aping of foreign forms and foreign manners; and true vigor will be best preserved in our country by retaining whatever is plain and simple in all departments of the national service.—Newark Mercury.

Terrible Steamboat Explosion and Awful Loss of Life.

NEW-ORLEANS, Dec. 13.

While the tow-boat "Angola-Norman" was on a pleasure excursion up the river; her boiler burst, and we have a fearful loss of life to record. Over 100 of our most respectable citizens and several ladies were on board. Junis Beebe, late president of the Tow-boat Company, is missing. C. Perry, Reporter of the Bulletin; Alfred Stillman of the Novelty Works; New-York, (brother of Dr. Stillman of Plainfield) and the First Engineer, were all killed along with, it is supposed, fifteen others, whose names are as yet unknown. Many were severely scalded and others slightly injured, including the Reporters of the Delta and Crescent.

In the Essex County Court of Oyer and Terminer on Wednesday, the Jury' in the case of Theodore Boice, Michael Field and James McCullough, charged with breaking into and robbing the Clothing Store of John Bryant in Plainfield of a large amount of goods, rendered a verdict of guilty against Boice on the 2nd and 3rd counts of the indictment, charging a misdemeanor and larceny; and against Field on the 3rd count, charging him with larceny only; and a verdict of acquittal in McCullough's case. The prisoners were ably defended by Col. Thompson of Somerville, F. T. Frelinghuysen, and A. M. Webster, esqs. of this city—Newark Daily.

☞ A GRIEVANCE.—Very many of our citizens, and particularly persons who come a distance, complain, and justly too, of the length of time which is taken to bring the mail from the Depot to the Post Office. It is generally from a quarter to three quarters of an hour in accomplishing the distance, when five minutes at most is amply sufficient. Many persons come five and six miles for letters or papers, to whom a half hour or more needless delay, which detains them until dark, is of considerable importance. We trust that whosoever duty it is to have it delivered in reasonable time, that they will remove all cause for future complaint.

☞ The Weekly Report of Deaths in the City and County of new York from the 7th of December to the 14th of December are:

Men, 64; Women, 63; Boys, 99; Girls, 83—Total, 309.

☞ The Plainfield Gazette is delivered to all subscribers in the village, at 10 shillings per year in advance; where an old subscriber obtains a new one $2 in advance will be received for the two subscriptions one year.

☞ The aggregate imports of the United States for the year ending June last, amounted to $187,-217,574. The total exports for the same time were $151,988,716. The imports of the year before were $147,857,439—exports $132,666,055.

☞ Total receipts into the Treasury the last fiscal year, were $47,421,748; total expenditures $43,-002,168. The public debt has been reduced $495,276. Of the public debt, $8,075,936 which it is desirable to meet without a resort to new loans.

To the Editors of The Plainfield Gazette:

GENTLEMEN: Permit me at the close of your second volume to congratulate you on your success.—The commencement of any undertaking is always attended with considerable anxiety, even when everything appears to favor its projector. The man who possesses energy and wishes to embark in business, is apt to look at the bright side of the picture, and therefore when he encounters unforeseen obstacles, he finds his spirits depressed and his prospects appear most gloomy.

I have not been an idle spectator of the Battle of Life, and have some knowledge of the difficulties which must be encoutered in establishing on a solid basis a public newspaper. Happy is that editor who has philosophy enough to take things coolly, and independence to pursue the straight path he has marked out for himself. Such an one may meet with "all sorts of luck," but he is bound to succeed in the end. The unscrupulous political partizan, and the bigoted sectarian, it is true, will tell him that seccess is impossible and will strive to make their croakings true. If the editor wishes to tell the truth at all times, he will most assuredly bring down on his devoted head all the enmity of political hacks and the anathemas of sectarian pulpits. But the honest and pure of all political parties, and the true disciples of him who proclaimed himself as "The Truth," will respect and honor him who strives to vindicate the cause of truth and right.

That the Gazette has battled against error with considerable success, is, I believe, admitted by all who have read it. The cause of the oppressed and down-trodden has had in it an able advocate. Equal laws and privileges have been earnestly urged as the birth-right of all. The education of the masses as the best safeguard of our republican institutions, has been ably enforced. It has eloquently taught that the religion of Jesus—which is simply obeying the will of our Creator—consists in instructing the ignorant, clothing the naked, feeding the hungry, and ministering at the bedside of the sick and dying. It has inculcated peace and good-will among men, by urging that we are all children of one heavenly Father, "who sendeth his rain on the just and the unjust"—all capable of the same heart-felt enjoyments and subject to the same heart-breaking sorrows, all having one interest in establishing and obeying just laws, all liable to meet death in his most fearful form, and all expecting and hoping to enter heaven. A newspaper which thus exhibits the duty we owe to God and man, is more effective for good than a hundred pulpits from which sectarianism only is inculcated.

The intelligent reader will agree with me in saying that The Gazette has done much for the prosperity of our beautiful village. The fact that so many of the most respectable and shrewd merchants and others of New-York Newark, and other places, as well as the majority of our own business men, advertise so liberally in this paper, proves that it is known and appreciated abroad and at home. A paper which can command so large an advertising patronage in a few months from its first publication, must exert a great influence in favor of the place where it is established. The Gazette is emphatically a live newspaper. In the words of the poet let me ask,

"What is it but a map of busy life?"

Even its advertising columns reflect the rapid progress of our countrymen in the arts and sciences—The professional man, the manufacturer, the merchant, the mechanic, and others, speak to us concerning things of present momen.. Such a paper is valuable for its advertisments alone. Compared with the columns of most and the Gazette bears unmistakable evidence of superior claims to public favor and especially should our citizens feel proud of so valuable an auxilliary to the prosperity of our thriving town.

But, gentlemen, although some other thoughts present themselves in connection with this subject, I must not tax your patience. Permit me to add, that you deserve all the encouragement you have received. I trust that your readers will strengthen your hands and encourage your hearts by subscribing (and paying for) your valuable paper. They should remember that their own and the printer's prosperity is closely identified. If they would have a good newspaper they should encourage its proprietors by their patronage as well as their smiles—The latter are sweet to the soul of the editor, but without the former he cannot be succersful in doing good. A.

☞ The citizens of Flemington, Hunterdon County, are agitating the subject of a daily mail between that place and Somerville. Few country seats in this State, we apprehend, have been so long without a daily mail communication as Flemington.

☞ An application is to be made to the ensuing Legislature to extend the jurisdiction on Justice of the Peace, over all sums that parties may see fit to bring before them.

☞ On Thursday, nearly nineteen hundred passengers were transported on the New-Jersey Railroad, from New-York to Newark alone, nearly 9,000 were transported to places on the line of the road between New-Brunswick. A corresponding number also crossed the Ferry, with a large addition to Jersey City, and adjoining places, besides many carriages and vehicles of various kinds. One boat in the afternoon, was estimated to have about 1,000 passengers on board.

A FACT FOR FARMERS.—Dr. R. T. Baldwin has recently made public the result of several years' investigation and experiments upon manure, and various ways of fertilizing the soil. He states that the best and speediest way to fertilize any soil is to cover it over with straw, bushes, or any other raw material, so as to completely shade it. The surface of the eath thus being made cool, dark, damp and close, soon undergoes a chemical process like putrefaction, and becomes highly fertilized. This plan of fertilizing, he says, may be applied with success to any soil whatever, no matter how poor, and the result will be astonishing.

☞ A priest was once called to pray over the barren fields of his parishoners. He passed from one enclosore to another and pronounced his benediction until he came to a most unpromising case. He surveyed the sterile acres in despair. "Ah!" said he "brethren—no use to pray here, this needs manure."

A GOOD RESOLUTION.—The citizens of Belmont County, Ohio, at a meeting held for the purpose of expressing an opinion upon the Fugitive Slave Law, passed the following: "Resolved, If the Federal Government has any slaves to catch, it may catch them." All right. The Federal Government has no power to compel any free citizen to turn slave-catcher.—[Portland (Me.) Zion's Adv.

☞ The amount of property in Chicago, subject to taxation, as appears by the census just taken, amounts to thirteen millions of dollars!

An Ode to our Country, by B.

May the Stars and the Stripes o'er our heads ever wave,
And teach all the nations we are just and we'er brave:
A Washington taught us our Rights to defend,
To punish our foes, the oppress'd to befriend:
Let the nations of earth,
E'en the lowest of birth,
Whom oppression at home hath driven in scores,
Cast off their vile chains and come to our shores;
Where welcome shall ever attend them,
If virtuous and true
To the red, white, and blue,
That Flag shall forever defend them.
Then let us all swear
By the love that we bear [ion,
To the Patriots who dared so nobly contend for the Un-
We will all cherish their zeal
And as good citizens feel
That as Sons of Columbia we'll stand by that Union,
Then hail to the Land of the Brave and the Free
And all curs'd be the Foes of her Liberty.

In Congress, Monday.

Both Houses looked a little more like doing something. In the Senate Mr. Cass got through a resolution calling for the correspondence between the government and the Austrian Minister, relative to the diplomatic agent sent by the United States to Hungary during the revolutionary struggle in that country. Mr. Benton introduced his Pacific Railroad Bill and made a speech in explanation of its provisions. According to it a railroad, plank road and common road for wagons and horses, with a foot path for pedestrians, are to be built from St. Louis to San Francisco by the Federal Government. Branch roads are to connect with Santa Fe and Oregon. A tract of one hundred miles wide, containing some hundred and fify million acres is set aside for the purpose. To this the Indian title is to be extinguished; military posts are to be established along the line: and lands granted to actual settlers, though on what terms our dispatch does not state.

In the House Mr. Briggs procured the New-York Branch Mint bill to be made the order of the day for the second Tuesday of January. A Message was received from the President announcing the official acceptance by Texas of the Ten Million indemnity, and congratulating Congress on the success of that great Peace Measure. Mr Meade tried vainly to get through a resolution looking toward the division of the public lands among the States. The Cheap Postage bill was made the order of the day for next Wednesday. The affairs of the new Territories were set down for consideration on three days in the first week of February. A resolution was adopted inquiring into the propiety of withdrawing our squadron from the Coast of Africa. A proposition to allow certain persons entitled to bounty lands to bequeath the same by testament was considered in Committee, but not finally acted on when the House adjourned.—Tribune.

War Preparations in South-Carolina—$300,-000 for Military Purposes.

COLUMBIA, (S. C.) Dec. 15—A. M.

The Senate of South Carolina has passed a Bill for a Convention, and giving THREE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS to be applied to Military purposes.

Carolina Bluster.

The Telegraphic report that South Carolina is arming and promising to give her Uncle Samuel a severe flogging does not greatly alarm us. She is rather wolfish at present, but she will not hurt any body much, and we trust nobody will hurt her. Should she proceed to the extremity of resisting the collection of the Federal Revenue and expelling the U. S. officers from Charleston, we trust her coast will be effectually blockaded by the Navy, so as to enforce the collection of duties on all incoming goods outside of her jurisdiction, and that she will there be left to cool. Let no blood be needlessly shed, but let no unworthy concessions be made. What we apprehend is not that South Carolina will practically secede from the Union, but that undue truckling to her will be resorted to on the pretext of averting that deplored catastrophe.—Tribune.

STRICT.—The following advertisment recently appeared in the Saunders' News Letter, published in Dublin, Ireland:

"Wanted, a young woman to act as housemaid in a small family; also, a milch cow—must be of the established church.

☞ We would earnestly reccommend Wholesale and retail purchasers, arriving in the city this fall, to pay a visit to the large show rooms of WILLIAM MCGRORTY, 136 William street, New York. His stock of goods will be found to embrace the newest styles, patterns, shades and colors, that have for many years been presented for public examination and sale in New York, and we are assured will be sold at the lowest prices. THE NEW JERSEY

HORSE POWER

Manufacturing Company.

HAVING improved, strengthened and perfected A. D. CRANE'S Patent Horse Power, are now prepared to furnish the same to all who may want.

This Power consists of an endless floor running over a series of pulleys, connected by cranks, without a rack or cog wheel about it: none being required from the fact, that the weight of the horse on the floor or platform causes sufficient adhesion between it and the pulleys to transmit all the power he is able to give Also by this arrangement the chain is freed from the draught or strain (which cannot be avoided in any other Stall Power) except what is reqired to pass the floor around. The requisite speed is obtained direct from the machine thereby avoiding a great amount of friction and wear, and lessening the liability to get out of order. They run so easily as to require less than an inch elevation to the foot A self acting brake is attached by which the motion is kept regular and uniform even when the work is unsteady and irregular.

From the above description it is evident that this is the most simple and efficient Power known.

They are highly recommended by those who have used them, for driving Circular Saws, Lathes, Drilling Machines, Threshers, Grist Mills, Pumps, &c.

The Company have certificates to prove the above and also to show that the Two Horse Power will grind 40 bushels of Corn to Meal (with Platt's Patent Mill.) in a day of ten hours, making it an invaluable Power for the Southern planter as well as others.

It has taken Silver Medals at the different Fairs where exhibited, and the only one given to Horse Powers by the American Institute last fall

They also furnish Threshers of the most approved construction.

Price of Single Power with Belt, $75: Double do. with Belt, $110: Thresher and Separator, $35.

HERNIA.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.—This disorder, of very frequennt occurrence, may be considered as arising through weakness of the abdominal walls, inducing an enlargement in the natural openings formed therein for the transmission of blood and other vessels; such openings being enlarged, permit the escape of bowels or other viscera of the abdomen, devolving hernial swellings or rupture, which most generally occur outwardly, as at the navel, groins and thighs.

The complaint is likely to happen at birth, and therefore should be carefully looked for by those having the charge of children, that it may be arrested and cured promptly. It also occurs at any period of life, to either sex, without regard to the condition or mode of living, and when found, should be attended to without delay—the final penalty being death, and that may be induced through strangulation at any momennt.

RUPTURES, are always to be treated with the surgical instruments known as Trusses and Supporters, and these require to be skillfully applied. With this view, the HULL'S TRUSS OFFICE, now established some thirty years, has under the various managers, presented to the public both male and female attendants to apply its instruments directly to the persons, which is preferable in all cases, and has also made improvement at different times, showing that advancement which study and practice only yield toward the relief of this malady.

With much pleasure the fact is now published, that recent improvements BUTLER'S TRUSS PADS have been made, and sufficiently tested upon numerous cases to warrant, through the cures already affected, their submission to the public, as being in adaptation and efficiency superior to any heretofore made known.

These improvements, recently patented, are now being applied at this office, 4 Vesey street, in cases of rupture, gravitation of the bowels, prolapsus uteri, prolapsus ani and piles.

The public may rely upon that care being made in their application, which will most likely tend to the final cure of the several complaints.

Hull's Truss Office, 4 Vesey street, Astor House, opposite St. Paul's Church, New-York.

FRED'K M BUTLER, Proprietor.

N. B.—The ladies' department is attended by a female qualified to fit the instruments, having so attended this office for many years.

Children trussed when only two weeks old, and invariably cured. [145is.

CHERRY PECTORAL:

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, ASTHMA, WHOOPING-COUGH AND CONSUMPTION.

The annals of medical science, affording as they do ample proof of the power and value of many medicinal agents, have furnished no examples to compare with the sultary effects produced by 'AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL."

The remarkable cures of diseases of the Lungs which have been realized by its use, attested as they are by many prominent professors and physicians in this and foreign lands, should encourage the afflicted to persevere with the strong assurance that the use of the "CHERRY PECTORAL" will relieve and ultimately cure them.

We present to the public unsolicited tsteimonials from some of the first men in our country, upon whose judgment and experience implicit confidence may be placed.

DR, PERKINS, President Vermont Med. College, one of the most learned and intelligent physicians in the country, considers it a "composition of rare excellencies for the cure of that formidable disease, Consumption."

NORWICH April 26, 1846

DR. J. C. Ayer—Dear Sir:—Agreeable to the request of your agent, we will cheerfully state what we have known of the effects of your CHERRY PECTORAL, and they have been astonishing indeed. Mrs. Betsy Streeter had been afflicted with a severe and relentless cough, which reduced her very low; so low that little hope could be entertained of her recovery. Numerous remedies had been tried without effect before the CHERRY PECTORAL And that has cured her. George Watkinson Esq, had to our knowledge ben afflicted with Asthma, for eleven years, and grown yearly worse, until the CHERRY PECTORAL has now removed the disease and he is as free from any of its symptons as we are. The Rev. Mark Dane had been so severely attacked with the Bronchitis, as to disable him from his duties, and nothing had afforded him relief until I (Mr. Thorning) carried him a bottle of your PECTORAL, which cured him at once, and he now officiates as usual in his place.

These are three of the cases in which we have known it succesful, but never to fail. We have great pleasure in certifying to these facts; and are, respected sir, your humble servants

REV. DAVID THORRING.
HON. JOSEPH BATTLES.

Among the distinguished authorities who have given their names to recommend CHERRY PECTORAL, as the best remedy that is known for the Affections of the Lungs, are "The Loudon Lancet," "Canadian Journal of Medical Science," "Boston Medical and Surgical Journal," "Charleston (S. C.) Medical Review," "New Jersey Medical Reporter," Prof. WEBSTER, Harvard College, Prof. BARTLETT, Transylvania University of Medicine, President PERKINS, Vermont Medical College, Dr. VALENTINE MOTT, New York City, PARKER CLEVELAND, Bowdoin College, Prof. BUTTERFIELD, Willoughby College, Ohio, Prof. BRAITHWAITE, Leeds (Eng) Medical School, Sir RICHARD KANE, Queen's College, Ireland, Prof. Rosenbaum, Leipsic

The public have but to know the virtues and astonishing success of the "CHERRY PECTORAL," in curing diseases of the Lungs, when they will feel secure from these dangers, whenever this remedy can be obtained.

MECHANICAL MEDICINE.

Dr. Bannlay, formerly of this city, asks to announce that he has returned to 341 Broadway; for consultation and management of weakneses of the vocal, pulmonary, digestive, nervous, spinal and female systems: and also of the drooping, languor and physical deformities, which are so destructive of both health and beauty at the present day.

As these and kindred maladies are usually the result of a violation of the laws of physical organization, he will treat them chiefly by those exercises, mechanical appliances and reformatory habits of body, in conjunction with hydropathy galvanism and other discoveries of the day, which, united with the cooperative efforts of the subject, are calculated to relieve and restore the energies of the suffering and neglected organs.

Having spent several years in traveling for investigation and practical experiment on the subject, he has, at length, greatly improved and multiplied his surgical and mechanical appliances for the purpose In addition to his new supports for female and spinal weaknesses, are some combining the properties of a universal hernial truss and an effective general support, with which he challenges cases of general debility, constipation, piles and prolapsus, ani, leucorrhea, prolapsus uteri and every variety of hernia

The distinctive peculiarity of these devices is, that they do not weaken or restrain the motions or growth of the suffering parts, but act imitatively and concordantly with the mathematical genius of the body's forces. Hence, by a most comfortable and gentle pressure, they at once give great support and render the oppressed system eligible to its own restoration.

Feeble invalids coming from a distance will command prompt and faithful attention.

For more definite information, see his revised edition of "Animal Mechanics," and also his circular, which will be sent gratuitously when requested.

His improved body-braces, spinal supports and supporter trusses applied at his office (341 Broadway) and to be had wholesale and retail. City and country physicians and druggists are invited to call and examine Office hours from 9 A. M to 1 P M. [121

BLAKE'S PATENT

FIRE PROOF PAINT.

THE original and only genuine article, that can be obtained, without subjecting the purchaser to a prosecution for an infringement of my Patent. It has not yet been two year since the first counterfeit, was got up, but in that short time has proved itself, entirely worthless, as will be seen by the statement of more than twenty of the most respectable inhabitants of Sharon Ohio where mine as well as the Counterfeits are made. They say that we have examined recently, a house that was painted, with

Blake's Patent Fire Proof Paint,

SIX YEARS since (as an experiment) and now find the coating as hard as slate or stone. The action of the weather having no effect than to indurate and harden the substance. We will farther state that it has been such a complete failure in all the other kinds of stuff got up, and sold here, called Fire Proof paint (except Blakes) that his only is considered worth useing.

(Signed) Barnabus Crane and 20 others.

Hon. Daniel Webster has recently examined the patent and at the close of his report says, "I have no doubt whatever, but Mr Blake's Patent is good and valid. [104.

MARRIAGE:

WHY SO OFTEN UNHAPPY.

THE CAUSES AND THE REMEDY!

MANY and many a wife endures years of bodily suffering and of mental anguish, prostrate and helpless, embittering her life, that of her husband, and hazarding the future welfare of her children, arising from causes which, if known, would have spared the suffering, the anguish to the wife, and to the husband embarrassments and pecuniary difficulties having their origin in the mind being weighed down and harassed in consequence of the sickness of the companion of his bosom.

How important that the causes should be known to every wife, to every husband, that the dreadful and harrowing consequences to the health and happiness of both may be avoided! Life is too short and health too precious to admit any portion of the one to be spent without the full enjoyment of the other. The timely possession of a little work entitled as follows has been the means of saving the health and the life of thousands, as over copies have been sold since the first edition was issued.

The author has been induced to advertise it by the urgent and pressing request of those who have been indebted to its publication for all they hold dear (that all may have an opportunity of obtaining it), and who have favored him with thousands of letters of encomium, some of which are annexed to the advertisement.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

Twentieth Edition. 18*mo., pp* 250. Price, $1.00.

THIS WORK IS INTENDED ESPECIALLY FOR THE MARRIED, or those contemplating marriage, as it discloses important secrets which should be known to them particularly.

Here, every female—the wife, the mother—the one either budding into womanhood, or the one in the decline of years, in whom nature contemplates an important change—can discover the causes, symptoms, and the most efficient remedies and most certain mode of cure, in every complaint to which her sex is subject.

The revelations contained in its pages have proved a blessing to thousands, as the innumerable letters received by the author (which he is permitted by the writers to publish) will attest.

SICKLY AND UNHAPPY WIVES.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Dayton, O.

"DAYTON, May 1, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU—My Dear Sir: 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion,' for which I enclosed one dollar to your address, came safely to hand. I would not have troubled you with these few lines, but that I am impelled by a sense of gratitude, for myself and wife, to give utterance to our sincere and heartfelt emotions.

"My wife has been perceptibly sinking for some three years or more, in consequence of her great anguish and suffering some months before and during confinement; every successive one more and more debilitated and prostrated her, putting her life in imminent danger, and which was, on the last occasion, despaired of. I supposed that this state of things was inevitable, and resigned myself to meet the worst. At this time (now about two months) I heard your book highly spoken of, as containing some matters reaching my case. On its receipt and perusal, I can not express to you the relief it afforded my distressed mind and the joy its pages imparted to my wife, on learning that the great discovery of M. M. Desomeaux provided a remedy. It opened a prospect to me which I little conceived was possible. No pecuniary consideration can ever repay the obligations I am under to you for having been the means of imparting to us the matters contained in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' But for this, ere another year would have passed over my head, in all human probability my wife would have been in her grave, and my children left motherless."

Extract from a Letter.

Competence and Health.

"LANCASTER, PA., Oct. 24, 1847.

"MY DEAR SIR: I know you will have the kindness to bear with me in encroaching upon your time, while I acknowledge (in behalf of myself and wife) the obligations we feel ourselves under to you in having made known certain matters, contained in your most invaluable 'Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' It has been worth its weight in gold to me. If I express myself rather warmly, you will see that I can not do so too warmly, when I inform you of the extent to which I have, through it, been benefited. I will state my situation when I obtained your book through the merest curiosity I look upon it as one of the most fortunate events of my life. I had been married some ten years, and was the father of seven children. I was long struggling unceasingly, to the end that I might gain a moderate competency, but the results of my utmost exertions at the end left me about where I was at the beginning of each year; and that only, with the most stinted economy, sufficing with barely the necessaries of life. Finally, this constant effort was beginning to have its effect upon my health: I felt less capable to endure its continuance, while I felt the necessity of perseverance.

"This constant, unceasing struggle on my part was imperative, in consequence of the prostrated condition of my wife (with occasional intermission) for six years, much of the time confined to her bed, and of course incapable of taking the charge and management of household affairs. Her condition arose from causes of which I was ignorant. Oh! what would I have given had I the six years to live over again! What would my wife have given to have been spared the long days and still longer nights prostrate on a bed of sickness!—all of which would have been avoided, had I then seen a copy of 'THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION.'"

From a Physician.

DANGEROUS DELIVERIES,

OBSTRUCTIONS, IRREGULARITIES, &C.

How many are suffering from obstruction or irregularities peculiar to the female system, which undermine their health, the effects of which they are ignorant, and for which their delicacy forbids seeking medical advice! How many suffer from prolapsus uteri (falling of the womb), or from fluor-albus (weakness, debility, &c., &c)! How many are in constant agony for many months preceding confinement! How many have difficult if not dangerous deliveries, and whose lives are jeoparded during such time, will find in its pages the means of prevention, amelioration, and relief!

Extract from a Letter.

To those just Married.—"Had I known!"

"PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU: Had I known of the important matters treated of in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion' some years ago, how much misery I might have escaped! I have suffered years from causes which you point out in your book, without knowing what to do. I obtained a copy, and found my case treated of. I trust every female will avail herself of the information contained in its pages."

Letters are daily received of this character, unnecessary to present.

To those yet unmarried, but contemplating marriage, or perhaps hesitating as to the propriety of incurring the responsibilities attendant upon it, the importance of being possessed of the revelations contained in these pages, so intimately involving their future happiness, can not be appreciated.

It is, of course, impracticable to convey more fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage; neither is it necessary, since it is every one's duty to become possessed of knowledge whereby the sufferings to which a wife, a mother, or a sister, may be subject, can be obviated.

☞ Copies will be sent by Mail free of Postage to the Purchaser.

☞ On the receipt of One Dollar, "THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION" is sent (mailed free) to any part of the United States. All letters must be post-paid (except those containing a remittance), and addressed to Dr. A. M. MAURICEAU, Box 1224, New York City. Publishing Office, No. 129 Liberty st., New York.

Over 20,000 Copies have been sent by MAIL within three months with perfect safety and certainty.

Booksellers and agents engaged in its sale, are making handsome competencies from the ready and extraordinary demand for it, and the extremely liberal terms afforded them

Active local or travelling Agents, throughout the United States and Canadas, will be supplied on the same terms. Communications are required to be POST-PAID and addressed as above.

☞ CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against various catch-penies intended to be palmed off upon them initiating the title of the work as "The Married LADIES' Medical Companion," and various other titles. The title of the work is "THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION," BY Dr. A. M. Mauriceau. [105

FOR FEMALES AND MALES

Dr. Lazetti's Juno Cordial, or Protective Elixir.

This is the only actual remedy ever discovered for impetency, Genital Debility, Nocturnal Emissions, and all diseases occasioned by certain secret habits; and many of the nostrums recently recommended for the same complaints are worthless imitations which its unrivalled excellence, fame and popularity have brought into the market. The Medical Faculty of Europe and the United States are unanimous in their recommendations of the Juno Cordial and have not given their sanction in a single instance that has been authenticated, to any compound for the same purposes. The nature of the maladies relieved by the Juno Cordial are generally such as to leave the publication of certificates of cures out of the question, or the proprietor could produce a host of the most conclusive testimony to show that the great reputation that it enjoys was not accidentally obtained, but is firmly based upon its positive, and apparently miraculous virtues. In all directions are to be found the happy parents of healthy offspring, who would not have been so, but for this extraordinary preparption. And it is equally potent in the many diseases for which it is recommended. Objection has been naturally made to the price of the Juno Cordial, because the trash that has been thrown into the market in opposition to it is sold cheaper; but the fact is, the Cordial cannot be afforded for less, and ought to be much dearer, as many of the ingredients which compose it are among the costliest things in nature; whereas the others are made up of cheap drugs, worth but little in money, and less in merit. We assure the reader that the utmost reliance may be placed on the Juno Cordial in the cure of the maladies mentioned above, and also those that follow, viz: Loss of Muscular Energy, Physical Lassitude and General Prostration, Irritability, and all Nervous Affections, Indigestion, Sluggishness of the Liver, Gleet, Lucorrhoea or Whites, and Flour Albus and every disease in any way connected with the disorder of the Procreative Functions—in all of which it will afford almost immediate relief, and, if used as directed, is almost certain to produce a positive and permanent cure. Persons about to marry, if conscious of any weakness or disability of a certain nature, should take this Cordial, as it will infallibly restore health and vigor in a brief period, and where want of offspring is a cause of regret, if recourse be had to it the most beneficial results may be anticipated with confidence It is of priceless value to those without offspring. It has taken the precedence in Italy and will in all other countries where it may become known.

It also possesses the unrivalled qualities of curing incipient Consumption, and I have administered it with great success to patients who have sought our delightful climate for the restoration of their health and the result is that a medicine has been added to the catalogue for the cure of insipient consumption.

To spread wide the blessings of this medicine, I have appointed Messrs Judson & Co. of the City of New York, in the United States of America, my sole Agents for its sale; and none can be genuine unless it comes through them, and their signature is on the weapper

My First Sparking.

BY PETER PEPPERPOD, ESQ.

Concluded.

"Are you tired of me already, that you won't step in and sit down a few moments?"

What I stammered in reply was never very clear to my remembrance, but in a moment afterwards I was seated on a chair in one of the neatest parlors it would be possible to imagine, trembling all over in a pleasurable sort of ague fit. There was a nice fire burning in the grate, which not only diffused a remarkably agreeably warmth throughout the apartment, but reflected back that delightful halo from the damask curtains close drawn across the windows, which is peculiarly appropriate for scenes of love. A bewitching velvet-covered sofa stood in the recess formed by the fireplace, whose numerous buttons absolutely seemed to wink at me as if saying what a dull fellow I was for not having sat down thereon; and immediately opposite stood an open piano just as it had been last played upon by its divine mistress; over the mantel hung a half-length portrait of the latter, on which I fixed a look of undistinguished admiration, supposing myself unobserved.

"You are thinking the artist flattered me very much I see," said Mrs. Bell, leaning over my shoulder, with a smile.

-'He hasn't half come up to the original," I returned, scarcely knowing what I said, until the words had passed my lips.

"Oh, you wicked flatterer," she cried in a pleased tone, and patting my cheek as she said so, 'I find that you are not near so simple as I have been led to suppose."

"I hope I did not offend you?" I said, feeling alarmed lest I had spoken too warmly.

"O, dear no!" she rejoined, 'ladies are not in the habit of being offended with gentlemen for praising them, except, as is too frequently the case, the praise chances to be mere lip worship, without meaning. But, my gracious, what a dreadful condition your hair is in; I declare, I don't believe you have combed it for the last four or five days.'

She would have been nearer the mark if she said the last four or five months. The fact was, I had imbibed the notion that my hair naturally inclined to curl in the most graceful style; I considered it a little short of sacrilege to meddle with in any way at all.

"You have beautiful hair," she continued, smothing down the awry curls with her palms; which positively makes it a shame to neglect showing it off to the best advantage. I'm sure you cannot feel the full importance of a good head of hair, or you never would let yours run to such an unsightly stubble as this. Why, I have known gentlemen to marry a fortane on their hair alone, shorn of which they would have been as Sampson of old." Saying which she opened a small dressing case, and taking therefrom a couple of combs and a brush, told me to sit on the sofa; and then taking my head within her arms, proceed to fix my hair more in accordance with her notions of manly beauty.

To say that I was in a trance while this truly delightful process lasted, would but poorly express the singular sensations I experienced. All my preconcieved ideas of the pleasure derivable from the society of woman, dwindled away like the thin mist before the present enraptured reality. I seemed to be going through a new existence—surrounded by an atmosphere within whose hallowed precinets was concentrated all of earthly happiness it would be possible for mortal to enjoy. The white rounded arms would move slowly up and down my cheeks, while her breath fell on my hair like some aromantic breeze of summer.

"There!" said she at length, "you sweet little fellow, take a look at yourself in the glass now, and tell me if I have not made you look at least twenty dollars better. I'll engage the first young lady you meet will fall in love with you at sight, on the strength of your hair alone. And I will make you a present of these combs and brush, that you may have no excuse for neglecting your hair again."

I made out to insinuate as I accepted her gift, if I might only dare to hope that she would fall in love with me, all the young ladies in creation might "go to thunder," for anything to the contrary I cared about.

"Ah! now you are talking silly, Peter," she responded, assuming a grave look. "But I suppose you forget I am not far from thirty' while you are a mere boy, eh?"

I felt rather nettled at this allusion to my youth, for at that precise era of my life, I remember, I labored under the delusion that I was about as complete a specimen of undoubted manhood as could well be found, and I replied to my companion, that I was desperately in love with her, and actually went to the length of averring, that unless she consented to run off with me, for the purpose of conferrring upon me the inestimabe privilege of occupying the place vacated by the lamented Mr. Bell, I would hang or drown myself forthwith.

"Don't talk so foolish, Peter, my dear boy," she replied, as soon as she recovered from a hearty fit of laughter at my earnest appeal; and speaking in a patronizing style, which would have been in strict keeping with a mother giving advice to her son, "You must not think that I have all this time been laying a trap to ensnare you, I merely wished to remove a little of that irksome bashfullness with which you are troubled, so that you may be enabled to mix in female society with some degree of ease. I have really often been pained for you, when I have seen the foolish looks you put on when addressed by a lady—you positively looked wretched. But come, I will sing you a song or two, and then you must go; and be sure, when you have won the affections of your cousin Nell—which you will find no trouble in doing now—not to tell her under whom you took instructions. It is more than probable that she may feel a decided objection to any such tuition.

I felt bad—perfectly flat; but Mrs. Bell's beautiful singing soon brought me round again and when she finally accompanied me to the door, I turned to depart with only this regret on my mind—that she was not fifteen years younger, or I that much older.

"Peter,' she said, when I had got a step from the door.

I stepped back with alacrity, and inquired what she wanted. She cast on me a most bewitching glance and whispered—

"You forgot to kiss me, Peter."

Did I kiss her, do you say? You'd better believe it; and though a great many years have since elapsed, I can recall the thrilling entrancement of that my first salute.

"There," she said, "you'll do now, Peter; and always bear in mind, that all the ladies except to be kissed by ther lovers at parting, as a token that the said lover's previous expressions of love and adoration were not mere empty words, but the outward signs of affectionate reality within.'

All my subsequent endeavors to gain a second tete-a-tete with the fair widow proved vain; she said she had taught me sufficient to enable any gentleman of moderate talents to see his way clear with the ladies, and could not extend her course of lessons further, and ever after resolutely refused me permission to enter her dwelling.

Having sense enough to desist from endeavoring to attain an impossibility, I turned my attentions to my cousin Nell, and so ably did I follow up the instructions acquired from Mrs. Bell, that I soon had the pleasure of supplanting Tom Smart, and that so effectually, that one evening, when I had been doing the agreeable in my best style, and had just performed the finishing touch in the form of a parting salute, Nell said she never would have beliv-ed I would come to be such a dear agreeable fellow—so much better than that hateful Tom Smart.

Life on the Turning of a Card.

A friend narrated to us a day or two since an anecdote of early times in west Tennessee, which we will attempt to repeat even at the risk of loosing the graphic simplicity of his conversational narrative.

Some eighteen or twenty years since a well known resident of Tipton county was put on his trial, charged with the murder of his wife. As usual in such cases, popular feeling was largely against him, and all the eloquence and ingenuity of his counsel were required to make any impression in his favor upon a jury, which however impartial it might desire to be in the consciousness of sworn duty, could not but see the waves of popular prejudice surging in upon it.

The case was ably argued. The counsel for the defence made most vigorous and impassioned appeals. The case was submitted to the jury; and they retired, to make up their verdict. Time passed, and as the setting sun warned all of the approaching night, the large throng in attendance, judge, counsel, etc. retired, all anxious, the accused not the least so, to learn the verdict of the jury, and some wondering that the jury hesitated for one moment to bring in a verdict of guilty. In the mean time the jury had come to a point beyond which they could progress no further. The appeals of the counsel of the defence had not been without their influence, and the jury stood unchangeable six for conviction and six for acquital. Something had to be done. In those days twelve good fellows could not be got together for a night, and sleep. Cards appeared mysteriously from the depth of sundry large pockets, and exercises in seven up and poker were zealously commenced.

About midnight one of the number, Col. P., proposed that they should play a game of seven up, the result to decide the verdict. The proposition was heartily and unanimously agreed to, in all seriousness and the whole crowd collected around Col. P. and his opponent, who proceeded to play the game on which was staked a human life, Col. P. played to save the accused. His opponent played, and quite as zealously, to secure the conviction. The backers, five and five, stood behind them, encouraging the companions, and watching the game, dimly seen by the light of two tallow candles, with the most intense interest.

The game proceeded with very equal fortune, till both parties stood at six and six. It was Col. P.'s deal; he dealt, and TURNED JACK. The prisoner was acquitted, and every man of the jury joined in a shout which startled the whole, even the revelers in "the grocery." Next morning the jury went into court and gave, to the astonishment of many, the verdict of not guilty." The juryman who played an unsuccessful game for human life, still lives, a much respected citizen of this district. One of the counsel is a very distinguished member of the Memphis bar, and the accused, has, as we believe, gone to a higher court: but neither of them, nor any of the assemblage nor the court, who marvelled at the verdict eighteen years ago, have ever known that a human life was saved by turning Jack! There are some curious episodes in the history of our early settlements; but who would think of venturing life upon turning Jack. Memphis Eagle.

AN ENLIGHTENED FLOCK.—It is related of a worthy divine, whose field of labors was situated not many hundred miles from Salem, that he preached politics to his congregation for such a length of time that even the oldest church members forgot all about the gospel, and fell into a profound ignorance with regard to creed, form of worship and church regulations. After the clergyman's death, the elders went to consult a celebrated divine about obtaining a successor.

"What is your creed?" asked the divine.

"Our creed?"

"Yes—your principles—what are they?"

"Oh, we are all Whigs but two!"

"I mean what is your platform—your church?"

"Oh!" exclaimed one, "that is principally oak."

GOOD NEWS FOR THE DEAF.—What letter in the alphabet would be of more service to a deaf woman than a patent ear-trumpet'?—The letter A, because it would certainly make her hear.

"FATHER, did you ever have another wife besides mother?"

"No, my boy; what possessed you to ask such a question!"

"Because I saw in the old family Bible where you married Anne Domini, in 1835, and that isn't mother, for her name was Sally Smith."

A political orator wittily compared our party promises to western roads, which open stately enough, with planted trees on either side to tempt the traveler, but soon became narrower and narrower, and ended in a squirrel track and run up a tree.

A TRIFLING MISTAKE.—Some weeks ago we had occasion to journey a short distance in New Hampshire by stage, after leaving the railroad terminus It chanced that one Bill P———, a well known wag and punster of that region, was one of the "outsiders" on the way up.

Bill is not a bad man, by any manner of means, but it is also well known that he will "partake," or "Indulge," at times, and especially when he is travelling. On this occasion, he enjoyed the companionship of a mysterious black bottle, to which he turned his countenance so frequently, en route that he even acknowledged himself finally, a "leetle over the bay!" (the nigh horse bye the-bye, was a bay one, and Bill sat on the left side of the box!)

We were proceeding quietly along, listening to Bill's jokes and drolleries, when, on a sudden, the coach came in contact with a huge stone in the run. Bill lost his equilibrium, and tumbled heels over head across the dasher, striking heavily upon the sod.

Bill arose to his feet, dug the gravel from his nostrils and ears, and commenced berating the driver for his carelessness in upsetting the coach and thus endangering the lives of the passengers,

"Wot'n thunder yer doin'?" said Bill. "You mis'able saw—ic—sawney; a knock—'ic—ockin' people's brains out'n this way?"

The driver informed him that the stage had not been overturned at all; and the passengers assured Bill that Jehu was right.

Our good natured friend approached the vehicle again, and remounted slowly to his former seat, outside.

"Did't upset, d'you say?"

"Not at all," replied the driver.

"Well—'ic—if I'd a know'd that," said Bill, "I wou'dn't ha got off!"

THE ELEVENTH COMMANDMENT.—Archbishop Usher was wrecked on the coast of Ireland in a wild and desert place. In his distress, he went to the house of an ecclesiastic—a man reserved and prudent almost to distrust and to conciliate his feelings, alledged his sacred character. The ecclesiastic, in a tone hardly civil, refused to believe him, and said he would answer for it he had never known how many commandments there were. "I can prove to you," said the archbishop, with mildness, "that I am not so ignorant as you think; there are eleven."

"Eleven!" answered the acclesiastic; "very well, tell me the eleventh and I will give you all the help you need."

"Here it is," replied the archbishop, "a new commandment give I unto you, that ye love one another." John xiii. 23.

A Fact in Deep Plowing.

Having been for a long time an attentive reader of the Newspaper, especially the farmer's department, and having seen many articles on the cultivatton of corn, I have concluded to give you my experience for the last two years. Previous to that, I had followed the old plan of shallow plowing and high hilling. Now for the other way. In the spring of 1849, I took five acres of ground that had wheat on it the year before, and had for a number of years been rather hard run by sowing in wheat one year and planted to corn the next, until the surface soil was worn so iow, that twelve bushels of wheat and forty or fifty of corn were an average crop. On the five acres, I put eighty-seven loads of barnyard manure, the greater part of it straw, only partially rotted, and plowed it as follows:—Taking two teams and two plows, I began by a furrow seven inches deep with the first plow, then followed in the same furrow with the other plow, turning another furrow six inches deep, making thirteen inches of soil turned. I then harrowed and marked it making the rows four feet apart both ways, and planted on the 22d of May. As soon as the corn was large enough to follow the rows, I cultivated it out both ways, and had a man to follow with a hoe to set up the hills that were partially covered up. I went through it twice afterwards with the cultivator, but made no hills, leaving the surface as level as possible. I cut it up the 17th of September, and from the five acres, husked seven hundred and six bushels of ears.

Now, I don't call this a big crop, for I am well aware that it can be beat; but it shows the difference between half doing work and doing it well. The corn was hauled off and the groud sowed to wheat, being plowed as deep as a pair of horses could plow it; and from the same ground, I have this year harvested and threshed one hundred and ninety bushels—thirty-eight bushels te the acre. I hnve managed my corn ground in the same manner this season, and from present appearances shall have as good a crop as I had last.—Dollar Newspaper.

Cure for a Foundered Horse.

Heat a tubful of water to the boiling point, and bathe the legs from the fetlocks up, as hot as it can be applied. If rubbed downwards, it will take off the hair, if the water is used as hot as will be beneficial. Now wrap the fondered leg in a thick blanket, well bound on, and saturate it with hot water, being careful to wet it from the bottom upwards. In two hours, repeat the operation, and continue until the swelling is removed.

A good purge for the horse during the application will be sage tea, made strong, molasses, and melted lard, each one pint. If the founder is very bad, bleed in the neck. You need not fear scalding the hair off, if you follow directions. This is worth the price of the Agriculturist a dozen years.—American Agriculturist.

CHEAP BLACKING FOR HARNESS.—Melt two ounces of mutton suet with six ounces of bees' wax; add six ounces of sugar candy, two ounces of soft soaps, and one ounce of powdered indigo; melt and mix well, and add a gill of turpentine. Lay it on with a sponge, and polish with a brush.

A VALUAALE CEMENT FOR HOUSEHOLD USE.—Take new milk, half a pint, and curdle with sharp vinegar; separate the whey and mix with the curd, the whites of five eggs, beat well; add finequicklime and mix till you have a ductile paste or putty. It will stop cracks, and is fire and water proof.

ALUM WHEY, made by boiling a quarter of an ounce of alum in a pint of milk, and strained, is a good medicine for bowel complaints of children.—Give a wine-glassful three or four times a-day.

The Legislature—Reform.

The time is fast approaching when our legislators elect will be called upon to perform those promises to the people by which they obtained their suffrages; and woe be unto them if they are not prepared and properly prepared too to fulfil their long deferred hopes. Whether Democracts or Whigs they alike pledged themselves and are alike responsible to the people for the fulfilment of those pledges.

The people of New Jersey have long asked for reform in their legislation; instead of special enactments conferring exclusive privileges, they ask for general laws securing equal rights; they have recently spoken in a loud and significant manner that this is their will. We trust therefore that their representatives, of both political parties, as both claimed and pledged themselves to be the friends of these measures, that they will come prepared, and properly prepared with some well digested plan whereby special and exclusive privileges shall be done away; that the statute book of New Jersey shall no longer be the mandate of a tyrant's will, but shall stand forth the true exponent of republican principles and the conservator of the people's rights.

In the place of the enactments granting special priviliges to the few, which disfranchise, degrade, and disgrace a free people, they demand laws in conformity to the liberal and enlightened spirit of the age. That these laws may be understood, appreciated and obeyed, they demand that the rising generation shall be instructed, that they shall be educated in conformity with the spirit of our republican institutions, that knowing they may properly appreciate and enjoy their inestimable blessings; that they may thereby be transmitted unimpaired to their posterity forever. They demand that the government, which is established to secure and protect the equal rights of all, shall thus foster its own interests—its life's blood—by the proper instruction of her people, of those who wield the sovereignty of the State. How else can they intelligently perform the duties and protect the rights which as sovereigns pertain unto them?

The principles upon which these measures are based, being admitted to be identical with those upon which our government is established, we can see no difficulty in the way of their becoming the laws of the land; they are so plain that none can or will err—none but those who make use of their place for personal or party aggrandizement—in ascertaining and following out the plain path of duty; we trust therefore that whigs as well as democrats and democrats as well as whigs, both being pledged to their support, and both being responsible to the people, will take the warning recently given and strive for their accomplishment. Thus do we trust soon to see the hydra headed monster special privileges slain, and the enduring principles of right, truth, and justice established in their stead; thus shall the equal rights of all be secured; and by the adoption of a liberal system of Education, that all may appreciate their value shall their permanency be triumphantly established.

Notwithstanding the many applications which we have already had notice of, and which interested parties will undoubtedly clamor for, we trust the good sense of the members elect, backed by the recent overwhelming vote as expressive of public opinion against them, will be all-sufficient to enable them to withstand the clamor of interested applicants. Let all be contented to wait until general laws shall be properly matured, thereby securing for the public benefit a wholesome competition and guaranteeing to all their just and equal rights; thus shall the general welfare be best and most certainly attained and secured.

The absurdity and injustice of all special acts are sufficiently apparent, the people have determined to tolerate them no longer. What can be more absurd and contemptibly trifling to the character of a legislative body and through it to the dignity and majesty of a State and the rights of the people than the special acts heretofore granted by that body?

Ten or twenty townships, as the case may be, obtained at the last session of the legislature a special act to prevent swine running at large; their owners indignant at being deprived of the privilege of annoying their neighbors and of raising pork at their expence, immediately transfer them across the line to another county or township to prey there; this produces a necesity for another special act! Again, an equal number of townships, more or less, petition for an act enabling the people therein to vote by ballot; the party in power grants it or not as they perceive it can be made to affect their interests; it may be perceived by some lordly manufacturer that the workingman in his establishment can thus independently express his opinions, being able, without loss of time, to vote for whom and for what measures he likes best; in that case the party defer to the opinion of him who can secure them the most votes—and the act is not granted! For like reasons were the acts of a preceding legislature annulled by a subsequent one!

Thus from mercenary motives do our institutions become corrupt, and thus is man's freedom and independence destroyed. Nine-tenths of the legislation of New Jersey has been of this description; a disgrace to every Jerseyman and disgusting to every reflecting and independent mind.

Now if it be just and right, and secures to all equal privileges, that one township should vote by ballot why not in all? If it is unjust and secures to any privileges which all cannot enjoy, why grant it to any? If it is just and right that swine should be prevented from running at large where they do damage in one township, why not in all? If there was a general law on this subject embracing all grievances of a similar character, it could be applied whenever the grievance existed without the necesity for a special permit or enactment from the legislature. As the practice has been even charity could not be bestowed, the dead buried, a well or a ditch dug, a wharf, bridge or manufactory built, a road made or a swamp cleared without a special act of incorporation being granted by the legislature.

These things indeed are too simple to take notice of but for the importance with which they have been inversted by legislative authority. No wonder that New Jersey is behind so many of her sister states in the cause of Education when grave legistors consume nine-tenths of the time and money spent in legislation in enacting whether a hog shall or shall not be permitted to root up another than his owner's garden—but for the special privileges with which his hogship is invested common sense would say that his owner is responsible for his manners, and that the public should be empowered to prevent the nuisance.

We can conceive of no business, no right or privilege, no profession, trade or occupation which is a legitimate subject of legislation but what can be as well if not better transacted, and the general welfare for that very reason better promoted, by a general than by a special law. Wherefore then the necessity for a special act; is it alone that the grantors and the applicants are the beneficiaries? Such indeed do the people believe them to be, such have they with warning voice declared them to be; woe therefore unto him by whom they come to pass; better for him that he had not been politically born, for to him the day of judgment cometh speedily.

☞ The prisoners convicted at the recent term of the Court of Oyer and Terminer for this County have received the folowing sentences.

Before proceeding to perfom the duty, the Chief Justice alluded to the uusual number of indictments, being the greatest number ever found in this county, and said that a crisis had now arrived in the administration of criminal justice, when it became necessary to act decidedly. It seemed as if a strife had arisen between individuals and the majesty of the law; and the Grand Jury, by their finding such an unusual number of indictments, have evidently determined that they will put an end to the disorderly houses and illegal traffic of liquor, in this city. The Court was determined to sustain them, and if the fine of $20 was not enough, it should be $100; and if that did not prevent the evil, the State Prison would be resorted to. He then proceed to the following sentences:

Daniel Arth, disorderly house—1 year State Prison.—Four indictments for selling liquor, $20 on each.

Margaret Oats, disorderly house—3 months County Jail. 5 indictments selling liquor, $20 on each.

Peter Ellers—8 indictments selling liquor, $20 on each.

Jacob Tanner—7 indictments, $20 on each.

Ann Cluny, disorderly house 1 year State Prison—13 indictments for selling liquor, $20 on each.

Margaret Riley—Selling liquor, $20.

Lewis Schenck—4 indictments selling liquor, $20 on each.

Adam Stiger—disorderly house, $20, 5 indictments for selling liquor, $20 on each.

David Bracken—2 indictments selling liquor, $20 on each.

Theodore Boice, grand larceny and misdemeanor—3 years State Prison.

Michael Field grand larceny—$250.

Joseph Field, larceny and misdemeanor—6 months County Jail.

John Waldon, petit larceny—6 days County Jail.
Thomas Kelley, " " 60 days County Jail.
Michael Galway, petit larceny—30 days County Jail.

James Dolan, 2 indictments for petit larceny—30 days County Jail on each.

John Sands assault and battery—$5.
James Welsh, " " 6 months States Prison.

Jefferson Dunn and Hannah Dunn, assault and battery—6 months County Jail.

Caspar Keller and John Keller 2 indictments assault and battery—each pay $25 on each indictment.

Fredrick Lower, assault and battery on constable $35. Assault and battery $5.

Lewis Burnet, assault and battery—3 months Co, Jail.
Archibald Edgar, " " 30 days "
Bodela Seamen, " " $5 00
Chris. Magill, " " $5.00
John Sampson, disorderly house—$5.00

John McCarty, 2 indictments assault and battery—30 days County Jail on one, and $5.00 on the other.

Francis Seamen, 2 indictments selling liquor—$20 on each indictment.

While the Chief Justice was pronouncing the sentences, James Welsh, one of the prisoners, raised the window of the room in which they were placed and sprang to the ground, a distance of some twenty feet, clearing the area beneath, and made his escape. He had been sentenced to six months in the State Prison, and is desribed as one of the most reckless of those convicted.

To Render Cloth Incombustible,

Dissolve borax in hot water, soak the clothing in the liquid and let it dry. It will now be impossible to inflame it, although it will burn away by slow combustion. Alum has been recommended for the same purpose, but it is more injurious to the clothing. The carbonate of Potass may also be used, but is apt to contract moisture from the air, and thus render the clothes damp.—Francis' Chemical Experiments.

From the Newark Mercury.

THE REFORM MEASURES.—We are pleased to learn that one of the leading minds of the Democratic party of the State, is engaged in carefully preparing the Bills to be brought before the next Legislature; and that they will be supported by the Senator from Mercer, the Hon. Wm. C. Alexander, in all their details. The difficulty of preparing Bills of this character is not duly appreciated, and the necessity is more urgent, as they will undergo the strictest scrutiny in their several stages. That the measures advocated are capable of being sustained in debate we are confident; and nothing can array against them any strength except the folly and imprudence of their friends. If indeed under the democratic ascendency we shall secure a liberal system of common schools, where the children of our State may be educated; if a Homestead Exemption bill shall be passed, and household exemption to a liberal extent be secured; if there shall be (except in the case of Grand Jurors,) an abolishment of the property qualifiction; if general laws shall exclude special legislation, we, despite our strong party predilections, shall give the majority all due honor.

We believe that it is generally conceded in this quarter, that the Whigs will favor the passage of these measures, as consonant with the state of opinion in the Whig ranks; and as adapted to the true interests of the State of New Jersey. From the evidences before us, we are confident that the prominet Whig members of the Legslature will rather seek to improve the bills, than to throw any obstacle in the way of their passage; and that their whole action will be merely preventative of party legislation, If then, the majority will bring forward these measures with an eye single to the interests of the State, and forget in their advocacy the distinctions of party politics; they will merit and receive the approval of all true friends of these principles. But, on the contrary, if it is seen that their whole efforts are to secure a party ascendancy by loud professions, and secret betrayal, they will justly deserve the contempt they will receive.

Industrical Legislature of New Jersey.

CALL.—The undersigned, a Committee appointed by a state Convention of National Reformers, held at Newark on the 10th of October last, to call the first meting of the Industrial Legislature of New-Jersey, in accordance with the reccommendation of the Industrial Congress, respectfully invite the attention of their fellow-citizens to the subject.

The prominent fact of the downward tendency of Labor, a fact so inconsistent with our national theory of Government, and the now almost equally prominent fact that downward tendancy is caused by the Monopoly of the Soil, render it unnecessary for us to go into an argument to show the necessity of a State Organization to devise the besttemporary relief and the quickest method of applying the radical remedy, the restoration of the Soil to the people.

As there are but few Industrial Organizations in the state entitled to a representation in the Industrial Legislature, our chief duty is to point out the means by which a representation of the Industrial and Reformatory interests may be secured, in the forthcoming session of the Legislature. The qualification of representatives are as follows:

1. Its members shall be elected annually by bodies or association of men or women who subscribe to these principles, to wit; That all men are created equual; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain Inalienable Rights, among which are the right to Life and Liberty—to the use of such a portion of the Earth and the other element as shall be sufficient to provide them with the means of subsistence and comfort; to Educatioa and Paternal Protection from Society.

2. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male or female, above the age of 18 years, every such association being entitled to one representative, and every association being entitled to one additional representative for every additional 50 of its members: Provided always, that no association shall be entitled to any representation whatever in this Congress unless all its members shall have subscribed to all the principles under the 1st head of this article.

From which it will be seen that five or more persons, where no organization exists, may form themselves into an Association and be entitled to send one or more representatives, according to their numbers.

The first Industrial Legislature of New-Jersey, will meet at Trenton on the third Tuesday of January, (when the State Legislature will alse be in session,) and continue for seven days or more.—We strongly urge that Associations may be formed, and representatives elected accordingly, because in this way the needed measurs of Reform may be brought more immediately before the State Legislature and the people than they could be in the ordinary course of Leslation.

Two Weeks Later from California.

The steamship Cherokee, Capt. Windle, reached her wharf on Friday, shortly before 12 o'clock, bringing $2,000,000 in gold, and 361 passengers. $1,538,528 of the gold is on freight and the remainder in the hands of passengers. There has been an alarming increase of the cholera at San Francisco, Sacramento, and various other parts.

A destructive fire, which occasioned the loss of about $45,000 occurred at Sacramente Clty on the 9th of November. Amongst the houses destroyed were the New York Hotel, Eagle Hotel, St. Fracis Hotel, aud Galena House.

The Cherokee brings Jamaica papers to the 12th inst., from which we learn that the cholera is still raging upon the plantations in the interior, but has very much subsided in Kingston and Spanish Town

☞ A gentleman of this city informs us, that on returning home a day or two since, he discovered a large house cat engaged in sucking the breath of his infant, about five months old. Their mother had gone into the yard, leaving the child lying asleep in the cradle, and but for the opportune arrival of the father, the cat would certainly have destroyed the child's like. When discovered, the mouth of the cat was in close contact with that of the infant, and the convulsive breathing of the child told plainly how nearly the cat had accomplished her purpose. This was the third time she attempted it. We have frequently heard it asserted that cats often caused the death of infants, in the manner above described, but were led to believe it an "old woman's" tale. Our informant, however, assures us that he had every opportunity of ascertaining fully that the convulsive breathing of the child was produced by the sucking of its breath by the cat. We leave it for those who understand such matters, to decide.—Lancaster (Pa) Gazette.

THE REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF WAR is interesting and satisfactory. The present aggregate strength of the army is 12,326 men, tho' only 60 or 70 per ct. of that number are now actually in service and fit for duty. Of the army 7,796 are apportioned to Texas, New Mexico, California and Oregon, and 4,530 in the other States and Territories. Indian depredations are carried on with boldness in Texas and new Mexico, and an additional mounted force is reccommended. One hundred Indians remain in Florida and are a source of annoyance and danger to the whites in their vicinity, but great hopes are entertained that they soon will be induced to emigrate westward. The Secretary reccommends that a small force should be sent against the Sioux in Minesota to enforce the observance of their treaties with the Chipewas—states that Capt Stanbury's party to explore the region of great Salt Lake, has completed its labors—reccommends the formation of a retired list of officers of the army, and estimates the expense of the Quarter Master's Department for the year, ending June 30, 1852 at $4,250,000. The cost for transportation for the army during the year ending in June last was $1,900,000. The Secretary specifics the reason for the great outlays in his Department and expresses a hope, that under more favorable circumstances they will soon admit of a material reduction.

Post Office Report.

The mail routes measures 178,672 miles. The cost of transportation is $2.724,426 per year.—Six thousand five hundred postmasters were appointed during the year. The whole number of offices, June 30, 1850 was 1979. The revenue of the department for the past year, was $5,552,971. The expenditures were $340,000 less than the income. The department has a nett balance of $1,132,045. The increase of the postage receipts last year, ovor the former year, were 14 1-2 per cent. The Secretary reccommends that letter postage be three cents, if prepaid, for and distance; and five cents if not prepaid. Newspapers he thinks had better pay one cent for any distance.

The Treasury Report.

MR. CORWIN states the receipts and expenditures of the past, and estimates those of the coming year, as follows:

	1850.	1851.
Receipts,	$49.606,713	$54,312.594
Expenditures,	43,002,168	53,852,597
Balance,	$6,904,545	$458,997

The collectors of customs, and surveyors of interior ports, have been made depositories of the public money.

The public debt on the 1st December, 1849, was $64.753,515 - on the 30th of November last, it was $64.218,238. The cash receipts and expenditures for three years, actual and estimated, are given as follows:—

	1850.	1851	1852.
Receipts,	$43.774.848	$47.592.000,	$46.800.000
Expenditures,	39.355,268	53,737,547	48,124,993

Mr. CORWIN states that:

"I. A change in the present ad-valorem system which should impose specific duties upon all such as are necessarily subject to ad-valorem rates.

II. If the principle of specific duties shall not be adopted that the home valuation, instead of the foreign, should then be applied to all imports subject to advalorem duties.

III. If neither of the foregoing changes shall be thought proper, then it is deemed highly necesssary that the present rate of duties should be increased on a great variety of articles which it will be found could bear such increase, with the most salutary effects upon both trade and revenue."

EDUCATION,—As the Legislatures of the different States convenue, we are pleased to see in the messages of their Governor's a strong feeling manifested in behalf of an efficient Common School system. Ohio is probably next to the New England States in her provisions for such a system, but the Governor, in his message, urges material improvements, and cites Massachusetts as furnishing useful hints on the subject. The Legislature of our State will soon convene, and among the Reforms which it is expected to introduce, is a thorough revision of the present system, and the introduction of a more efficient one. It is a matter transcending all others in importance, and we hope to see a decided stand taken in its favor, and mesures adopted which will secure to every child the means of a common school education. A State owes no higher duty to her youth than to provide them with such, even though it should be necessary to pay taxes therefor. With schools within the reach of all, there will be less necessity for jails and prisons.—Paterson Guardian.

THE NEW JERSEY

HORSE POWER

Manufacturing Company.

HAVING improved, strengthened and perfected A. D. CRANE'S Patent Horse Power, are now prepared to furnish the same to all who may want.

This Power consists of an endless floor running over a series of pulleys, connected by cranks, without a rack or cog wheel about it: none being required from the fact, that the weight of the horse on the floor or platform causes sufficient adhesion between it and the pulleys to transmit all the power he is able to give. Also by this arrangement the chain is freed from the draught or strain (which cannot be avoided in any other Stall Power,) except what is reqired to pass the floor around. The requisite speed is obtained direct from the machine thereby avoiding a great amount of friction and wear, and lessening the liability to get out of order. They run so easily as to require less than an inch elevation to the foot. A self acting brake is attached by which the motion is kept regular and uniform even when the work is unsteady and irregular.

From the above description it is evident that this is the most simple and efficient Power known.

They are highly recommended by those who have used them, for driving Circular Saws, Lathes, Drilling Machines, Threshers, Grist Mills, Pumps, &c.

The Company have certificates to prove the above and also to show that the Two Horse Power will grind 40 bushels of Corn to Meal (with Platt's Patent Mill,) in a day of ten hours, making it an invaluable Power for the Southern planter as well as others.

It has taken Silver Medals at the different Fairs where exhibited, and the only one given to Horse Powers by the American Institute last fall.

They also furnish Threshers of the most approved construction.

Price of Single Power with Belt, $75; Double do. with Belt, $110: Thresher and Separator, $35.

HERNIA.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.—This disorder, of very frequennt occurrence, may be considered as arising through weakness of the abdominal walls, inducing an enlargement in the natural openings formed therein for the transmission of blood and other vessels; such openings being enlarged, permit the escape of bowels or other viscera of the abdomen, devolving hernial swellings or rupture, which most generally occur outwardly, as at the navel, groins and thighs.

The complaint is likely to happen at birth, and therefore should be carefully looked for by those having the charge of children, that it may be arrested and cured promptly. It also occurs at any period of life, to either sex, without regard to the condition or mode of living, and when found, should be attended to without delay—the final penalty being death, and that may be induced through strangulation at any momennt.

RUPTURES, are always to be treated with the surgical instruments known as Trusses and Supporters, and these require to be skillfully applied. With this view, the HULL'S TRUSS OFFICE, now established some thirty years, has under the various managers, presented to the public both male and female attendants to apply its instruments directly to the persons, which is preferable in all cases, and has also made improvement at different times, showing that advancement which study and practice only yield toward the relief of this malady.

With much pleasure the fact is now published, that recent improvements BUTLER'S TRUSS PADS have been made, and sufficiently tested upon numerous cases to warrant, through the cures already affected, their submission to the public, as being in adaptation and efficiency superior to any heretofore made known.

These improvements, recently patented, are now being applied at this office, 4 Vesey street, in cases of rupture, gravitation of the bowels, prolapsus uteri, prolapsus ani and piles.

The public may rely upon that care being made in their application, which will most likely tend to the final cure of the several complaints.

Hull's Truss Office, 4 Vesey street, Astor House, opposite St. Paul's Church, New-York.

FRED'K M BUTLER, Proprietor.

N. B.—The ladies' department is attended by a female qualified to fit the instruments, having so attended this office for many years.

Children trussed when only two weeks old, and invariably cured. [145is.

CHERRY PECTORAL:

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, ASTHMA, WHOOPING-COUGH AND CONSUMPTION.

The annals of medical science, affording as they do ample proof of the power and value of many medicinal agents, have furnished no examples to compare with the sultary effects produced by 'AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL."

The remarkable cures of diseases of the Lungs which have been realized by its use, attested as they are by many prominent professors and physicians in this and foreign lands, should encourage the afflicted to persevere with the strong assurance that the use of the "CHERRY PECTORAL" will relieve and ultimately cure them.

We present to the public unsolicited tstcimonials from some of the first men in our country, upon whose judgment and experience implicit confidence may be placed.

DR, PERKINS, President Vermont Med. College, one of the most learned and intelligent physicians in the country, considers it a "composition of rare excellencies for the cure of that formidable disease, Consumption."

NORWICH April 26, 1846.

DR. J. C. Ayer—Dear Sir:—Agreeable to the request of your agent, we will cheerfully state what we have known of the effects of your CHERRY PECTORAL, and they have been astonishing indeed. Mrs. Betsy Streeter had been afflicted with a severe and relentless cough, which reduced her very low; so low that little hope could be entertained of her recovery. Numerous remedies had been tried without effect before the CHERRY PECTORAL And that has cured her. George Watkinson Esq., had to our knowledge ben afflcted with Asthma, for eleven years, and grown yearly worse, until the CHERRY PECTORAL has now removed the disease and he is as free from any of its symptons as we are. The Rev. Mark Dane had been so severely attacked with the Bronchitis, as to disable him from his duties, and nothing had afforded him relief until I (Mr. Thorning) carried him a bottle of your PECTORAL, which cured him at once, and he now officiates as usual in his place.

These are three of the cases in which we have known it succesful, but never to fail. We have great pleasure in certifying to these facts; and are, respected sir, your humble servants.

REV. DAVID THORRING.
HON. JOSEPH BATTLES.

Among the distinguished authorities who have given their names to recommend CHERRY PECTORAL, as the best remedy that is known for the Affections of the Lungs, are "The Loudon Lancet," "Canadian Journal of Medical Science," "Boston Medical and Surgical Journal," "Charleston (S. C.) Medical Review," "New Jersey Medical Reporter," Prof. WEBSTER, Harvard College, Prof. BARTLETT, Transylvania University of Medicine, President PERKINS, Vermont Medical College, Dr. VALENTINE MOTT, New York City, PARKER CLEVELAND, Bowdoin College, Prof. BUTTERFIELD, Willoughby College, Ohio, Prof. BRAITHWAITE, Leeds (Eng.) Medical School, Sir RICHARD KANE, Queen's College, Ireland, Prof. Rosenbaum, Leipsic.

The public have but to know the virtues and astonishing success of the "CHERRY PECTORAL," in curing diseases of the Lungs, when they will feel secure from these dangers, whenever this remedy can be obtained.

MECHANICAL MEDICINE.

Dr. Banning, formerly of this city, asks to announce that he has returned to 341 Broadway; for consultation and management of weakneses of the vocal, pulmonary, digestive, nervous, spinal and female systems; and also of the drooping, languor and physical deformities, which are so destructive of both health and beauty at the present day.

As these and kindred maladies are usually the result of a violation of the laws of physical organization, he will treat them chiefly by those exercises, mechanical appliances and reformatory habits of body, in conjunction with hydropathy galvanism and other discoveries of the day, which, united with the cooperative efforts of the subject, are calculated to relieve and restore the energies of the suffering and neglected organs.

Having spent several years in traveling for investigation and practical experiment on the subject, he has, at length, greatly improved and multiplied his surgical and mechanical appliances for the purpose. In addition to his new supports for female and spinal weaknesses, are some combining the properties of a universal hernial truss and an effective general support, with which he challenges cases of general debility, constipation, piles and prolapsus, ani, leucorrhea, prolapsus uteri and every variety of hernia.

The distinctive peculiarity of these devices is, that they do not weaken or restrain the motions or growth of the suffering parts, but act imitatively and concordantly with the mathematical genius of the body's forces. Hence, by a most comfortable and gentle pressure, they at once give great support and render the oppressed system eligible to its own restoration.

Feeble invalids coming from a distance will command prompt and faithful attention.

For more definite information, see his revised edition of "Animal Mechanics," and also his circular, which will be sent gratuitously when requested.

His improved body-braces, spinal supports and supporter trusses applied at his office (341 Broadway) and to be had wholesale and retail- City and country physicians and druggists are invited to call and examine Office hours from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. [121.

MARRIAGE:

WHY SO OFTEN UNHAPPY.

THE CAUSES AND THE REMEDY!

MANY and many a wife endures years of bodily suffering and of mental anguish, prostrate and helpless, embittering her life, that of her husband, and hazarding the future welfare of her children, arising from causes which, if known, would have spared the suffering, the anguish to the wife, and to the husband embarrassments and pecuniary difficulties having their origin in the mind being weighed down and harassed in consequence of the sickness of the companion of his bosom.

How important that the causes should be known to every wife, to every husband, that the dreadful and harrowing consequences to the health and happiness of both may be avoided! Life is too short and health too precious to admit any portion of the one to be spent without the full enjoyment of the other. The timely possession of a little work entitled as follows has been the means of saving the health and the life of thousands, as over copies have been sold since the first edition was issued.

The author has been induced to advertise it by the urgent and pressing request of those who have been indebted to its publication for all they hold dear (that all may have an opportunity of obtaining it), and who have favored him with thousands of letters of encomium, some of which are annexed to the advertisement.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

Twentieth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, $1.00.

THIS WORK IS INTENDED ESPECIALLY FOR THE MARRIED, or those contemplating marriage, as it discloses important secrets which should be known to them particularly.

Here, every female—the wife, the mother—the one either budding into womanhood, or the one in the decline of years, in whom nature contemplates an important change—can discover the causes, symptoms, and the most efficient remedies and most certain mode of cure, in every complaint to which her sex is subject.

The revelations contained in its pages have proved a blessing to thousands, as the innumerable letters received by the author (which he is permitted by the writers to publish) will attest.

SICKLY AND UNHAPPY WIVES.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Dayton, O.

"DAYTON, May 1, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU—My Dear Sir: 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion,' for which I enclosed one dollar to your address, came safely to hand. I would not have troubled you with these few lines, but that I am impelled by a sense of gratitude, for myself and wife, to give utterance to our sincere and heartfelt emotions.

"My wife has been perceptibly sinking for some three years or more, in consequence of her great anguish and suffering some months before and during confinement; every successive one more and more debilitated and prostrated her, putting her life in imminent danger, and which was, on the last occasion, despaired of. I supposed that this state of things was inevitable, and resigned myself to meet the worst. At this time (now about two months) I heard your book highly spoken of, as containing some matters reaching my case. On its receipt and perusal, I can not express to you the relief it afforded my distressed mind and the joy its pages imparted to my wife, on learning that the great discovery of M. M. Desomeaux provided a remedy. It opened a prospect to me which I little conceived was possible. No pecuniary consideration can ever repay the obligations I am under to you for having been the means of imparting to us the matters contained in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' But for this, ere another year would have passed over my head, in all human probability my wife would have been in her grave, and my children left motherless."

Competence and Health.

"LANCASTER, PA., Oct. 24, 1847.

"MY DEAR SIR: I know you will have the kindness to bear with me in encroaching upon your time, while I acknowledge (in behalf of myself and wife) the obligations we feel ourselves under to you in having made known certain matters, contained in your most invaluable 'Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' It has been worth its weight in gold to me. If I express myself rather warmly, you will see that I can not do so too warmly, when I inform you of the extent to which I have, through it, been benefited. I will state my situation when I obtained your book through the merest curiosity I look upon it as one of the most fortunate events of my life. I had been married some ten years, and was the father of seven children. I was long struggling unceasingly, to the end that I might gain a moderate competency, but the results of my utmost exertions at the end left me about where I was at the beginning of each year; and that only, with the most stinted economy, sufficing with barely the necessaries of life. Finally, this constant effort was beginning to have its effect upon my health: I felt less capable to endure its continuance, while I felt the necessity of perseverance.

"This constant, unceasing struggle on my part was imperative, in consequence of the prostrated condition of my wife (with occasional intermission) for six years, much of the time confined to her bed, and of course incapable of taking the charge and management of household affairs. Her condition arose from causes of which I was ignorant. Oh! what would I have given had I the six years to live over again! What would my wife have given to have been spared the long days and still longer nights prostrate on a bed of sickness!—all of which would have been avoided, had I then seen a copy of 'THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION.'"

From a Physician.

DANGEROUS DELIVERIES,

OBSTRUCTIONS, IRREGULARITIES, &C.

How many are suffering from obstruction or irregularities peculiar to the female system, which undermine their health, the effects of which they are ignorant, and for which their delicacy forbids seeking medical advice! How many suffer from prolapsus uteri (falling of the womb), or from fluor-albus (weakness, debility, &c., &c.)! How many are in constant agony for many months preceding confinement! How many have difficult if not dangerous deliveries, and whose lives are jeoparded during such time, will find in its pages the means of prevention, amelioration, and relief!

Extract from a Letter.

To those just Married.—"Had I known!"

"PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29, 1847.

"DR. A. M. MAURICEAU: Had I known of the important matters treated of in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion' some years ago, how much misery I might have escaped! I have suffered years from causes which you point out in your book, without knowing what to do. I obtained a copy, and found my case treated of. I trust every female will avail herself of the information contained in its pages."

Letters are daily received of this character, unnecessary to present.

To those yet unmarried, but contemplating marriage, or perhaps hesitating as to the propriety of incurring the responsibilities attendant upon it, the importance of being possessed of the revelations contained in these pages, so intimately involving their future happiness, can not be appreciated.

It is, of course, impracticable to convey more fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage; neither is it necessary, since it is every one's duty to become possessed of knowledge whereby the sufferings to which a wife, a mother, or a sister, may be subject, can be obviated.

FOR FEMALES AND MALES

Dr. Lazetti's Juno Cordial, or Protective Elixir.

This is the only actual remedy ever discovered for impetency, Genital Debility, Nocturnal Emissions, and all diseases occasioned by certain secret habits; and many of the nostrums recently recommended for the same complaints are worthless imitations which its unrivalled excellence, fame and popularity have brought into the market. The Medical Faculty of Europe and the United States are unanimous in their recommendations of the Juno Cordial and have not given their sanction in a single instance that has been authenticated, to any compound for the same purposes. The nature of the maladies relieved by the Juno Cordial are generally such as to leave the publication of certificates of cures out of the question, or the proprietor could produce a host of the most conclusive testimony to show that the great reputation that it enjoys was not accidentally obtained, but is firmly based upon its positive, and apparently miraculous virtues. In all directions are to be found the happy parents of healthy offspring, who would not have been so, but for this extraordinary preparption. And it is equally potent in the many diseases for which it is recommended. Objection has been naturally made to the price of the Juno Cordial, because the trash that has been thrown into the market in opposition to it is sold cheaper; but the fact is, the Cerdial cannot be afforded for less, and ought to be much dearer, as many of the ingredients which compose it are among the costliest things in nature; whereas the others are made up of cheap drugs, worth but little in money, and less in merit. We assure the reader that the utmost reliance may be placed on the Juno Cordial in the cure of the maladies mentioned above, and also those that follow, viz: Loss of Muscular Energy, Physical Lassitude and General Prostration, Irritability, and all Nervous Affections, Indigestion, Sluggishness of the Liver, Gleet, Lucorrhoea or Whites, and Flour Albus and every disease in any way connected with the disorder of the Procreative Functions—in all of which it will afford almost immediate relief, and, if used as directed, is almost certain to produce a positive and permanent cure. Persons about to marry, if conscious of any weakness or disability of a certain nature, should take this Cordial, as it will infallibly restore health and vigor in a brief period, and where want of offspring is a cause of regret, if recourse be had to it the most beneficial results may be anticipated with confidence. It is of priceless value to those without offspring. It has taken the precedence in Italy and will in all other countries where it may become known.

It also possesses the unrivalled qualities of curing incipient Consumption, and I have administered it with great success to patients who have sought our delightful climate for the restoration of their health and the result is that a medicine has been added to the catalogue for the cure of insipient consumption.

To spread wide the blessings of this medicine, I have appointed Messrs. Judson & Co., of the City of New York, in the United States of America, my sole Agents for its sale; and none can be genuine unless it comes through them, and their signature is on the weapper.
